Introduction

The common problems of English language structure have to be overcome by all students, and the difficulties they find are similar in all parts of the world. Regional differences can always be dealt with by the teacher, who should be aware of the particular problems of his students. The following general principles are self-evident:

1 All students want to speak, write and read the normal accepted English of today.

2 This can only be achieved by constant practice of existing forms, with some rational explanation of the grammatical devices employed, wherever this is possible.

The exercises in this book have been devised and revised over a period of many years, and are the results of practical experience with classes of foreign adults, including students of Latin, Teutonic, Slavonic, and Arabic mother tongues. All the exercises have been tried out and found practicable, and I hope they will prove useful and valuable to many other teachers of English.

HOW THE BOOK SHOULD BE USED

This book is an attempt to answer the foreign student's grammatical problems empirically, and to give him a large number of appropriate exercises to practise the acceptable forms. An English schoolboy does 'grammar' as an analytical exercise, but the foreign student needs to learn the mechanics of the language. Many existing grammar books were designed originally for the English schoolboy, and even a large number of those that are intended for foreigners have not managed to free themselves entirely from the purely analytical point of view.

Teachers will find in this book a great deal that is unconventional, perhaps even revolutionary, for it does not pretend to tell the student what he OUGHT to SAY in English, but tries to show him what IS ACTUALLY SAID. Many of the exercises are based on the results of personal 'structure-counts' – in imitation of 'word-counts' – carried out while listening to the speech of educated English people over considerable periods. A great deal of thought has been given to the use of tenses and auxiliary verbs, and a proportionately large amount of space devoted to them. The division of the exercises into Elementary, Intermediate, and Advanced is a rough guide to their suitability for various classes. The approximate grading is as follows:

Elementary: Up to 1½ or 2 years of English.

Intermediate: Up to about the standard demanded for the University of Cambridge Lower Certificate in English.*

Advanced: Up to and beyond the University of Cambridge Proficiency in English examination.

People may ask why the book has not been divided accordingly into three parts. But the only advantage of this would be an apparent tidiness, for experience has shown that grouping the exercises by subject is far more practical. An immediate advantage of this is that most cross-references in the notes will be found within a page or two of the exercise being done; whereas with a 'tidy' division of the book into three graded sections such important references would send the teacher and students flying from one end of the book to the other; or in order to avoid this, the notes would have to be duplicated wastefully in each section. A less apparent advantage is a psychological one for the student. Any teacher of foreign adults knows that their standard can only be very roughly graded. An 'intermediate' students' class, for instance, finds it very comforting if the 'elementary' exercise on a point they are not very familiar with is found only a page or so back; and it is very encouraging to be told that one has done an exercise very well, and instead of leaving out the next exercise, marked 'advanced', to be allowed to have a shot at that also.

The vocabulary is graded as well as the structures used, but advanced exercises do not necessarily contain difficult words. Emphasis is on form throughout, and as much variety as possible has been introduced without concealing the structure to be practised among a welter of unnecessarily complicated words. The material is arranged in rough structural groups, the subject-matter and grading of the exercises being linked together within each group. The index at the back is very full, and for the sake of simplicity references are all to exercise numbers instead of pages.

The purpose of this book is to provide ample material for teaching classes of adult students. As the exercises are designed primarily for oral practice, teachers may make whatever changes they think necessary if they wish to use some of them for written work. Much of the material in the notes will be familiar, and so no space has been wasted in needless elaboration. Many ideas appear for the first time in a form that can be practised, e.g. fairly and rather, the unreal past, certain response devices, etc., etc. Some ideas are new, or frankly unorthodox, and here the teacher's notes are more fully set out. For example, in order to help promote a clearer and less clumsy spoken style, which and whom have been rigorously excluded from the Defining Relative, and end-prepositions insisted on; but end-prepositions do not appear in the Non-defining Relatives. The bias towards speech structure has made me banish whom altogether from Interrogatives. Teachers who still have a liking for 'To whom do you think you are talking?' or 'For whom do you take me?' may reinstate the word where they think fit! The future tense is approached from a new angle, notionally instead of formally, bringing several familiar speech devices into a rational form for the first time.

* From 1975 the First Certificate in English.

Since ninety per cent of this book consists of practice for the student, the notes should be developed where necessary into appropriate blackboard work prior to working through the exercise.

Cyril and Maisie of the Intermediate exercises are, needless to say, quite fictitious. I hope no zealous teacher ever asks for a character sketch of Cyril or Maisie from his students - I shudder to think of the consequences.

Grateful acknowledgements are due to several people. Firstly, to my wife, who did invaluable work copying, adding to, compiling from and checking the original manuscript, and without whose help this book would probably never have been completed. Ideas and advice were freely given by some of my colleagues in the British Council, notably Mr A. C. Cawley, Mr David Hicks, Mr Norman Whitworth, and Mr Rylands. Nor should I forget the very thankless task of Miss Porteous, of the Egypt office of the British Council, who typed out the hundreds of manuscript pages of the first draft. My sincere thanks are due to all of them.

1 Countables and Uncountables

1.1 Elementary

Nouns naming things that we cannot count (UNCOUNTABLE or MASS nouns) have no indefinite article, and usually no plural.

- 22 — knife is made of — metal.
- 23 — cow eats — grass in — summer.
- 24 I like — jam on — piece of — bread.
- 25 I can write — letter in — ink or with — pencil.

1.4

Elementary

UNCOUNTABLE nouns, and COUNTABLE nouns in the plural, are preceded by some when 'a certain quantity, or number' is implied.

Bread is good for us. (All bread, in general.)
Give me some bread. (A certain quantity.)

● Add a, an, or some where necessary:

- 1 — table has four legs.
- 2 We can write on — paper or on — blackboard.
- 3 — apple has — sweet taste.
- 4 — fruit is very good to eat.
- 5 Please give me — milk.
- 6 There is — dirt on this plate and — dirty mark on the tablecloth.

- 17 — garden usually has — flowers in it.

- 18 I like — music very much.
 19 — house made of — stone can be very pretty.
 20 There is — pencil and — writing-paper.

Intermediate Some nouns are COUNTABLE or UNCOUNTABLE according to context.

* * *

- Say which of the following words take the indefinite article; notice which words can be either countable or uncountable; make sentences with these.

air	darkness	breath	literature
soup	bacon	class	artist
marmalade	sunshine	book	foreigner
friendship	camel	sleep	beef
daytime	pin	music	tennis
shop	dirt	hair	mutton
smoke	butter	mountain	help
news	truth	apple	dress
corner	poetry	television	step
fish	vacuum	poem	rain
cheese	drink	ice	sand
glass	clothing	grass	ink
sea	onion	coffee	stupidity
storm	sky	garlic

Can you suggest why garlic is an apparent exception. Why is it so rarely a countable? Consider other words like it; mint, celery, rhubarb, etc. What have they in common?

1.6
Intermediate Exclamations with What a — ! (countables singular)
What — ! (plural, and uncountables)

* * *

- Complete the following exclamations:

- 1 — good idea!
 2 — grand ideas you have!
 3 — horrible song!
 4 — awful news!
 5 — charming girl!
 6 — lovely eyes she has!
 7 — silly mistake to make!
 8 — hard sentences these are!
 9 — clever student you are!

- 10 — beautiful music they are playing!
 11 — fun your friend Maisie is!
 12 — strange name to give a dog!
 13 — funny thing to say!
 14 — good meat this is!
 15 — pity Cyril couldn't come!

1.7
Elementary

A(n) is used for any one example of a COUNTABLE noun. The plural of this is some. It means 'an unknown number of' the things named by that noun. We prefer to use There is (are, was, etc.) to introduce this idea instead of the simple verb to be. (See also Exercise 50.1.)

There is a broken chair in the corner of the room.
There were some books on this table yesterday.
There'll be a picnic in the forest next Friday.

The DEFINITE ARTICLE the is used whenever the noun is identified for us as 'one special, known example' (or 'certain known examples' in the plural).

A man and a boy were going along a dusty road. The man was pushing the boy along the road on a toy bicycle. The bicycle belonged to the boy's sister ...

- Supply a(n), the or some where necessary:
- 1 — children love — fruit.
 2 — child ran across — street.
 3 It is pleasant to read — book in — afternoon.
 4 There is — garden behind — house.
 5 I have — pen and — pencil.
 6 — tea is very hot, I must put — milk in it.
 7 — postman has just put — letter under — door.
 8 Give me — knife and — small spoon.
 9 — cat loves — milk.
 10 Mary wants — doll with — blue eyes.
 11 You must give him — food and — cup of coffee.
 12 — car made — loud noise.
 13 — vegetables are good for — health.
 14 — girls do not often wear — hats.
 15 — door of — garage is broken.
 16 There are — beautiful flowers in — park.
 17 I want — glass of — milk.

- 18 — student at — back of — class is reading — newspaper.
 19 It is not good to smoke — cigarette before — meal.
 20 — page of — book is torn.

1.8

Intermediate

See Exercise 1.7.

Where there can be only 'one certain' example that is meant, we normally use the. (The sun, sky, ceiling, station, etc.) An important group of common nouns (mostly names of places) are used WITHOUT an article in phrases closely associated with their special purpose or function, but WITH an article in a more general sense.

He went to bed (to sleep). He went to the bed (approached it).

He's at school (learning). I'll meet you at the school.

The ship's in (dry) dock. We walked round the dock(s).

Put it on paper (=write it). There's a mark on the paper.

And similarly with: prison, college, hospital, market, church, harbour (port), barracks, deck, (under) canvas, (at) sea, by train, and a few others.

Compare the following:

There's a horse in the garden. (any single horse)

Horses are animals. (all)

Perhaps we'll see some horses there. (a certain number)

The horses are ready. (definite horses we know about)

* * *

● Supply a(n), some, or the where necessary:

- 1 There is — fly in — lemonade.
- 2 — youngest brother is at — school now. If you go to — school by — bus, you will be just in — time to meet him.
- 3 — birds can fly very high in — sky.
- 4 — book on that shelf is — interesting one about — history.
- 5 — ship you were speaking about has just come into — port. She has been at — sea for — long time. Look! — captain has just come on — deck!

- 6 It is pleasant to play — game of — tennis on — summer afternoon.
- 7 He makes — toys in — evening.
- 8 — butcher opposite — library always sells — good meat.
- 9 They have sent Cyril to — prison for hitting — policeman on — head. I'll go to — prison tomorrow to take him — books.
- 10 — donkeys are — stupid animals.
- 11 Put — butter on — potatoes.
- 12 I am fond of — apples with — cheese.
- 13 — honesty is — best of all — virtues.
- 14 He took up — swimming as — sport — last year.
- 15 He always smokes — cigarette with — cup of — coffee.
- 16 I should like — house in — country.
- 17 We had — dinner at — new restaurant — last night.
- 18 Let's get — strawberries for — tea.
- 19 Take — umbrella with you to — office. It may rain.
- 20 — car is ready now.
- 21 Jack and Jill went up — hill to fetch — pail of — water.
- 22 Do you prefer — book of — poetry or — stories of adventure?
- 23 I want — tin of — peaches, — sugar, and — pound of — raspberry jam.
- 24 — clouds over — sea are lovely today.
- 25 Maisie travelled in — second-class carriage with — Americans.

2 Elementary Negatives and Questions

2.1
Elementary

Questions by simple inversion; negative with not. Use short form of negative for oral exercise. (See also Exercise 2.2.)

- 18 You write to them every day.
- 19 He lives in this house.
- 20 She feels well.

3 Possessives

3.1

Elementary

Explain my - mine, your - yours, etc., if necessary.

* * *

● ALL BOOKS SHUT.

- 1 Is this my, your, her, our, etc. — paper, book, girl, etc.?
- 2 Is this book, paper, hat, parcel, girl, coat, etc. — mine, yours, his, theirs, etc.?
- 3 Whose is this?
- 4 Mix the three above types.

3.2

Intermediate

● Add the missing possessives:

- 1 This doesn't look like — book; it must be —.
- 2 Tell him not to forget — ticket; she mustn't forget —, either.
- 3 "Tell me, isn't that — old car over there?"
'Oh no. It was — last week, but I sold it to — friend Maisie.'
- 4 It was very good chocolate, but I've eaten all —; can you give me a little piece of — ?
- 5 They have two of — houses in this street, and the house on the corner is also —.
- 6 I see that he has lost — pencil; perhaps you can lend him —.
- 7 — is a very bad one, what's — like? (all persons)
- 8 You can take — and give me —.
- 9 John has come to see me; — father and — were school friends.
- 10 We've taken — share; has she taken — ?

3.3

Intermediate

The type He's a friend of mine (=one of my friends).

* * *

● Add the possessives:

- 1 I saw a cousin of — in the street this morning.
- 2 You said you would introduce me to a friend of — who had a car to sell.
- 3 He wants you to return a book of — you borrowed last week.
- 4 They told me to call on a friend of — in Paris.
- 5 An uncle of — has just crashed his car on the motorway.
- 6 They suggested my friend Maisie should try massage; I think it was a good idea of —.
- 7 Let's collect some friends of — and some of —, and have a big party.
- 8 My friend Cyril met a friend of — at the party.
- 9 She wants to know if you've seen a book of — lying about somewhere.
- 10 A great friend of — has just told us that she's going to marry a millionaire.

4 —self

4.1

Intermediate

Uses of self as reflexive or emphatic. The idiomatic (all) by —self meaning 'quite alone' or 'without any help'.

* * *

● Fill in the blank spaces with possessives or self-forms:

- 1 That's not —, it's —; I bought it —.
- 2 It was given to me by the queen —.
- 3 She makes all — own clothes —.
- 4 I cut — with a knife the other day.
- 5 It's —; they bought it — (and all other persons).
- 6 We enjoyed — very much at the air show.
- 7 She has made — very unpopular.
- 8 I don't think he'll be able to manage by —.
- 9 Why is Maisie sitting here all by — in the dark?
- 10 You must all look after — on — trip to England.
(Reflexive)

- 11 Cyril says the hat is not —, although it's just like the one he bought — last week.
- 12 One must remember to behave — in — own house just as well as in other people's.
- 13 I always have to remind — that this grammar book is — and not —; one day I'll take it away with — own books by mistake.
- 14 Have we got to do it all by —?
- 15 This book is —; I wrote — name in it —.
(Do No. 15 with all persons.)

5 Adverb Order

5.1

Intermediate

Order of adverbials is very elastic in English, and many shades of emphasis, etc., can be expressed by a change of position. The following represents the normal order of adverbials.

1 Except for FREQUENCY ADVERBS, see Section 25, and SPECIAL ADVERBS (only, just, etc.) the normal position of adverbials is at the end of a sentence, in the order MANNER, PLACE and TIME.

He spoke well at the debate this morning.

2 WARNING — Students, especially those speaking Latin and Slavonic languages, are prone to the mistake of separating verb and object by an adverb ('I speak well English', 'I write quickly my homework', etc.).

3 With verbs of movement, the adverbial of PLACE acts as a kind of object notionally, and comes immediately after the verb.

He went to the station by taxi.

4 The adverbial of TIME is often placed at the very beginning of a sentence; this is particularly useful when there are many adverbials in the sentence. This is a more emphatic position for time adverbials, but the emphasis is only slight. A useful rough-and-ready rule is that time adverbials may come at either end of the sentence, but not in the middle.

The more particular expressions of time come before the more general.

He was born at six o'clock on Christmas morning in the year 1822.

(5.1)

- Use the adverbials in their correct place:
 - 1 She went (to school, at 10 o'clock).
 - 2 He was born (in the year 1923, at 10 a.m., on June 14th).
 - 3 She drinks coffee (every morning, at home).
 - 4 Our teacher spoke to us (in class, very rudely, this morning).
 - 5 I saw my friend off (at 7 o'clock, at the station, this morning).
 - 6 He loved her (all his life, passionately).
 - 7 Cyril was working (at his office, very hard, all day yesterday).
 - 8 Maisie speaks English (very well); but she writes French (badly).
 - 9 They stayed (all day, quietly, there).
 - 10 I like coffee (in the morning, very much).
 - 11 The train arrived (this morning, late).
 - 12 He played (at the Town Hall, last night, beautifully, in the concert).
 - 13 I shall meet you (outside your office, tomorrow, at 2 o'clock).
 - 14 We are going (for a week, to Switzerland, on Saturday).
 - 15 Let's go (tonight, to the pictures).

6 Pronouns

6.1 Elementary

A number of verbs have a DIRECT OBJECT (naming a thing) and an INDIRECT OBJECT (to or for a person). The usual pattern is VERB + PERSON + THING, without a preposition:

Show Mary the book.

If we wish to give more emphasis to the person, we can put it after the direct object, WITH the preposition:

Show the book to Mary. (That is, not to anyone else.)

The verbs explain and say always have this second pattern.

* * *

- Replace the expressions in bold type by pronouns, using the word-order pattern without to or for:
 - 1 John gave the book to Henry.
 - 2 Jane bought some sweets for her mother.
 - 3 Tell the answer to the student.
 - 4 My sister and I told a story to my little brother.
 - 5 Alec and Mary gave some chocolates to my sister and me.
 - 6 You and I must give a present to John.
 - 7 John will find her coat for Mary.
 - 8 Henry and Alec gave a cake to me and my wife.
 - 9 Give this one to the baby.
 - 10 My friend and I told John about our journey last week.

6.2

Elementary

- Choose the correct word:
 - 1 We/Us all went with themselves/them.
 - 2 They knew all about my friend and I/me.
 - 3 Mr Jones and he/him/himself came last night.
 - 4 I came here with John and her/she.
 - 5 Basil gave Harry and I/me an ice-cream, and then we went to the pictures with he/him and his friend.
 - 6 He told Mary and me/I to go with he/him and his mother.
 - 7 An old man asked my friend and I/me what the time was.
 - 8 Go and see he/him and his friend.
 - 9 There are some letters for you and me/I.
 - 10 Go with John and her/she to visit they/them.

Intermediate CASE

1 When a pronoun is not felt to be the active subject of a sentence, it is normally found in the objective form. This is sometimes called the DISJUNCTIVE OR SEPARATED PRONOUN. (Compare the French C'est moi, etc.)

Who's there? It's only me!

That's him over there!

If I were her, I wouldn't listen to him.

(Showing a photo) . . . and this is me (standing) in front of the Louvre.

2 Between and let require the objective case after them.

Let him have something to eat.

There was an argument between him and me.

- (6.3)
- Choose the right words:
 - 1 This island belongs to we/us who were here first.
 - 2 'Who's there?' 'It's only me/I and my friend Maisie.'
 - 3 That's she/her. It's she/her that we saw at the scene of the murder.
 - 4 Let Cyril and I/me play a duet.
 - 5 There's a friendly agreement between Mr Tumbrill and me/I.
 - 6 What would you do if you were he/him?
 - 7 Let you and me/I be friends!
 - 8 'Who did that?' 'Please, sir, it wasn't I/me!'
 - 9 She rang me up this morning and asked my friend and I/me to tea.
 - 10 Well, let's pretend for a moment! I'll be her/she and you be I/me. Now imagine there's a quarrel between her/she and I/me. How would you settle it?

6.4 Advanced

Notice the following two points from Exercise 6.3:

- 1 Objective case preferred in predicatives.
- 2 Pronoun controlled by its own clause, and not affected by a relative clause following.

Give it to them that (or who) understand such things.

But relatives sometimes influence the case of the preceding pronoun. Note the effect of RELATIVE ATTRACTION in such sentences as the following:

It was she that went out just now, wasn't it?

It was her you meant, wasn't it?

Than and As. These are really conjunctions, and the case after them varies accordingly.

I like you more than she (does).

I like you more than her (= than I like her).

But in spoken English, sentence stress prevents confusion, the objective case is frequently heard, as if both these words were prepositions.

You're much cleverer than her.

The objective case is invariably used, even in writing, if the pronoun is further qualified by both or all.

He is cleverer than us all.

A stone is heavy and the sand weighty; but a fool's wrath is heavier than them both (Bible).

Such as is usually followed by the subjective case, as the verb be can easily be supplied. There is some doubt when a preposition is present.

I wouldn't give it to a man such as he? him?
or, I wouldn't give it to such a man as him.

But, Except. The reverse process has taken place with these two words. They were originally prepositions taking the objective case, just as the very similar apart from still does; but nowadays, especially in written English, there is a very strong tendency to use them as conjunctions.

There was no one there except me.

(Historically correct; normal spoken form.)

Whence all but he had fled.

(Historically incorrect; normal literary form.)

SUMMING UP. It seems that the general practice in English, especially spoken English, is to use a pronoun in the subjective case only when there is a strong feeling that it is the real active subject of the sentence. All isolated, predicative and exclamatory uses of pronouns prefer the objective.

What! Me fight a big chap like him? Not me!
Fancy him dying so young; and him only fifty!

The following quotation from Shakespeare is of interest:

Think what is best; that best I wish for thee;
This wish I have, then ten times happy me.

- Choose the right pronoun:
 - 1 We're much stronger than they/them at football.
 - 2 Just between you and me/I, it's him/he I'm afraid of, not she/her.
 - 3 Let we/us all go for a walk except she/her, since she/her is so tired.
 - 4 I know you're bigger than I/me, in fact you're bigger than we/us both, but we're not afraid of you.
 - 5 You're as tall as I/me, so you can easily ride my bike, but you're much fatter than either I/me or my brother, so we can't lend you a sports jacket.
 - 6 Do you think he/him is stronger than I/me?
 - 7 How can you talk to a woman such as she/her?
 - 8 It's only we/us : I/me and my friend Maisie!

- 9 Which is your friend Cyril? What he/him! I thought he was a big chap like I/me.
- 10 Help I/me carry she/her; she/her has fainted.
- 11 Nobody could answer except I/me.
- 12 I think you're prettier than they/them all. Let's go for a walk, just you and I/me.
- 13 What! I/me accept a present from they/them? I/me never even speak to they/them.
- 14 It was he/him I was talking about.
- 15 Damned be he/him that first cries 'Hold, enough!' (Shakespeare.)
- 16 I thought it was they/them who went with she/her.
- 17 Was it we/us they were talking about? I expect so, since it was we/us who pushed the old man in the river. Still, he began the quarrel, not we/us.
- 18 It is she/her that likes sugar in her tea, not I/me.
- 19 I/me learn shorthand! Not I/me! I/me should hate it.
- 20 What! I/me angry! Surely it's he/him with the red nose you mean, not I/me.

7 Possessive Case

7.1 Elementary

Proper names in —s normally have 's [iz], unless they are classical.

Charles's, St James's, Archimedes' Law, Phoebus' chariot

But less usual names in —s often follow the classical model:
Pears' soap, Keats' (or Keats's) poetry

Compounds denoting one idea are treated as single words:
Jacob and Esau's quarrel; Gilbert and Sullivan's operas; but Henry's and Herbert's books, or Henry's books and Herbert's

● Put into the possessive:

- 1 The father of James
- 2 The clothes of the boys

- 3 The coat of the boy
- 4 The club of the women
- 5 The fur of the fox
- 6 The shop of Jones Brothers
- 7 The orders of the Commander-in-Chief
- 8 The glass of someone else¹
- 9 The name of my sister-in-law
- 10 The poems of Keats
- 11 The Park of St James
- 12 The countries of Caesar and Cleopatra
- 13 The wedding of William and Mary
- 14 The hats of ladies
- 15 The toys of my children

7.2

Intermediate

Read notes to Exercise 7.1.

Words in apposition: here the last word in the group usually takes the 's.

Hicks the plumber's daughter

(Compare: Betty, the plumber's daughter)

Of may replace almost any possessive case. It is useful for avoiding a complicated series of —'s.

'I am my friend's sister's second child's godmother'

although it is a fantastic example hardly likely to occur, is better expressed

I'm godmother to the second child of my friend's sister.

Of is the normal possessive for inanimate objects. Exceptions are certain accepted idioms, mostly of time or measure: I live a stone's throw from here; out of harm's way; three days' holiday; I'm at my wits' end.

● Put into the possessive:

- 1 The typist of Mr Sims
- 2 The new tie of my friend Cyril
- 3 The War of a Hundred Years
- 4 She's done the work of a whole day.
- 5 In the time of a week or two
- 6 The crown of the King of England
- 7 The birthday of the President of Chile

¹ For else, see also Section 37.

- 8 The parents of all the other boys
- 9 The famous shop of Fortnum and Mason
- 10 The houses of Henry and Mr Jones
- 11 During the holiday of two weeks of my friend Maisie
- 12 A wrist-watch of a lady or gentleman
- 13 At (the shop of) Murdoch, the bookseller
- 14 The army of Cyrus
- 15 He's the favourite of the boss.

Here is an old puzzle:

'The son of Pharaoh's daughter was the daughter of Pharaoh's son.'

It makes sense only if we read daughter-of-Pharaoh as one unit having the same meaning as Pharaoh's daughter.

Pharaoh (ruler of Ancient Egypt) is pronounced ['fæərəu].

8 Introduction to Interrogatives who? what? and which?

8.1 Elementary

Interrogatives and relatives are dealt with as a group (Sections 44, 45), but a preliminary exercise or two, merely to practise the question-words, should come quite early. This exercise is restricted to the present tense and interrogatives in the subjective case. The uses of who? what? and which? should be clearly demonstrated on the black-board.

* * *

- Add a question-word to the following questions:

- 1 — is your name?
- 2 — is that pretty girl?
- 3 — is your telephone number?
- 4 Here are the books! — is yours?
- 5 — is coming to tea?
- 6 — trees grow in Egypt?
- 7 — is yours, the orange or the banana?
- 8 — colour is it?
- 9 — makes your shoes?

- 10 — makes tea sweet?
- 11 — wants a piece of bread?
- 12 — piece of bread is yours?
- 13 — is the name of your baker?
- 14 — is his shop, the one at the end of the road, or the one near the post office?
- 15 — understands this exercise?
- 16 — of you understand this exercise?
- 17 — is the answer to my question?
- 18 — knows the answer?
- 19 — teaches you English?
- 20 — are you learning now?

9 Telling the Time

9.1 Elementary

Half past; (a) quarter to; ten (minutes) past. The word minutes is usually omitted if a multiple of five is used.

* * *

- Say the following times:

11.09 — 9.30 — 10.15 — 3.45 — 6.10 — 7.25 — 11.35 —
12.45 — 1.05 — 2.50 — 6.45 — 6.40 — 4.56 — 12.00.

10 too and enough

10.1 Elementary

Too. An adverb of excess; with to + infinitive and/or for + (pro)noun.

This soup is very hot; I can't drink it.

This soup is too hot (for me) to drink.*

That's a lot of money; a book like that shouldn't cost so much.

That's too much money for a book like that.

(* Expect the mistake: 'This soup is too hot for me to drink it.' The infinitive, even of a transitive verb, has no object if this would represent the same person or thing as the subject of the main verb, be, seem, etc.)

(See also Exercises 38.3, 38.4.)

(10.1)

- Remake these sentences, using too:
- 1 It's very cold; we can't go out.
- 2 This book is very difficult; I can't read it.
- 3 She came very late; the lesson was over.
- 4 This hat is very big; he's only a little boy.
- 5 It's very far; we can't walk.
- 6 He's very stupid; he can't understand.
- 7 It's very small; this is a big room.
- 8 This mountain is very high; we can't climb it.
- 9 It's very good; it can't be true.
- 10 It's very dark; I can't see anything.
- 11 This dress is very old; I can't wear it any more.
- 12 It is very wet; you mustn't go out.
- 13 This grammar is very difficult; a child can't understand it.
- 14 The music is very soft; we can't hear it.
- 15 It is very hot; I can't go out.

10.2
Elementary

Enough. Whereas too (Exercise 10.1) has a negative sense, enough, also with infinitive, has positive sense. Compare:

- He is too ill to need a doctor.
- = He is so ill that it's useless to send for a doctor.
- He is ill enough to need a doctor.
- = He is so ill that we must send for a doctor at once.

Enough comes in front of a noun and after an adjective or adverb.

(See also Exercises 38.3, 38.4.)

- Reword the following, using enough to:
- 1 You are quite clever; you understand perfectly.
- 2 You are quite old now; you ought to know better.
- 3 I am very tired; I can sleep all night.
- 4 Are you very tall? Can you reach that picture?
- 5 The fruit is ripe; we can pick it.

- 6 The story is short; we can read it in one lesson.
- 7 The moon is very bright; I can read a book by it.
- 8 The wind is very strong; it will blow the roof off.
- 9 That man is quite stupid; he believes me.
- 10 I have enough money; I can pay the bill.

11 *some and any*11.1
Elementary

The rough-and-ready rule of some in affirmative statements, and any in negatives and questions makes a useful preliminary exercise.

- Make the following sentences (a) negative, (b) interrogative:
- 1 I have some books.
- 2 He bought some ties.
- 3 There is some news.
- 4 They want some paper.
- 5 You ate some apples.
- 6 You asked some questions.
- 7 We shall have some rain.
- 8 The boy has some more cake.
- 9 I have seen you somewhere before.
- 10 He knows something.
- 11 They found it somewhere.
- 12 You have some.
- 13 You saw someone there.
- 14 He has sent me some letters.
- 15 He gave you some ink.
- 16 He put some more sugar in his tea.
- 17 There are some pictures in this book.
- 18 He told someone else.
- 19 I saw somebody at the window.
- 20 She wants some more like that.

11.2
Elementary

- Add some or any as required:
- 1 There isn't — boot-polish in this tin.
- 2 'Please give me — more pudding.' 'I'm sorry but there isn't —.'

- 3 You have — fine flowers in your garden.
- 4 Go and ask him for — more paper. I haven't — in my desk.
- 5 I have — more letters for you to write.
- 6 I like those roses; please give me —. What a pity there aren't — red ones!
- 7 I can't eat — more potatoes, but I should like — more beans.
- 8 I don't think there is —one here who can speak French.
- 9 I must have — ink and — paper, or I can't write —thing.
- 10 We had — tea, but there wasn't — sugar to put in it.
- 11 You must tell us — more of your adventures.
- 12 There aren't — matches left; we must buy — more
- 13 Put — salt on your meat, the cook hasn't put — in.
- 14 You can have — of my chocolate when you haven't — more of your own left.
- 15 You can't have — more dates because I want — for myself.
- 16 There is — tea in the kitchen, but there isn't — milk.
- 17 I want to buy — flowers; we haven't — in the garden now.
- 18 He wants — more pudding. Give him —.
- 19 She asked me for — ice, but I can't find —.
- 20 Put — bread on the table; we shall need — more.

11.3 Intermediate

One cannot be used with uncountables. It has a plural form, ones.

Any is natural in all doubtful statements and is usually found with scarcely, hardly, barely, etc., and clauses of doubt, condition, etc.

- Add some, any, one, or ones, as required:

- 1 I want — new potatoes; have you —?
- 2 You have a lot of apples; please give me —.
- 3 I asked him for — soap, but he hadn't —.

- 4 These loaves are stale; please give me — new —.
- 5 I'll have a cigarette. Will you have — too?
- 6 I want — flour, but the grocer hasn't —.
- 7 You have — lovely gramophone records; will you play me just — before I go?
- 8 I asked him for — ink, and he gave me —.
- 9 I've lost my pencil. Have you — to lend me?
- 10 So this is your house. It's a very pretty —.
- 11 I doubt if there are — sweets left. You'd better give — chocolate to the children that haven't had —.
- 12 I want — oranges. Give me these big —.
- 13 You can take these eggs if you want —, but I've got — better — inside.
- 14 If you need — more money, you must get — out of the bank; there is hardly — in the house.
- 15 They say the blue — are best. I'll buy — if you have — left.
- 16 We have — new shirts in today. Do you want to buy —? This green — is very nice.
- 17 Don't make — noise. He wants to get — sleep.
- 18 Have you had — tea? I can give you —.
- 19 Do you want — bananas? Here are — nice ripe —.
- 20 Are there — more books? I've read all these old —.

11.4 Intermediate and Advanced

The root meaning of some is 'particular' or 'known'; of any is 'general', 'whatever you like'. Consider the sentence:

You may come to see me any day, but you must come some day.

From this has developed the use of some for affirmative statements, and any for the vague and unknown.

But in questions the use of some or any depends on the expected or implied reply. Apropos of nothing at all, somebody may suddenly ask me,

I say, is there anything on in the street?

(= I'm just curious about the state of affairs outside)

But if a loud noise disturbs the people in the room, that question would naturally take the form:

I say, is there something on in the street?
 (= I hear a noise that suggests something particular)

NOTE: (a) Didn't you do some work yesterday? (= I feel certain you did)

(b) Didn't you do any work yesterday? (= I thought you did, but apparently I was wrong)

Intonation in (a) has low tone on 'yesterday', in (b) has low tone on 'work'.

Naturally, most questions may be with either some or any unless we are sure of the exact setting.

(11.4)

- Use some or any where required:
- 1 Will you have — more tea?
- 2 Won't you have — more cake? (What are the implications of some or any here?)
- 3 Did you go —where last night?
- 4 You're expecting —one to call, aren't you?
- 5 Haven't I given you — money this week? I must have forgotten you!
- 6 Didn't I give you — money yesterday? I feel certain I did!
- 7 Can you give me — more information?
- 8 If you haven't — money, you can get — from the bank.
- 9 Why don't you ask the bank for — money?
- 10 Can you get — more money from the bank?
- 11 You look as if you were expecting —one. Is — friend of yours coming?
- 12 Are you expecting —one else? If not, we'll go —where for a drink.
- 13 I haven't — time to do — more now; you can do — yourself.
- 14 Have you — cigarettes? Would you give me — for my case, if you have?
- 15 What is the use of practising — more verbs?
- 16 Did you have — trouble with your car today? I heard you had — yesterday.
- 17 These aren't my books. Did I take — of yours by mistake?
- 18 Wouldn't you like —thing to drink? Have — cherry brandy?

- 19 Have you read — good books lately?
- 20 Are there — lemons in the cupboard? We could make — lemonade.

12 no = not . . . any

12.1 Elementary

Compare:

Come nowhere near me!
 Don't come anywhere near me!

Both are grammatically correct, but the not . . . any form is the normal one for ordinary statements. In fact several of the sentences below sound unusual in speech.

- Reword the following no-sentences in the not . . . any form. Use the contracted -n't forms:
- 1 I have no time to help you.
- 2 There is no more sugar.
- 3 I can see my hat nowhere.
- 4 He likes no girls with red hair.
- 5 We have seen nobody we know yet.
- 6 They want nothing to eat.
- 7 I have no more money.
- 8 There are no apples on the tree.
- 9 There was nobody in the garden.
- 10 The poor little boy has no shoes to wear.
- 11 There is nowhere for you to sleep.
- 12 The cook has put no salt in the cabbage.
- 13 They will do no more work.
- 14 There was nothing left.
- 15 The chicken has laid no eggs today.
- 16 I want no more, thank you.
- 17 He gave me nothing to drink.
- 18 I'll give it to nobody else.
- 19 He gave me no ink, so I could write no more.
- 20 My uncle can see nothing without his glasses.

12.2 Elementary

The no-forms are chiefly used as short negative answers to questions.

Where are you going? – Nowhere.

Remember: neither of two; none of many.

* * *

- Answer the following questions in the negative; respond quickly:

- 1 Where are you going?
- 2 How many exercises have you done today?
- 3 Who were you talking to?
- 4 How much did these flowers cost?
- 5 What are you doing?
- 6 Where has she been?
- 7 Who did you meet?
- 8 Who phoned this morning?
- 9 How many will you give me?
- 10 What did you say?
- 11 Who told you to put it under the table?
- 12 What do they want?
- 13 Who do they want to see?
- 14 Which of these two books have you read?
- 15 How many have I given you already?
- 16 Who told you to do that?
- 17 What are you thinking about?
- 18 How many of these are mine?
- 19 Where did you go last night?
- 20 Which foot have you hurt?

12.3 Intermediate

Read notes on Exercise 12.1.

Notice that neither = 'not either'.

Students should be reminded that several of the sentences below sound unusual in speech.

- Reword the following no-sentences in the not . . . any form:

- 1 We had eaten no meat for four days.
- 2 They found nobody at home.
- 3 He gave his wife no money for her clothes.
- 4 They went nowhere after supper.
- 5 How odd! This door has no hinges.
- 6 I hope you've said nothing to Maisie.

- 7 They're dirty; I want neither of them.
- 8 I spoke to no one except you.
- 9 My friend Cyril would talk to nobody like her.
- 10 We had no money for our fare.
- 11 Why do you think an Englishman speaks no language but his own?
- 12 I've read no poetry since I was at school.
- 13 I've been nowhere this summer. I've had no time.
- 14 I'll speak neither to him nor to his wife.
- 15 We met nobody on the way, and we saw nothing unusual.
- 16 My car needs no new tyres.
- 17 I've been nowhere else.
- 18 He could remember neither the words nor the music.
- 19 I wonder why he told me nothing else.
- 20 I have no more money, so I can buy nothing else.

12.4 Intermediate

Read note to Exercise 12.2. Short negative answers in no-form.

What are you doing? – Nothing.

Which of the two do you want? – Neither.

- Answer the following questions in the negative; respond quickly:

- 1 Which of these two books have you read?
- 2 Who did you meet in the park last night?
- 3 Where have you been?
- 4 What have you done with it?
- 5 What are you whispering to Maisie about?
- 6 How many glasses did you break at the party?
- 7 What were you doing in the garden just now?
- 8 Who made that dirty mark on the ceiling?
- 9 What did you see when you opened the door?
- 10 Which shoe of this pair is too tight?
- 11 How many exercises have you done for me this week?
- 12 Where did Cyril take you?
- 13 What are you doing next weekend?
- 14 Which of these two umbrellas is mine?
- 15 How many letters did you get this morning?

- 16 Where did you two go last night?
- 17 How many five-letter words are there in sentence 11?
- 18 Which of the two girls is your sister?
- 19 What were you doing at the station?
- 20 Who brings you to your English lesson?

13 Comparisons

13.1 Elementary

The idea

He is less stupid than I thought he was.

is better expressed by EITHER He is not so stupid as I thought he was.

OR He is cleverer than I thought he was.

- The following sentences are not good ones as they stand. Reword them in the two ways suggested above.
- 1 Your house is less near than I thought.
- 2 This book is less big than yours.
- 3 This exercise is less good than your last one.
- 4 My mother is less old than you think she is.
- 5 These grapes are less expensive than those.
- 6 Kenneth is less short than his brother.
- 7 A donkey is less beautiful than a horse.
- 8 We're less bad than you think we are.
- 9 This hill is less low than I thought it was.
- 10 She is less ugly than you said she was.
- 11 I am less light than you.
- 12 The grass is less short here than in our garden.
- 13 A cigarette is less strong than a cigar. (mild)
- 14 Apples are less cheap than oranges.
- 15 The garden is less big than we hoped.
- 16 A tram is less quick than a bus.
- 17 My brother is less hard-working than me.
- 18 Our house is less low than yours.
- 19 This street is less wide than the next one.
- 20 My bag is less heavy than my friend's.

Read note on Exercise 13.1.

The following sentences are not good ones as they stand. Reword them in the ways suggested in Exercise 13.1.

- 1 The sea was less smooth than I had hoped. (rough)
- 2 The river is less deep near the ford. (shallow)
- 3 It is less dangerous to tease a lion than scorn a woman. (safe)
- 4 Maisie is much less young than she looks.
- 5 She is less proud than her sister. (humble)
- 6 The film was less interesting than the play. (dull)
- 7 Richard Burton is much less ugly than Cyril. (handsome)
- 8 He is less obstinate than his brothers. (co-operative)
- 9 She's less sophisticated than she makes herself out to be. (naïve, simple)
- 10 You'd be less well off if you were married. (badly off)
- 11 My cigarettes are less good than yours.
- 12 A well-dressed woman is much less humble than a peacock. (Do in the affirmative form only.)
- 13 The river was less shallow than he expected.
- 14 John is much less intelligent than his sister. (dull)
- 15 My wife is much less economical than yours. (extravagant)

14 Negatives and Questions of Auxiliary Verbs

When these exercises are done orally, short forms should be used throughout.

AUXILIARY VERBS are sometimes called ANOMALOUS FINITES, SPECIAL FINITES, or MODAL AUXILIARIES.

In the first year students should be acquainted with the following:

be, have, do, did, can, could, must, shall, will.

In the second year the others should be known:

should, would, may, might, ought to, used to, daren't, needn't, had better, would rather.

Students should be well drilled in the natural use of weak (unemphatic) forms in speech.

Example: can = [kn] in I can do it.

Complete list of Auxiliary Verbs:

be am is are was were	may might
have has had	must have to, am to
do does did	ought to
shall should	used to
will would	need
can could	dare

For contracted negatives add -n't. Exceptions are I'm not, can't, shan't, won't.

Need and dare are used as true auxiliaries in QUESTIONS and NEGATIVES only.

Except for certain uses of have, need and used to, all question and negative constructions are made without do.

SHORT-FORM NEGATIVE

14.1 ● Make the following sentences negative:

- Elementary
- 1 He must do it again.
 - 2 She could understand everything.
 - 3 They had time to tell her.
 - 4 It was very late.
 - 5 We're coming tomorrow morning.
 - 6 He can speak French.
 - 7 He'll come if you can. (Note the stress.)
 - 8 You must come this morning.
 - 9 He comes here every day.
 - 10 We like her very much.
 - 11 They arrived at six o'clock.
 - 12 There were many people at the concert.
 - 13 Why did you come with him?
 - 14 We could see as far as the mountains.
 - 15 You shall have another one tomorrow.
 - 16 Our teacher wants the homework now.
 - 17 You must look out of the window.
 - 18 Eric can understand what you say.
 - 19 There are some more cakes.
 - 20 He has enough to eat.

14.2 Elementary

Have takes the form haven't or have you? only if used as PERFECT TENSE auxiliary, or with its fundamental meaning of 'possess' or 'own'. (See also Exercise 33.1.)

* * *

- Answer the following questions in the negative:
- 1 Can you drink tea?
 - 2 Mustn't you eat fish?
 - 3 Ought you to have any coffee?
 - 4 Can you stay up late?
 - 5 Will you have another cigarette?
 - 6 Couldn't he telephone?
 - 7 Mustn't you go out so late at night?
 - 8 Have you any brothers or sisters?
 - 9 Do you have lunch at one o'clock?
 - 10 Can you speak Czech?
 - 11 Did you read last night's paper?
 - 12 Have you seen my hat anywhere?
 - 13 Do stupid people always have stupid faces?
 - 14 Ought he to work so hard?
 - 15 Were there many people at the party?

14.3 Intermediate

Have WITHOUT do

(In American English have normally takes do for all its uses except PERFECT TENSES. This usage is becoming common in British English.)

1 When meaning to 'possess' or 'own' an object or a characteristic.

Maisie hasn't any handkerchiefs.

A circle hasn't any corners.

2 As auxiliary for PERFECT TENSES.

Have WITH do.

1 Meaning occasional (not permanent) possession.

Maisie doesn't have a clean handkerchief every day.

We don't have lunch before midday.

(Similarly with all meals.)

2 Causative. See Exercise 15.1.

You didn't have it mended.

3 Meaning to 'experience'.

Did you have a good time last night?

Similarly have trouble, bother, difficulty, a good (bad) trip or journey, a lesson, the opportunity of, occasion to.

Have WITH OR WITHOUT do; as have to, replacing must.

Have you to work hard?

Do you have to work hard?

For have got see Exercises 33.1, 2.

Dare. Question and negative form WITHOUT do. In the affirmative it is followed by infinitive WITH to.

Dare he go alone?

He dared to call me a fool.

But note the expression I dare say ...

Need. Questions and negatives are usually made WITHOUT do and WITHOUT the infinitive particle to. In the affirmative need is followed by the infinitive WITH to.

Q. Need he run so fast?

A. Yes, he must. (Yes, he needs to.)

He needs to speak more slowly. (= must)

See Exercises 16.1-5.

Used to. Should logically be used WITHOUT do, but forms WITH do are undoubtedly the most widespread, especially as responses and question-tags.

(a) Used you¹ to live here? Did you use to² live here?

(b) You used to² live here, use(d)n't³ you? didn't you?

(c) You used to² pay me every week. Used⁴ I? Did I?

The most usual negative form seems to be with never, which conveniently avoids the difficulty.

You never used to treat me like this.

TENTATIVE ADVICE: In (b) and (c) above (responses, §19, and question-tags, §32), we prefer forms WITH do; in (a) we prefer forms WITH do in spoken English, WITHOUT do in written English. Never is a useful device for negatives.

(14.3) ● Answer these questions in the negative:

- 1 You never used to smoke so much, did you?
- 2 Have you any more like this?

² ['ju:stə]

³ ['ju:snt]

⁴ [ju:st]

- 3 Did you have a comfortable journey?
- 4 Who used to take you out for walks when you were little? (Answer in affirmative, of course.)
- 5 'Need I do it at once?' 'No, you —.'
- 6 'Ought you to make so much noise?' 'No, I suppose I —.'
- 7 Do I have to come at nine?
- 8 Did you have to write in ink?
- 9 Did you have sausages for breakfast?
- 10 Have we any sausages in the house?
- 11 Need she put on a clean dress?
- 12 'Who wrote that rude remark on the blackboard?' 'I —.'
- 13 Did you use to live here? (Used you to live here?)
- 14 Dare he come without our invitation?
- 15 Did you have your shoes cleaned this morning?
- 16 Need it be finished by Saturday?
- 17 Do you want any more rice pudding?
- 18 Dare they do it again?
- 19 Did he dare to call you a thief to your face? (Answer in affirmative.)
- 20 Didn't you use to go to school with him? (Usedn't you to go to school with him?)

15 Causative use of have

15.1 Intermediate and Advanced

Causing something to be done by someone else is expressed by have or get with a past participle.

He must have (get) his pen mended. (= Someone must mend it for him.)

I had (got) my shoes cleaned. (= I asked someone to clean them for me.)

Questions and negatives are made with do.

● Reword the following sentences, using have or get with a past participle:

- 1 Someone washed my car for me yesterday.
- 2 Someone doesn't clean them for us every day.

- 3 I asked someone to paint the gate last week.
- 4 Someone tuned her piano for her yesterday.
- 5 Somebody will have to see to it for you.
- 6 I asked a man to mend my shoes.
- 7 Somebody sends Maisie her dresses from Paris.
- 8 Your hair wants cutting. You must —.
- 9 Tell someone to translate it into English.
- 10 Our season tickets need renewing. We must —.
- 11 I'll ask someone to make a new one.
- 12 We ordered somebody to whitewash the ceiling.
- 13 Order someone to send it round to the house.
- 14 The knives want sharpening. We must —.
- 15 We must find somebody to chop all this wood up.
- 16 Tell him to take another photograph.
- 17 I'm going to tell someone to add an extra room.
- 18 Your car wants servicing. You must —.
- 19 He asked his tailor to lengthen the trousers.
- 20 Tell someone to bring it to you on a tray.

16 must, have to, need

16.1 Elementary MUST AND MUST NOT

Must and have (got) to are commands or obligations.

Must not and am/is/are not to are prohibitions (negative commands).

They are PRESENT and FUTURE in meaning; but future obligation can be made more precise with the form shall have to.

PAST TENSE:

Had (got) to is an obligation in the past.

Was/were not to is a prohibition in the past: it occurs mostly in reported speech.

* * *

- Read each sentence as it stands, then make it refer to the past:

- 1 You must do it at once.
- 2 He mustn't tell me.
- 3 She has to wash the glasses.
- 4 He is not to come before seven.
- 5 You'll have to read it again.

- 6 He says I'm not to be trusted.
- 7 They must sell it at once.
- 8 We shall have to leave in the morning.
- 9 I'm not to repeat it.
- 10 I shall have to come again.
- 11 He says you are not to listen to them.
- 12 They must change their shoes.
- 13 He is surprised that he is not to bring one with him.
- 14 You are not to choose a green one.
- 15 We have to begin before five o'clock.
- 16 I must work as hard as I can.
- 17 We shall have to do it again.
- 18 He says you're not to drink it all.
- 19 I have to light a fire.
- 20 He has to go home early.
- 21 He mustn't read the whole book.
- 22 She says I'm not to lay the table before twelve o'clock.
- 23 I shall have to give you a new one.
- 24 She mustn't go home alone.
- 25 They'll have to do what they're told.

16.2 Elementary MUST AND NEEDN'T

To express the absence of obligation or necessity to do something (that is, the opposite of must), the form need not is used.

You must go now. — No, you needn't go just yet, you can stay a little longer.

Alternative forms are haven't got to, don't have to, don't need to.

FUTURE is the same as the above, but we use shan't (won't) have to and shan't (won't) need to if we wish to be more precise.

PAST forms are hadn't got to, didn't have to, and didn't need to.

For the form needn't have done see Exercise 16.5.

- Read each sentence as it stands, then make it refer to the past:

- 1 You needn't spend it all.
- 2 She won't have to come again.
- 3 I needn't do my homework again.

- 4 My sister doesn't have to go to work.
- 5 The children won't need to get up so early.
- 6 They haven't got to go back alone, have they?
- 7 She needn't cook them all.
- 8 I must go at once, but you needn't.
- 9 They must pay twice, but we shan't have to.
- 10 You haven't got to answer all the questions.
- 11 You don't need to carry so much.
- 12 So I shan't have to go out after all.
- 13 He won't have to come on foot, will he?
- 14 We needn't listen to them.
- 15 The students don't have to write in ink.
- 16 They won't have to read the whole book, will they?
- 17 She doesn't have to come every week.
- 18 I shan't have to buy another one.
- 19 We don't need to call him 'Sir'.
- 20 She won't have to walk the whole way, will she?

MUST AND HAVE TO

See Exercises 16.1 and 16.2.

There is usually a difference of meaning between the present tense forms must and have to in affirmative statements:

Must expresses obligation or compulsion FROM THE SPEAKER'S VIEWPOINT.

Have to expresses EXTERNAL obligation.

Compare the following pairs of situations, where these two forms are used in their natural context.

You must go now. (I want to go to bed.)

What a pity you have to go now. (It's time for you to catch your train.)

We must begin before five (or we shan't finish in time for our supper).

We have to begin before five. (That's the time arranged.)

They must take it away. (I won't have it here any longer.)

They have to take it away. (They've been told to do so.)

He must stay the night. (I (we) press him to do so.)

He has to stay the night. (He can't get back tonight.)

He must move the furniture himself (for all I care; I shan't help him).

He has to move the furniture himself (poor chap; he's got no one to help him).

You must call me 'Sir'. (I like it that way.)

You have to call me 'Sir'. (That's the regulation address.)

You must change your shoes. (I won't have you in here with muddy feet.)

You have to change your shoes. (... such is the custom on entering a mosque.)

Am/is/etc. to is used for definite commands or prohibitions. This form, or must, is used for instructions on notices or orders (have to is never used here).

Passengers must cross the lines by the footbridge. (The railway company instructs them to.)

Porters often have to walk across the lines. (The nature of their work compels them to.)

All junior officers are to report to the colonel at once. (Military order)

Soldiers have to salute their officers. (Such is the custom.)

* * *

- Read each of the following sentences as it stands, then in the negative (i.e. remove the idea of obligation):

- 1 I must get there before eight.
- 2 You will have to come again.
- 3 They must leave before dinner.
- 4 She must wash up all the glasses.
- 5 We had to change our shoes.
- 6 You'll have to pay him in advance.
- 7 He had to give it back.
- 8 The workmen have to take it away again.
- 9 Our teacher must write it on the blackboard.
- 10 We had to finish it by today.
- 11 We shall have to leave earlier than usual.
- 12 You must answer at once.
- 13 We had to begin very early.
- 14 You'll have to bring your own ink with you.
- 15 You must eat them all.
- 16 I shall have to buy a new one.
- 17 They must learn the whole poem.
- 18 She has to make some new ones. (N.B. some-any)
- 19 I had to read it aloud.
- 20 She must wear a hat.
- 21 You'll have to stand outside.

- 22 I had to show my passport.
 23 You must lock the box up again.
 24 We shall have to tell them our address.
 25 You must do the whole exercise again.

Intermediate HAVE TO
 AND NEED (WITH AND WITHOUT DO)

See Exercises 16.2 and 16.3.

In questions and negatives the present tense forms:

Do I have to ... ? I don't have to ...

Do I need to ... ? I don't need to ...

are mostly used for HABITUAL ACTIONS; whereas the forms

Have I got to ... ? I haven't got to ...

Need I ... ?¹ I needn't ...

Must I ... ?¹

are mostly used for ONE PARTICULAR OCCASION.

This is a preference, not a rule, and except where one of the above aspects requires emphasis, all four forms are interchangeable. For some speakers there is a difference of meaning between Need you go shopping this afternoon? (which may sound like a protest) and Do you need to go shopping this afternoon? (a simple enquiry).

The forms of have to and need (with and without the auxiliary do) can be compared in the following examples, where the idea of one special occasion or of habit is strongly present.

Must you get up early tomorrow morning? (Have you got to ...)

Do you have to get up early (every morning)?

Must I show it to him now? (Have I got to ...)

Do I have to show my pass every time I go in?

OR Do I need to show my pass every time ... ? (I hope it isn't necessary.)

You needn't do it just now.

You don't have to do it every time you see him. (You don't need to.)

* * *

¹ Need is used wherever there is a strong element of negation or doubt, or when the speaker seeks or expects a negative answer. Cf. the following examples:

Must she come tomorrow? (open question)

Need she come tomorrow? (hoping for negative answer)

Must I be present? (Do you want me?)

I wonder if I need be present. (statement of doubt)

● Read each of the following sentences as it stands, then in the negative (i.e. remove the idea of compulsion):

- 1 You must answer in English.
- 2 He will have to pay me back before Christmas.
- 3 We had to bend it to get it into the box.
- 4 They must brush their own shoes.
- 5 They have to brush their own shoes every day.
- 6 You'll have to buy us some more.
- 7 You must ring him up before tomorrow.
- 8 She'll have to carry both of them.
- 9 We must change our clothes for dinner.
- 10 We had to cook them first.
- 11 You must cut it in three equal pieces.
- 12 You must write yours now, and she'll have to write hers when she comes in.
- 13 She had to drink it without sugar.
- 14 We had to pay them for it, and we shall have to pay them some more next week.
- 15 You must put all the eggs in one basket.
- 16 Grandfather had to finish reading it in bed.
- 17 You must give it back to me before you go.
- 18 She'll have to go back before nightfall.
- 19 They had to light a fire to cook their supper.
- 20 You must listen to this talk on potato-planting.
- 21 We shall have to wait (a) long (time) for our holidays.¹
- 22 Last year we even had to book accommodation.
- 23 In any case we have to get train tickets, because we are taking our bicycles.
- 24 We shall have to take a lot of food with us.²
- 25 We must even take a cooking stove.

See Exercises 16.3 and 16.4.

didn't need to: It wasn't necessary, so probably not done.
needn't have: It wasn't necessary, but done nevertheless.
 Both are opposites of I had to, with the above difference of meaning.

My tea was already sweetened, so I needn't have put any sugar in.

But I did, and made it too sweet.

¹ See Exercise 53.2 (a long time).

² See Exercise 53.1 (a lot of).

(16.5)

● Insert didn't need to or needn't have according to the sense:

- 1 I — (answer) the questions, but I'm glad I did.
- 2 I — (answer) the questions, so I turned to the next page.
- 3 I — (buy) a new one, so I've brought the old one back.
- 4 You — (spend) all that money; now we've got nothing left.
- 5 They — (push) it into the corner, because it was there already.
- 6 I — (go) by sea, but flying would have cost more.
- 7 We — (open) the drawer, seeing that it was already open.
- 8 She — (open) the drawer, seeing that she found it empty when she did.
- 9 You — (pay) him a penny; he gets more than enough from me.
- 10 I — (pay) for it, because it was put on my father's account.
- 11 We — (say) anything at all, which was a great comfort.
- 12 You — (say) anything; then he would never have known.
- 13 I know I — (lock) the door after me, but how was I to know you wanted to come out, too?
- 14 He — (lock) the door, because somebody else had already done so.
- 15 We — (wait) long; he was back before you could say 'Jack Robinson'.
- 16 We — (wait) for her, because she never came at all.
- 17 You — (stay) if you hadn't wanted to.
- 18 I — (take) my ink because I knew I should find some there.

- 19 I — (tell) him personally; I wrote him a letter.
- 20 You — (bring) any food, but since you have, let's eat it now.
- 21 You — (wake) me up; there's another hour before the train leaves.
- 22 I — (wake) him up, because he was already sitting on the bed, putting his socks on.
- 23 You — (write) such a long composition, because I shan't have time to mark it.
- 24 I — (ring) the bell, because the door opened before I got to it.
- 25 You — (wait) for me; I could have found the way all right.

17 *can*17.1
Elementary
and
Intermediate

Can has two main uses:

- 1 to express permission or possibility (= may).
You can go now.
- 2 to express ability or capacity (= know how to).
I can swim very well.

FUTURE	can	shall (will) be able to
PAST	could	could OR was (were) able to

But see also next exercise.

* * *

- Say the following using the given time-expressions, first for the future and then for the past.

EXAMPLE

You can drive. when you are 17/after you got your licence.

ANSWER 1: You can drive when you are 17.

ANSWER 2: You could drive after you got your licence.

- 1 He can leave it here. for an hour/whenever he wanted to.
- 2 He can play chess. this afternoon/when he was young.
- 3 I can fly a plane. after a few more lessons/when I was in the air force.
- 4 We can do this exercise. next week/last week.
- 5 She can cook very well. with more practice/when I knew her.
- 6 I can go early. if he lets me/every day last summer.
- 7 She can make her own dresses. in a few years' time/before she got married.
- 8 She can read easily. with her new glasses/before her eye trouble.
- 9 He says I can have another one. tomorrow/He said — yesterday.

17 can

- 10 I can go swimming. when it is warmer/whenever I liked.
- 11 She can play the piano. when her arm is better/a few years ago.
- 12 We can't find it. until tomorrow/when we looked for it.
- 13 John can stay up late. tonight/even when he was a small boy.
- 14 I can meet you. on Saturday/whenever I liked.
- 15 My sister can sew very well. soon/before she lost her eyesight.
- 16 We can speak English. soon/when we were in London.
- 17 I can't have a car. until I am older/until I was twenty-one.
- 18 He can find a good answer. if you ask him tonight/whenever I asked him a question.
- 19 My father can help me. when he comes home/when he had time.
- 20 We can see the sea. a little farther on/from the top of the hill.
- 21 You can borrow the book. tomorrow/whenever you wanted to.
- 22 Jill can climb trees. when she is a bit older/when she was younger.
- 23 We can't understand. until you explain it again/when he spoke so quickly.
- 24 She can bring a friend. with her this afternoon/any time she liked.
- 25 They can build better houses. in the year 2050/in 1850.

(Notice that in some of these can may mean either 'may' or 'know how to'.)

17.2
Advanced

See Exercise 17.1.

Seeing in a grammar book that could can be past or conditional of can, students are always puzzled by having such sentences as:

'I could pass my examination ten years ago.'

'I could go to the country yesterday and had a good time, . . . ' etc.

corrected to was able to.

A careful analysis of all sentences where we CANNOT use could as simple past tense of can shows the following idea to be common to all of them. They deal with THE ATTAINMENT OF SOMETHING THROUGH SOME CAPACITY. Mere capacity may have could or was able to.

He could (was able to) swim very well when he was young. (Could is more usual.)

But something attained through a capacity may not have could.

He was able to swim half-way before he collapsed. (Could is impossible here.)

Managed to also expresses this idea.

The past of can meaning PERMISSION always has could.

I could put it wherever I liked. (permission granted)

I was able to put it on the top shelf. (capacity or ability to reach)

(17.2) ● Say the following using the given time-expressions, first for the future and then for the past. (See the example for Exercise 17.1.) Distinguish when can may have more than one meaning.

- 1 We can climb to the top of this mountain. tomorrow/yesterday.
- 2 She can come. next week/whenever she wanted to.
- 3 I can join the broken ends. when I get some glue/with glue yesterday.
- 4 I can cover at least half of it. by the time you get back/before he got back.
- 5 He can eat anything. when the doctor gives him permission/before he was ill.
- 6 Mother says I can go out with you. tonight/Mother said — tonight.
- 7 She can write with her left hand. if she practises for an hour/when she had to.
- 8 You can do what you like. this afternoon/always.
- 9 I can reach London. by the weekend/yesterday.
- 10 My sister can make a very nice pudding. for dinner, tomorrow/when she had her own kitchen.
- 11 My wife can leave hospital. in a week's time/a few days ago.

- 12 I can help you with your homework. after tea/when you were in difficulties yesterday.
- 13 Our army can win a battle. when it has enough ammunition/a few days ago.

Go through this exercise again and see which sentences can make their past with managed to.

18 Short-form Negative, Revision

18.1 Advanced

Read note to Exercise 14.3.

Must. Notice that the negative form mustn't is a negative obligation; the opposite of must is needn't. This is important for correct responses.

He needn't do that, need he? — Yes, I'm afraid he must.

Must I go? — No, you needn't.

Have to. The above distinctions are also made in the have to forms.

OBLIGATION	NO OBLIGATION	PROHIBITION
He must go	He needn't go	He mustn't go
{He has to go	{He doesn't have to go	{He isn't to go
{He has got to go	{He hasn't got to go

Look at the following sentences and notice how the forms don't have to and am not to are used.

My doctor says I'm not to (= mustn't) eat meat, but I don't have to (or haven't got to) (= needn't) take his advice if I don't want to.

I've told my husband he isn't to (mustn't) smoke in the drawing-room.

I don't have to (haven't got to) tell my husband such things; he's a born gentleman. (= needn't, not necessary)

My mother says I mustn't (I'm not to) be out after eight o'clock, but I haven't got to (don't have to) do what she tells me!

The forms He's not to, you're not to, etc. are more usual than he isn't to, you aren't to, etc.

The form he hasn't got to is more usual in spoken British English than the form he doesn't have to (= he needn't).

See Exercises 16.1–5 for opposite and negative of must.

Need. See Exercise 16.5 for the expression of NO OBLIGATION in the past.

- 19 I had to have someone to show me the way from the station. (opposite here, not negative).
- 20 Dare he jump from a first-floor window like this? (For have got = have, see Exercises 33.1–3.)

19 Short-form Responses using Auxiliary Verbs

19.1 Elementary

The most important function of the auxiliaries, or special finites, is their use in short answers and responses.

Are you fond of fish? No, I'm not. Yes, I am.

Do you like fish? No, I don't. Yes, I do.

Contracted forms are always used.

- Give short-form answers to the following questions:
 - 1 Can you speak English?
 - 2 Have you met my Uncle Jim?
 - 3 Are you enjoying yourself?
 - 4 Will you come again tomorrow? Yes, ...
 - 5 Is your friend here today?
 - 6 Have you been to a football match this week?
 - 7 Must I be there in time? Yes, ...
 - 8 Did you meet him yesterday?

- 10 What's the capital of France?
- 11 Who saw Maisie in the town yesterday?
- 12 Which of you knows the shortest way to the station?
- 13 How many of you ought to be in bed by now?
- 14 How many of you have breakfast before seven in the morning?
- 15 Who likes chocolate?
- 16 Who came late today?
- 17 Who taught you to swim?
- 18 How many of you ought to do more homework?
We all ...
- 19 Who can answer my questions? (Most of us ...)
- 20 Which takes longer to say: Ightham or Llanfair-pwllgwyngyllgogerwchwyndrobbwllllandyrilio-gogogoch?

19.5Elementary AGREEMENT

See also Exercise 19.20.

The auxiliaries are commonly used when we agree with someone:

using yes for simple agreement.

It's very hot today. – Yes, it is.

using so for surprise.

Your glass is empty. – So it is.

using of course, etc., for something obvious.

They say we shall win. – Of course we shall.

The teacher reads the statement and the student responds.

- 12 I expect you can give me a match, can't you?
- 13 You've spilt some coffee down your dress.
- 14 If you threw a book out of the window, I dare say it would fall.
- 15 I can't leave without paying.

Other suitable introductory phrases for 'obvious' types are: obviously, indeed, I'm sure, you can see, it's quite clear, etc.

19.7
Elementary
DISAGREEMENT

When we disagree with someone we respond with no or oh, no followed by the appropriate auxiliary. But may be used for disagreeing with a question or an assumption.

The box is open. – No, it isn't.
Why didn't you write to me? – But I did.

The teacher reads the statement; the student responds.

* * *

- Disagree with the following remarks:
- 1 He will have to see a doctor.
- 2 English grammar is too difficult for you.
- 3 Why are you so angry?
- 4 Bucharest is of course the capital of Hungary.
- 5 Don't hurry, we have plenty of time.
- 6 Why are you working so hard in these summer days?
- 7 The bank will certainly lend you some money.
- 8 You've done this exercise before.
- 9 He has plenty of money.
- 10 He likes me better than you.

DISAGREEMENT WITH NEGATIVE

Here we commonly use the auxiliaries, generally with stress, preceded by (oh) but, or (oh) yes.

You can't eat all that! – (Oh) yes, I can.
(Oh) but I can!

Notice that but is a weak form – [bət].
The teacher reads the statement; the student responds.

* * *

- Disagree with the following remarks:
- 1 You can't read this.
- 2 I haven't time to do it!
- 3 They don't have lunch before one o'clock.
- 4 You didn't buy any sugar!
- 5 He won't give it to me.

CONTRARY

ADDITIONS

TO REMARKS

Here the appropriate auxiliary is introduced by but.

He can read French. – But I can't.

The stress is generally on the SUBJECT of the addition.

Notice that in all these additions to remarks, the added section may be spoken by the original speaker or by a second person.

* * *

- Read the following remarks and add a contrary statement, either freely or using the suggestion in brackets:
- 1 She wants to go to the pictures. (I)
 - 2 We can come tomorrow. (they)
 - 3 I have a lot of time. (he)
 - 4 My wife likes playing bridge. (I)

Introduction to QUESTION-TAGS.

This device is treated fully in Section 32, and the following exercises are merely to acquaint the student with the form, so that it can be used for certain responses.

To turn statements into rhetorical questions (cf. French n'est-ce pas, German nicht wahr, etc.), in English, the appropriate auxiliary is used as a tag at the end of the remark.

An AFFIRMATIVE remark has a NEGATIVE tag.

You are coming tomorrow, aren't you?

He has seen it, hasn't he?

You know her, don't you?

A NEGATIVE remark has a POSITIVE tag.

You don't know, do you?

They won't find it, will they?

(19.17) ● Read the following, and add a question-tag:

- 1 He is French.
- 2 We are late.
- 3 They weren't angry.
- 4 They have two children.
- 5 You understand it.
- 6 You'll tell us.
- 7 He isn't our teacher.
- 8 I mustn't be late.
- 9 He can explain.
- 10 We shall see you tomorrow.
- 11 You've torn your dress.
- 12 You came by air.
- 13 I wasn't long.
- 14 She has just come.
- 15 They couldn't do it.
- 16 Dinner's ready.
- 17 You've taken it.
- 18 You needn't go yet.
- 19 He can have another one.
- 20 They must come again.

NEGATIVE

A form of question-tag, preceded by no, is used frequently here. Notice that the negative auxiliary and its tag both have a falling stress, never a rising one.

'He wasn't late last time.' 'No, he wasn't, was he.'

A question mark could perhaps be added, but the sense doesn't really demand one.

The teacher reads the statement; the student responds.

● Agree with the following negative remarks, using a question-tag:

- 1 He doesn't understand you.
- 2 They won't like it.
- 3 We can't cross the street here.
- 4 You mustn't spend it all.
- 5 They couldn't answer any of the questions.
- 6 You didn't come early enough.
- 7 We aren't clever enough.
- 8 He wasn't at the party.
- 9 It hasn't rained for weeks.

- 10 We haven't come very far.
- 11 There isn't enough for us all.
- 12 We shan't see you till next week.
- 13 It's not a very big house.
- 14 The horses didn't run very well.
- 15 You mustn't put your feet on the chair.
- 16 They didn't give us very good cakes.
- 17 Your shoes aren't very clean.
- 18 She can't sing so well as her sister.
- 19 This chair wasn't broken yesterday.
- 20 I'm not very good at English.

20 Imperative

20.1 Elementary

The following is a simple drill, and should be carried out with BOOKS SHUT. The student should in all cases do as his colleague bids him. Teach the use of please before or after the imperative.

Imperative drills might well be divided and scattered over many periods; also combined with PRESENT CONTINUOUS tense drills. (See Exercises 21.1, 2.)

DRILL. BOOKS SHUT. Students to make the imperatives.

- Tell X to:
 - 1 open his (her) book, mouth, eyes, bag.
 - 2 shut ditto.
 - 3 stand in the corner, by me, on a chair, on his head.
 - 4 go to sleep, wake up.
 - 5 take — off his desk, a book from me.

- 6 push the door, Mr Y, a book off the desk, me into the corner.
- 7 hold a book, Miss Z's hand, up his hand.
- 8 make a mark on the board, a noise, a noise like a cat, pig, fish.
- 9 talk loudly (softly) to Miss Y.
- 10 break his pencil, a piece of chalk, a match.
- 11 tell you the time, the date, the name of the class, the teacher's name, his name.
- 12 meet you at five, at the corner of the street.
- 13 fall off his chair.
- 14 fight Mr P.

etc., WITH OTHER KNOWN VERBS.

20.2

Intermediate

Answer in imperative. BOOKS SHUT.

- Tell me how to:
 - 1 write with a ball-point pen, a fibre-tip pen.
 - 2 light a cigarette.
 - 3 make tea, coffee.
 - 4 fry an egg.
 - 5 take a photo.
 - 6 light a fire.
 - 7 sew on a button.
 - 8 annoy X.
 - 9 bath a baby, a dog.
 - 10 frighten Y.
 - 11 keep well, make myself ill, cure a cold.
 - 12 grow flowers, cabbages.
 - 13 send a telegram, make a trunk call.
 - 14 start a car, a sewing-machine.
 - 15 get to the station, cinema, post office, etc.

20.3

NEGATIVE IMPERATIVE

Don't + verb stem; introduced by please for polite requests.

BOOKS SHUT. Students to make the imperatives.

- Tell X NOT to:
 - 1 talk so loudly.
 - 2 put his feet on the desk.

- 3 copy from the next person.
- 4 bite his pencil, lips, nails.
- 5 fold the paper.
- 6 kick Y.
- 7 leave the room.
- 8 talk, whisper, write notes to, annoy Miss Z.
- 9 point at the teacher.
- 10 shout, laugh loudly, look out of the window.
- 11 throw things at me.
- 12 lend anything to P.
- 13 think so hard.
- 14 forget homework.
- 15 smoke in class.
- 16 play with pencil.
- 17 listen to what Z says.
- 18 look at you like that.
- 19 look at Miss Q like that.
- 20 eat in class.

etc., WITH OTHER KNOWN VERBS.

20.4

Intermediate

When the verb has some particle with it, this is normally heard at the end of a spoken imperative. For example,

Take your ugly face away!

is more usual than 'Take away your ugly face!' (Though, of course, neither is very polite, even with the addition of please.)

* * *

- Say the following imperatives, putting the particle after the object:

- 1 Put on your coat.
- 2 Take off your shoes.
- 3 Do up your buttons.
- 4 Clear up this mess!
- 5 Take away these books.
- 6 Write down these sentences in pencil.
- 7 Drink up your tea.
- 8 Cover up your legs.
- 9 Eat up your dinner.
- 10 Take out my friend Maisie to lunch.
- 11 Put back the clock one hour.
- 12 Read out the message aloud.

- 13 Pull up all the weeds.
- 14 Switch on the light.
- 15 Turn off the radio.
- 16 Pick up that piece of paper.
- 17 Wake up my friend Cyril.
- 18 Put out your tongue.
- 19 Pour out the tea.
- 20 Put down your pens.

20.5

Advanced

Emphatic commands with go and come and adverbs of direction are given added force by inversion.

Up you come! Off you go!

Notice also the forms

Off with you! Off with her head! Out with it!

- Make similar emphatic commands with go, come and get combined with the following adverbial particles:
in, out, away, up, down, back, over, off, round, under.

21 The Present Tense

THE REAL PRESENT – INTRODUCTORY DRILLS

21.1

Elementary

The PRESENT CONTINUOUS tense (REAL PRESENT), is a better introduction to the verb than the simple present. The verb be is already known, the -ing form of the verb is regular, and statements and questions in this tense have immediate practical value. It is obvious that the form Do you write? Do you catch the chalk? Do you go to the door? etc. cannot be easily practised, whereas the form Are you writing, going to the door, speaking? etc., can.

The elementary drill might well be combined with Exercise 20.1 on the imperative, by practising imperatives and asking about them in the present continuous tense.

ALL BOOKS SHUT.

- (21.1) ● Is X, are you, am I, are we writing, reading, standing, sitting, smoking, singing, walking to the door, shutting the window, opening a book, talking, folding or cutting paper, taking or putting something, touching the wall, holding something? (and so on with any other verbs known to the students).

21.2

Elementary

BOOKS SHUT:

- Stand up X. What are you (is he) doing? The same with:

Walk to the door, take Miss Y out of the room, eat a sweet, count the students, leave the room, stand on a chair, read from a book, write on the board, fetch a piece of chalk, bring me a pencil, go into the corner, cut some paper (and so on with any other verbs known).

For difference between PRESENT SIMPLE and PRESENT CONTINUOUS see Exercises 21.7-9.

21.3

Elementary

PRESENT SIMPLE. This tense occurs in speech far less frequently than the Present Continuous. It doesn't really describe PRESENT action, but something permanent or habitual.

Question-word when? cannot be used with PRESENT CONTINUOUS tense, except when this tense is used to express immediate future.

DRILL. BOOKS SHUT.

- When do we (I, you, etc.) shut books; open books; go to sleep; wake up; eat; drink; come to the lesson; go to the pictures; feel ill (happy, unhappy); get some homework; have lunch; hear the news on the radio; help our friends; laugh; learn English; like to eat ice-cream; listen to the teacher; lie down; look at the blackboard; look out of the window; make a special cake; play games; put on our clothes; ring a bell; run; say 'Hallo'; see snow; sit down;

walk in the park; want a cup of tea; take our clothes off; thank a person; think; try to be good; wash our hands; sing; talk softly; cry

PLUS ANY OTHER VERBS KNOWN.

21.4

Elementary

The only inflexion in the PRESENT SIMPLE is the -s of the third person singular, but students of English seem to have great difficulty in remembering it.

* * *

- Read quickly in the singular:
- 1 They often go fishing and catch nothing.
 - 2 My friends work in London; they buy and sell cars.
 - 3 They sit at the window and watch the traffic.
 - 4 Their little girls thank them when they give them a present.
 - 5 Animals find shelter when it rains.
 - 6 They wash their hands and dry them on a towel.
 - 7 They hit their dog with a stick when they are angry with it.
 - 8 Do these ladies generally go to the theatre on Saturday evenings, or do they stay at home?
 - 9 Birds build their nests in the summer and fly to the south in the winter.
 - 10 They never find the money they lose.
 - 11 The children play all the morning and sleep in the afternoon.
 - 12 These apples are very green.
 - 13 My friends like meat, but do not like fish.
 - 14 They live in small houses which have only three rooms.
 - 15 His brothers work hard all day, and want to rest in the evening.
 - 16 They get new books from the library every week.
 - 17 They have breakfast at eight o'clock and eat their lunch at half past one.
 - 18 The postmen bring the letters three times a day.
 - 19 These chairs are very comfortable but they are too expensive.
 - 20 They want to buy some toys, because their sons have a birthday tomorrow.

- Read quickly in the singular:
 - 1 They tell me that when they get home every afternoon they have some food and then change their clothes; they never eat or drink anything while they are at the office, unless the hot weather makes them very thirsty.
 - 2 These boys say that they always listen carefully, but do not always understand their teachers because they speak too quickly and choose very difficult words.
 - 3 Careful students always put back the books they have read before they take out others. These girls come to our library every Thursday and read a book every week; they like English and want to learn quickly.
 - 4 Their children walk to school every morning and look for their friends on the way; when they see them they run to them and laugh and play and enjoy themselves until they hear the school bell.
 - 5 Our friends leave for Torquay at three today and arrive there about seven; they spend their holidays there every year and swim in the sea or sleep nearly all the time. They forget their work, enjoy the sea air and live as free as birds. Their holidays finish in August, they catch an early train back to London and feel well and happy when they return to work.
 - 6 The boys wake up at seven o'clock, wash, dress quickly and run into the dining-room for breakfast. They wait until they hear the bell and then go to school.
 - 7 These men go to work by train every day. They stay in the train for half an hour and sit or stand there and read their newspapers. They try to read all the news during the journey and in that way know a lot about the topics of the day.
 - 8 Two of my friends hate reading but love to go to the pictures; such people lose a lot of pleasure in life and generally get bored very quickly.

- 9 These boys play in the garden every morning and usually break something or tear their clothes or cut themselves when they fall. Small boys cry when they hurt themselves, but as they grow older they hide their feelings and become less noisy.
- 10 My friends tell me that professors are people who think a lot, but say little, and that school-teachers are people who say a lot but think little.
- 11 Housewives have to work very hard. They cook the meals, lay the table and wash up, clean the house and mend the clothes. Sometimes they also do the washing and ironing and look after the garden.
- 12 My friends go to the office every day, and play cards every evening. On Saturdays they go to the cinema, and Sundays they spend by the river.
- 13 Dogs make better pets than cats because they are more friendly. They understand and obey their masters, but cats like to live their own life.
- 14 They go to France on business several times a year. They take a train to Dover and cross the Channel by hovercraft. At Calais they hire a car, drive to the place they want to reach, and find a good hotel there.
- 15 Babies are a great nuisance; they need attention all the time. If they do not disturb you by crying, they have to be fed, bathed or looked after. They do not even thank the people who take care of them.

21.6

Intermediate

The auxiliary verbs (except do, be, and have) take no -s in the third person singular.

* * *

- Read quickly in the singular:
 - 1 They know English well and can answer all my questions.
 - 2 My friends do not understand when they speak quickly.

- 3 Must they leave before supper or have they time to stay until my friends come?
- 4 They may go to London but they are not certain yet.
- 5 These books cost more than my friends want to pay.
- 6 Those ladies play tennis well, but they cannot swim.
- 7 Where have they been today and where do they go tomorrow?
- 8 When will these girls finish the exercises they were doing last week?
- 9 My children get up very early and must walk to school every day.
- 10 Little boys sometimes push little girls and pull their hair.
- 11 Our fathers work in an office and do not come home for lunch.
- 12 They cannot speak French and have never learnt English.
- 13 If your friends are tired, they ought to spend a holiday by the sea.
- 14 Why do they open all the windows and let the flies come in?
- 15 They think that their friends may come later.
- 16 Their teachers tell them that they make too many mistakes in their homework.
- 17 If students read their homework when they have finished it, they will generally find many mistakes themselves.
- 18 They go to work by car and come home on foot.
- 19 They do not believe her stories because they know they are not true.
- 20 Can the police find the books they have lost?

PRESENT TENSE

21.7 Elementary

Make sure the fundamental distinction between the PRESENT SIMPLE and CONTINUOUS is well understood. PRESENT SIMPLE. Habitual actions and general truths; not necessarily NOW. PRESENT CONTINUOUS, the REAL PRESENT = NOW at this moment.

- Supply a suitable present tense of the given verb:
 - 1 She (go) to school every day.
 - 2 We now (learn) English.
 - 3 The sun always (shine) in Egypt.
 - 4 I (sit) on a chair and (eat) a banana.
 - 5 Bad students never (work) hard.
 - 6 It (rain) in winter. It (rain) now.
 - 7 I (wake up) at seven and (have) breakfast at half past.
 - 8 He generally (sing) in English but today he (sing) in French.
 - 9 The teacher (point) at the blackboard when he (want) to explain something.
 - 10 Mother (cook) some food in the kitchen at present; she always (cook) in the mornings.
 - 11 The sun (rise) in the east; now it (set) and night (fall).
 - 12 That man in the white hat who (walk) past the window (live) next door.
 - 13 Architects (make) the plans of buildings.
 - 14 I (wear) a coat because the sun (not shine).
 - 15 I always (meet) you on the corner of this street.
 - 16 The baby (cry) because it is hungry now.
 - 17 I (spend) this weekend in Eastbourne. I (go) there nearly every week.
 - 18 'Where are you?' 'I (sit) in the kitchen.' 'What you (do) there?' 'I (help) my mother.'
 - 19 'Why you (wash) those clothes this morning?' 'Because the sun (shine); I never (wash) clothes when there are clouds in the sky.'
 - 20 'Where you (go) now?' 'I (go) to the theatre.' 'I (go) tonight also, but I (not go) very often.' 'I (go) every week, but tonight I (go) for the second time in three days.'

21.8 Intermediate

Remember that when is not used with PRESENT CONTINUOUS, unless it has the sense of immediate future. The answer always echoes the tense of the question.

* * *

- Answer the following questions:
 - 1 Are you eating anything? When do you eat?

- 2 What are you doing? What am I doing? Do I do this every lesson?
- 3 Do you dance? Is X dancing?
- 4 Does Miss Y sing? Is Miss Y singing?
- 5 Why do you look so sad? Are you falling in love? When did you fall in love?
- 6 Is that a personal question? Do you answer personal questions? Why not? Am I being rude to ask such questions? What do you think?
- 7 What are you thinking of? Do you think hard when you do your homework?
- 8 Where do you live? Do you come here by tram? Do you sleep at home every night?
- 9 Are you sleeping now? Do you ever sleep in class?
- 10 Why do I teach you English? Am I teaching you today? Do you teach English? Are you learning any English?
- 11 What are you doing here? Mr X is learning English too, isn't he? Do you think he learns very much? Perhaps he works harder than (not so hard as) you.
- 12 Why are you laughing (smiling), Miss P?
- 13 Do I like correcting your homework? Why not?
- 14 Are you listening carefully, Mr Z? Do you listen to the questions I ask the other students? Ought we to do that?
- 15 Do you understand the use of the two present tenses quite well? Are you making notes about them? Do you ever make language notes?

21.9 Intermediate

Certain verbs are practically never used in the PRESENT CONTINUOUS, even when describing the real present. These are mainly verbs of condition or behaviour not strictly under human control; consequently they go on whether we like it or not. Take an obvious example:

I see a man outside; he is looking at me.

Although these are both 'real' present, the verb see is not used in the continuous form. I have no control over what I see; I see all the time my eyes are open; but I can decide what to look at, and can change the direction of my gaze from one NOW to the next. Cf. hear and listen to. (For list of such verbs, see Exercise 21.10.)

Also point out I am coming soon, etc., as an immediate future.

- Supply a suitable present tense:
 - 1 Ships (travel) from Southampton to New York in four or five days.
 - 2 John (travel) to England tomorrow.
 - 3 On my way to work I generally (meet) many children who (go) to school.
 - 4 Look, a man (run) after the bus. He (want) to catch it.
 - 5 It (be) very cold now. You (think) it (freeze)?
 - 6 The sun (warm) the air and (give) us light.
 - 7 'What you (read) when you are on holiday?' 'I (read) detective stories. Now I (read) The Shut Door by Ivor Lock.'
 - 8 'You (hear) anything?' 'I (listen) hard but I can't hear anything.'
 - 9 'I (see) that you (wear) your best clothes. You (go) to a party?' 'No, I (go) to a wedding.' 'And who is the unhappy man who (throw) away his freedom? You must tell him I (feel) sorry for him.' 'He (speak) to you now!'
 - 10 'You (speak) French?' 'I only (use) a foreign language when I (travel) abroad.'
 - 11 My children (work) very hard. John (study) for an examination now.
 - 12 Joan (swim) very well, but she (not dive).
 - 13 'What music you (play) next?' 'Sheila (sing) a song by Schubert; she (sing) it very well.'
 - 14 Wood (float) on water, but iron (not float).
 - 15 'You (understand) the present tense now?' 'I (do) an exercise on it at this moment and I (think) that I (know) how to use it now.'

21.10 Advanced

The following list contains the more important verbs that are not usually found in CONTINUOUS tense forms.

have (= possess, own)
be (except in PASSIVE VOICE) see, hear, notice, recognize smell and taste (when intransitive) believe, feel (that), think (that) know, understand remember, recollect, forget suppose, mean, gather (that) want, wish forgive, refuse love, hate, (dis)like, care seem, appear (= seem), belong to, contain, consist of, possess, own, matter

In general these verbs are found in the continuous form only when we wish to give special emphasis to their particular application to this very moment; more rarely as an immediate future. Most of these exceptional uses are more frequent in spoken English; notice in particular the present continuous with always or for ever, meaning 'at all times, but especially now at this moment'.

You're always seeing something strange.

Your mother is for ever refusing to do something or other.

Here are a few more exceptional continuous forms:

I'm seeing him tomorrow.

We are certainly not recognizing such a fantastic claim.

I was just thinking it might be a good idea . . .

Are you forgetting your manners?

Are you supposing I'm going to take you out?

How are you liking it (= enjoy)?

We are thinking of going out.

Now you're just being silly.

22 Notes on English Tenses

FOR THE TEACHER OR ADVANCED STUDENTS

Before proceeding with the tenses, a few notes on the presentation of the English verb system might be appropriate. Students who have been learning English for eighteen months or more are presumably already acquainted with the English tenses. It is however unlikely that they have any conception of the tense-scheme as a whole, and such students should be shown its general mechanism as a kind of bird's-eye-view revision. More elementary students should gradually be made aware of this scheme as the various new tenses offer points of comparison with those already learnt. Advanced students might also find this very enlightening before they attempt any of the later advanced exercises on the use of tenses.

ASPECT OF GENERAL TIME

English has three main time divisions, PAST, PRESENT, and FUTURE, expressed by the simple tenses. They should be shown as forming three main blocks of tenses, each being subdivided so as to express other aspects within its general time. The PRESENT SIMPLE tense is also used to express eternal truths; it has the least definite TIME ASPECT, as it frequently includes PAST, PRESENT, and FUTURE.

Man is mortal.

The sun rises in the east.

ASPECT OF ACTION

Here we are concerned with an act AT THE TIME OF ITS OCCURRENCE. The SIMPLE tenses are used to express such an action, completed in the past, present, or future. The time may be more or less precise according to the time adverb. I bought a new hat last Thursday, is clearly more precise than I bought a new hat last week. The CONTINUOUS forms also describe the very act, and do so while it is in progress; we are not interested in its beginning or end. So by using the continuous form as a time background, we can make our simple tense actions even more precise. For example, in I was buying a hat when I first met my wife, the background of hat-buying (we are not interested in its beginning or end, only in its taking place) marks the exact time of this momentous meeting, an act that was completed within the framework of hat-buying. Compare the following sentences:

He took my photo while I was having dinner.

I had my dinner while he was taking my photo.

The first one is the normal arrangement, but the second suggests either that the photographer is exceptionally slow or that I am a very quick eater.

ASPECT OF FACT

Here we are not interested in the action but in the completed fact and its relationship to a given general time aspect. The PERFECT tenses express this idea. When we say, for example, I've bought a new hat, we are calling attention to the present possession of the article and not the previous act of buying. But if I add yesterday, I must say I bought, because the mention of a past time automatically throws our mind back into the time when the action took place.

The same idea is similarly expressed in the other general time aspects. In the past, I had bought + a past moment to bring it into proper perspective; and in the future I shall have bought ... by some stipulated point in the future. The form I have bought is naturally considered in relation to NOW. This relation to NOW may be real, e.g. I've read three books since I last saw you (where the past moment is actually connected to NOW by since); or the present interest in a past action may be emphasized by already, just, not yet, or ever; or we may use this tense when we do not imply any definite time in the past and are merely interested in the completed fact as we know it now. This is probably the commonest form; e.g.

I've read that book. (= I know what it's all about)

I read it years ago. (interest in the past action)

Have you done your homework? (= Is it here now?)

Did you do your homework last night? (= interest in last night's activities)

She has eaten all the cream cakes. (= and now there aren't any left for me)

She ate all the cream cakes. (Extract from someone's description of a party. He is relating a sequence of events during this well-defined past period of the party; he is interested in the young lady's gluttonous act as it took place and not in the lack of cakes caused by it.)

I've never seen one. (So I don't know what it looks like)

I saw a pink one in a shop window. (The definite place implies a definite past time)

I've already asked you three times for a glass of water. (and this is the fourth time)

Perhaps the names Before-past, Before-present and Before-future might be more reasonable names than PERFECT, because this name is given to a tense made in the same way as the English PRESENT PERFECT in many other European languages. But with most of these languages the distinction between PAST SIMPLE (Preterite) and PRESENT PERFECT has been lost, so that we have a confusion that is not possible in English. The form of the English PRESENT PERFECT is now commonly used in other languages as a sort of colloquial past, and it is very difficult to stamp out the foreign student's desire to use the English tense in the same way. Compare the following random examples, where the presence or omission of the time-adverb seems immaterial; in English the tense must change too.

Je l'ai vu (hier).

L'ho visto (ieri).

Am văzut-o (eri).

Ich habe ihn (gestern) gesehen.

Viděl jsem ho (včera).

The greatest care must be taken to impress on students that the PRESENT PERFECT tense belongs to PRESENT TIME and may not under any circumstances be used on an occasion notionally defined or implied as PAST.

23 Present Perfect Tense

23.1 Elementary

See appropriate remarks in preceding note on English verb system.

The PRESENT PERFECT is probably the commonest tense in the English language, but it is the one the student of English usually finds the most difficult to learn.

Characteristics that a student must eventually grasp:

The three PERFECT tenses (present, past and future) express the completion or 'perfection' of an action BY a given time; NOT an act done AT a given time.

The PRESENT PERFECT therefore expresses the completion or 'perfection' of an action by NOW.

Therefore it is, strictly speaking, a kind of present tense, because we are NOT interested in WHEN the action took place, we are only interested in the PRESENT state of completion; i.e. its effect NOW.

So this tense must never be used if we state or suggest a definite time in the past. This is perhaps the commonest misuse of the tense.

Having learnt how to form the tense, the students can practise it in a drill similar to that for the present continuous tense, answering by simple imitation of the question in a natural setting.

- 20 Have you written down all these questions?

23.3

Elementary

Since and For. Since is always associated with a PERFECT tense. For is also used with the PRESENT PERFECT tense when it means 'length of time up to NOW'.

Since denotes 'from some definite POINT OR PERIOD in the past till NOW'. (Time other than NOW need not concern us for the moment.)

For denotes 'a LENGTH of time till NOW'.

I haven't seen you since Monday.

I haven't seen you for a week.

The difference between since and for is not made in all languages (cf. French depuis, German seit), and the tense in other languages is usually simple present.

Je suis ici depuis une heure, depuis six heures et demie.

Ich bin hier seit einer Stunde . . . seit halb sieben.

Since and for must be constantly practised.

(23.3)

- Complete the following sentences with the given alternatives:

- 1 I haven't seen you. Christmas/three days.
- 2 We've been here. an hour and a half/January.
- 3 She hasn't spoken to me. more than two years/last week.
- 4 They have lived in this street. 1919/the last ten years/a long time.
- 5 I haven't had time to do it. I was ill/last Monday.
- 6 We haven't bought any new ones. a week/ages/then.
- 7 There hasn't been a famine here. centuries/the Middle Ages.
- 8 I haven't eaten any meat. over a year/I was a boy.
- 9 Nobody has written to me. many weeks/my birthday.
- 10 You've asked the same question every day. the beginning of the year/the last fortnight.
- 11 You haven't sent me any money. last Saturday/fifteen days.
- 12 She has worn the same old dress. at least a month/the beginning of the month.
- 13 I haven't spoken Spanish. 1925/ten years.

PRESENT

PERFECT

CONTINUOUS

Sometimes an action, beginning indefinitely in the past, is still continuing at the present moment. This frequently happens with verbs of a static nature, such as stay, wait, sit, stand, lie, study, learn, live, rest, etc. Such verbs are rarely found in the simple PRESENT PERFECT, because by their very nature they continue into the present. So has lain, etc. is rare; has been lying, etc., common.

If we do not suggest duration from the past, the PRESENT CONTINUOUS is used; but as soon as we imply a relationship between the past and NOW, the PERFECT CONTINUOUS must be used.

He is lying on the floor. (NOW)

He has been lying there for three hours. (= and there he is still)

I'm writing a letter to my friend. (NOW)

I've written three letters since breakfast. (= completed up to NOW)

I've been writing letters all the morning. (= and I'm still writing NOW)

* * *

- Read the following, putting the verbs into the PRESENT PERFECT CONTINUOUS form:

- 1 I (live) here since 1928.
- 2 The cat (sit) in front of the fire since tea-time.
- 3 I (look) at this picture for five minutes, but I can't see you in it.
- 4 I'm afraid you (look) at the wrong one.
- 5 I know you (talk) about grammar for the last half-hour, but I'm afraid I (not listen).
- 6 You (wait) long for me?
- 7 Yes! I (stand) here in the rain for half an hour.
- 8 He (learn) English for three years, but he can't even read a newspaper yet.
- 9 Nobody has come to see us since we (live) in our new house.
- 10 What you (do) while I have been out? We (sit) here writing our homework, but it's not quite finished yet.
- 11 He (work) in the Post Office for twenty years.
- 12 Lunch is not quite ready yet, although I (cook) all the morning.
- 13 She ought to stop work; she has a headache because she (read) too long.

- 14 They are tired because they (work) in the garden since nine o'clock.
 15 Look! that light (burn) all night.

We sometimes use the PRESENT PERFECT CONTINUOUS merely to emphasize the fact that an action has been un-interrupted, even though it is not continuing now.

I'm cold because I've been swimming for an hour.
 I'm very tired; I've been running round the town all day.

- 3 He (not be) here since Christmas; I wonder where he (live) since then.
- 4 I (try) to learn English for years, but I (not succeed) yet.
- 5 We (live) here for the last six months, and just (decide) to move.
- 6 You already (drink) three cups of tea since I (sit) here.
- 7 That book (lie) on the table for weeks. You (not read) it yet?
- 8 I (wait) here for her since seven o'clock and she (not come) yet.
- 9 He (not have) a holiday for nine years because he (be) too busy.
- 10 Since you gave me your number I (phone) you four times and (not find) you at home.
- 11 You (be) asleep all the morning? I (ring) the bell for the last twenty minutes.
- 12 She (work) so hard this week that she (not have) time to go to the hairdresser's.
- 13 He (write) a novel for the last two years, but he (not finish) it yet.

- 14 I (not find) a wife, though I (look) for one ever since I was twenty.
 15 Mary (rest) in the garden all day because she (be) ill.

Notice:

He has gone to London.
 He has been to London.

Students are often puzzled by this apparent misuse of the preposition to after the verb be. Actually I have been must be considered as part of the verb go, an extension of I have gone with the meaning 'I have gone and come back again.' So

He has gone to London

– and that's where you can find him now

He has been to London

– and so he can tell you what he did there; he knows London now.

* * *

● Read the following, putting the verb in the correct form, PRESENT PERFECT SIMPLE and CONTINUOUS:

- 1 John isn't in. He (go) to the pictures again although he (be = go) twice already this week.
- 2 They (not speak) to each other since they quarrelled.
- 3 That grandfather clock (stand) there for as long as I can remember.
- 4 Cyril (try) to take me out to dinner for the last three weeks.
- 5 How long you (learn) English?
- 6 I (wait) here nearly half an hour for Maisie; do you think she (forget) to come?
- 7 My clothes (hang) in the wardrobe all the time I was away, and now I see the moths (eat) great holes in them.
- 8 My watch (go) for three days and it (not run down) yet.
- 9 He (lose) his books. He (look) for them all the afternoon, but they (not turn up) yet.
- 10 You ever (see) a live rhinoceros? You just (look)

- at the picture of one I shot in Africa last year.
- 11 Jack (go) to Switzerland for a holiday; I never (be = go) there.
 - 12 He only (write) to me once since he went away; I (send) him four letters.
 - 13 She (read) all the works of Dickens and Scott. How many you (read)?
 - 14 I (sit) for my portrait for the last six months, but the artist (not finish) it yet.
 - 15 You must wake her! She (sleep) soundly for ten hours!

 - 19 I (not have) a good night's sleep — last week.
 - 20 He (learn) to drive — seven years now, but he still (not pass) his driving test.

FINAL NOTE ON PRESENT PERFECT TENSE

Certain uses of the PRESENT PERFECT, quite natural to an English-speaking person, strike a foreign student as being very odd. One has already been mentioned (see Exercise 23.6). Another oddity rises out of the use of the PRESENT PERFECT for a period of time that is not yet over. We use this tense with this year, this month, this week, etc., because the action referred to is automatically brought up to NOW, since the time passes on into the future.

I've been to the pictures twice this week.

You haven't done me a single exercise this month.

Have you had a holiday this year?

What have you been doing today?

But notice that we unconsciously change the tense with this morning or this afternoon, according to the time of the day when we are speaking.

(11.0 a.m.) We've done a lot of work this morning, haven't we?

(8.0 p.m.) We did a lot of work this morning, didn't we?

A very strong, though unconscious, sense of time is present in English speech, and one of its most important manifestations is in this clear-cut division between PRESENT PERFECT and PAST tenses.

It is, of course, possible to say I saw him this week (some time), where the speaker is fixing his mind on a definite moment of past time and considering the act at that particular moment; the speaker just couldn't remember the exact day. Also, as a short cut: I went to the pictures twice last week and once this week, where I've been should be inserted after and.

24 Past Tense

24.1 Elementary FORM OF PAST TENSE

The great majority of English verbs form the PAST SIMPLE TENSE and PAST PARTICIPLE by adding the sound [d], [t], or [ɪd] to the stem – serve, pass, want. These are the regular verbs, sometimes called weak verbs.

The irregular verbs, as with most other European languages, include most of the verbs of the highest frequency. Those which change the vowel sound within the stem are often called strong verbs – swim, break, lead. Other irregular verbs add [d] or [t] and also change the vowel sound – hear, sweep. Verbs of one fairly large class already ending in [d] or [t] make no change – spread, put.

25 Frequency or Pre-verb Adverbs

25.1 Elementary

Students will probably have noticed that some very common adverbs, usually answering the question How often? come immediately before the PRINCIPAL verb of the sentence.

I often see him.

I have often seen him.

They come AFTER the verb be.

She is always late.

You are never to come late again.

The most important adverbs of this type are:

often, never, always, sometimes, generally, usually, just.

See also Exercise 25.2.

Other common adverbs coming in this position are:

almost, nearly, quite, hardly, scarcely.

* * *

● Read the following sentences with the given adverb:

- 1 I go to the pictures (often).
- 2 I have seen an elephant (never).
- 3 She is a good student (always).
- 4 I do my homework (usually).
- 5 I forget my homework (sometimes).
- 6 We try to work well (always).
- 7 We are very busy (generally).
- 8 My mother goes for a walk on Sundays (often).
- 9 The buses are full in this town (usually).
- 10 They have heard of it (never).
- 11 The student on my left (right) makes mistakes (always).
- 12 The student on my right (left) answers correctly (never).
- 13 My friend stays long (never).
- 14 I am going for a walk (just).
- 15 She has come in (just).
- 16 I travel by train (usually).
- 17 Mary can swim now (nearly).

- 18 She knows what to say about it (scarcely).
- 19 I can't understand (quite).
- 20 The porter was able to carry my luggage (hardly).
- 21 We have finished this exercise (almost).
- 22 The children quarrel with each other (often).
- 23 Her death has upset me (quite).
- 24 I drink my tea with milk (generally).
- 25 He gets up before half past nine (never).

25.2 Intermediate and Advanced

(1) Other important adverbs of the type mentioned in Exercise 25.1 are:

ever, scarcely ever, hardly ever, nearly always, seldom, rarely, occasionally, frequently, already.

Ever is used in questions and sentences with a negative modifier or suggestion of doubt.

Have you ever been here before?

If you ever come to Spain, you must look me up.

(2) Adverbs of variable position, like nearly, only, just, behave as above when modifying the verb.

He lent it to me only. (= not you)

He only lent it to me. (= didn't give it)

(3) All these adverbs may be used before auxiliaries when emphasizing them.

Mary is late again. – Yes, she always is late.

Why don't you do your homework in time? – But I always do do it in time!

I never could do difficult sentences like these!

(4) The two auxiliaries taking to with the infinite, viz. used to, have to, usually have the adverb before them.

I scarcely ever had to ask him what to do.

You always used to agree with me.

I shall never have to see his ugly face again.

Ought to sometimes behaves as above in spoken English but it is generally held to be slovenly and uneducated to say 'You always ought to get up early' instead of

You ought always to get up early.

Need to and dare to behave as ordinary verbs when used affirmatively.

(5) When the auxiliaries are used as responses, etc. and imply the full verb they are associated with, they are spoken with stress and preceded by the frequency adverb if there is one.

Do you think we can get something to eat there? – Well, we usually can/No, we never can.

(6) Nowadays never is commonly used merely as a re-inforced form of not, e.g. Never used to, already referred to in Exercise 14.3.

You need never address me as 'Sir'.

And the very colloquial expression of astonishment
Well, I never did! (= 'Well, I never did hear anything like that before!')

(25.2) ● Read the following sentences, putting in the given adverb:

- 1 'I have seen a worse piece of work (rarely).' 'I have (never).'
- 2 'Cyril used to call me by my first name (always).' 'In my opinion he ought to have spoken to you at all! (never)'
- 3 'Were you able to understand mathematical problems? (ever)' 'No, I could! (never)'
- 4 'I've been able to get in for nothing (nearly always).' 'I have been so lucky (never); I have to pay (always).'

26.3 Elementary PAST CONTINUOUS TENSE

When the time of a past action is defined in relation to another action, the one that is a kind of background to the other is put into the PAST CONTINUOUS. We use it to show interest in the action itself as it is actually taking place; we are not interested in its completion.

Compare the following:

I met him when he crossed the street.

– two consecutive acts: he crossed the street and THEN I met him

I met him when he was crossing the street.

– the time of 'meeting' is defined as 'in the middle of the act of crossing'

Looked at in a diagram:

The weak pronunciation of was and were should be insisted on for the full form of PAST CONTINUOUS; they only take strong pronunciation in short-form responses, etc.

He was resting all the afternoon. [wəz]

I was, too. [wɒz]

* * *

- Complete the PAST CONTINUOUS form in the following:
 - 1 I (read) a book when he came in.
 - 2 The sun (shine) when we went out.
 - 3 He (sit) in the garden when the house fell down.
 - 4 When you came in I (write).
 - 5 I came in while he (write).
 - 6 It (rain) this morning when I got up.
 - 7 He (work) all day yesterday.
 - 8 Who you (talk) to in the club last night when I asked you for a cigarette?
 - 9 We (live) in France when the war began.
 - 10 When I arrived at his house he still (sleep).
 - 11 The boy jumped off the bus while it (move).
 - 12 The fire still (burn) at six o'clock this morning.
 - 13 He (walk) across the bridge when his hat blew off.

- 14 She cut her finger while she (cut) the bread and butter.
- 15 The bus started while I (get) on.
- 16 When I (listen) to the radio last night, I heard a loud scream.
- 17 The light went out while we (have) supper.
- 18 She finished the housework while she (cook) the lunch.
- 19 The children (do) their homework when their father came back from the office.
- 20 I took another cake when you (not look)!

26.4 Elementary

See Exercise 26.3.

Remember that if the actions are consecutive they appear in PAST SIMPLE tense.

This is the same with habitual actions in the past.

I (always) wear a hat when it snows.

I (always) wore a hat when it snowed.

The PAST CONTINUOUS is used when we are not interested in the completion of one or more actions, but simply in the fact that they are in progress at the time something else happens.

* * *

- Supply suitable past tenses of the verbs in brackets:
 - 1 He (sit) in a café when I (see) him.
 - 2 When I (go) out the sun (shine).
 - 3 The boy (fall down) while he (run).
 - 4 When the war (begin) we (live) in London.
 - 5 The light (go out) while I (have) tea.
 - 6 I (have) tea when the light (go out).
 - 7 My friends (sing) when I (come) into the room.
 - 8 While you (play) the piano I (write) a letter.
 - 9 When I (be) at school I (learn) Latin. (To be has no continuous form.)
 - 10 He (eat) his dinner when I (go) to see him.
 - 11 When my grandmother (go) for a walk she always (wear) gloves.
 - 12 When it (rain) she (carry) an umbrella.
 - 13 She (die) while she (run) after a bus.
 - 14 We (drink) coffee every day when we (be) in France.

- 15 You (wear) your new hat when I (meet) you yesterday.
- 16 When I (have) a dog I always (take) him out for a walk in the evening.
- 17 When the phone (ring), I (have) a bath.
- 18 I (lay) the table for dinner while you (wash) your hands.
- 19 When we (live) in that house we (have) three servants.
- 20 Large crowds (wait) at the station when the Prime Minister (arrive).

26.5 Intermediate

See Exercises 26.3, 4.

Seeing that in general the continuous tenses are used to express our interest in the action in progress (i.e. not in its completion, but only in the fact of its taking place), a sentence like:

He was reading a book while I was mending his socks, tells us of two past actions in progress at the same time, but tells us nothing of their beginning or end. Certain verbs (Exercises 21.9, 10) are rare in the continuous forms.

- Put the verbs in the following sentences into a suitable past tense; notice where sensible alternatives are possible:
 - 1 I (speak) to her several times, but she always (read) and (not hear) me.
 - 2 He (lose) his watch while he (see) the sights of the city.
 - 3 He (teach) English for two months when he (live) in Germany and (work) as a journalist.
 - 4 I (open) the door just as Cyril (ring) the bell.
 - 5 The house (burn) fast, so we (break) a window to get out.
 - 6 Maisie (cook) fish when I first (ask) her to marry me.
 - 7 We (walk) to the station when it (begin) to rain.
 - 8 We (run) under a bridge when the storm (break).
 - 9 My sister (drop) two cups while she (wash up) last night; neither of them (break).
 - 10 She (put) on her raincoat when it (start) to rain.
 - 11 When the teacher (come) in, the boys (play).

- 12 The ship (sink), so all the passengers (jump) into the boats.
- 13 He (think) of something else all the time you (talk) to him.
- 14 He (eat) three sandwiches while you (talk) to him.
- 15 When I (see) him, he (sing) and (smoke) a cigar at the same time.
- 16 Maisie (peel) potatoes when Cyril (ask) her to marry him.
- 17 The dog (bite) her on the ankle while she (catch) it.
- 18 While he (get) off the tram, he (fall) and (cut) his face.
- 19 He (lean) against the door and (listen) to the radio when I first (try) to speak to him.
- 20 While he (write) a letter the telephone (ring); as he (go) to answer it, he (hear) a knock at the door; the telephone still (ring) while he (walk) to the door; but just as he (open) it, it (stop).

See Exercises 26.3–5.

The relationship between simple and continuous tenses is often clearer in continuous narration.

- Supply suitable past tenses:

We (enter) Port Said harbour when I (come) on deck. As soon as our ship (come) near enough, a large number of boats (set out) from the shore. We could see that they (bring) money-changers, guides, and men selling all the wonderful things of the East. While I (leave) the ship I (notice) that the rest of the passengers (argue) about the prices in loud voices. I (walk) about for an hour and (watch) the gay street life; men (sell) strange fruits and vegetables, and tradesmen (mend) shoes or (make) carpets in their little shops. I (return) to my ship as the sun (set); the 'market' on the ship still (continue). An old man who (sit) on the deck (offer) me a beautiful Persian rug for only £20. I (talk) hard for ten minutes, and just as the ship (go) I (buy) it for £2. As I (go) to my cabin I (see) a sailor with a rug like mine. I (ask) him the price. 'Fifty pence,' he said, 'but I (pay) too much for it. A man that I (talk) to just now only (pay) twenty-five pence.' As I (undress) that night, I (notice) a little piece of cloth which (hang) from one corner of my rug. On it were the words 'Made in Manchester'.

Other uses of the PAST CONTINUOUS.

Repeated actions in the past.

He was always telling me to do things I didn't want to do.

Reported speech forms.

He is coming this evening.

She said (that) he was coming that evening.

He is going to kill me.

I felt sure he was going to kill me.

* * *

- Put the verbs in the following sentences into the most suitable past tense:
 - 1 Scenes from the whole of his past life (flash) through the sailor's mind as he (drown).
 - 2 He (remember) the day he first (go) to school.
 - 3 The other children (go) to their classrooms as his mother (lead) him into the hall, and everyone (turn) and (stare) at him.
 - 4 The next thing he (remember) was the face of the headmaster, who (stand) on the platform.
 - 5 It was a long and stern face, but with eyes that (twinkle) in a kindly way.
 - 6 Later when he had left school and (look) for a job, he (meet) a school-friend of his whose uncle was a merchant seaman.
 - 7 Shortly afterwards he (run) away to sea with his friend and soon (work) as a cabin boy on the Saucy Sue.
 - 8 He quickly (discover) that he was expected to do a good many different jobs.

- 9 If he (not peel) potatoes, he (wash) up the crockery or (scrub) the decks or (clean) the Captain's sea-boots.
- 10 By the time the Saucy Sue (reach) New York, her first port of call, he (feel) at least ten years older; he always (complain) he had too much work.
- 11 In due course he (marry), and although his wife's name was not Sue, he (find) her a saucy thing.
- 12 She (always nag) him, and she (allow) him no peace except when she was asleep.
- 13 One day, while his wife (stay) at her mother's for a weekend, he (run) away for the second time.
- 14 He forever (grumble) about his fate, and (decide) that he was not a lucky man.
- 15 Like all sailors, he was superstitious, and (feel) convinced that something terrible (go) to happen to him.
- 16 He was right, for his ship (strike) a rock and (tear) a gaping hole in her side when she (make) for America.
- 17 As the ship (sink) fast he (jump) overboard, together with the rest of the crew who were still alive.
- 18 He (cling) to a small raft that (float) in the sea, and thus (keep) himself afloat.
- 19 He (be) bitterly cold, and he (begin) to wish that death would come and end his misery.
- 20 While he (wish) this, a piece of floating timber (strike) him on the head, and he was unable to hang on to the raft any longer.

- Put the verbs in the following passage into a suitable PAST tense form (SIMPLE OR CONTINUOUS):
The afternoon sun (get) low as the Rat (scull) gently homewards in a dreamy mood, murmuring poetry-things over to himself, and not paying much attention to Mole. But the Mole (be) very full of lunch and self-satisfaction and pride, and already quite at home in a boat – so he thought – and (get) a bit restless besides; and presently he (say) 'Ratty! Please, I want to row now!'

The Rat (shake) his head with a smile. But he (begin) to feel more and more jealous of Rat, sculling so strongly and so easily along, and his pride (begin) to whisper that he (can) do it every bit as well. He (jump) up and (seize) the sculls so suddenly that the Rat, who (gaze) out over the water and (say) more poetry-things to himself, was taken by surprise and (fall) backwards off his seat with his legs in the air for the second time, while the triumphant Mole (take) his place and (grab) the sculls with entire confidence.

28 The Future and Future Perfect

PRELIMINARY NOTE ON THE FUTURE FORMS

Consider the following sentences:

She is going to know in a minute.

You are taking your medicine every three hours!

I'm going to come with you if you like.

Sometimes the baby's going to cry for hours on end.

I shall go at once because I can see you will be rude to me.

Am I going to leave without paying?

Will you leave without paying?

All these seem to be grammatically correct, but they would all sound wrong, or at best, unnatural in most contexts. Why? The problem of choosing the correct and natural future form is a very vexing one in modern English. The usual grammar-book rules for shall and will are already antiquated; even the increasingly popular going to sounds out of place sometimes, although wishful thinking has tried to make it the solution to all problems; and modern English uses is doing and will be doing very subtly. The ousting of shall and should (except in questions) by will and would is bringing about some simplification of speech and writing. Even will I? and will we? are frequently heard even in England. But custom has not yet decided in all cases, so that while different forms sometimes give a different sense, at other times no difference can be detected between them.

He'll buy one if you ask him. (indefinite)

He's going to buy one. (intention)

But there seems to be little difference between these:

He won't buy it unless it's cheap.

He's not going to buy it unless it's cheap.

In the following section on the expression of the FUTURE, some attempt has been made to analyse the customary speech-forms of well-educated people in natural conversation. The preference for particular forms in particular mental situations is noticed, and the exercises try to make these prominent. Notes and examples have had to be copious, and teachers and advanced students should go through them carefully.

Two golden rules have emerged:

- 1 Beware of the innocent-looking going to form.
- 2 When in doubt use will.

THE FUTURE

28.1 Elementary

Going to as a future form.

This is probably one of the commonest ways of expressing futurity in both spoken and written English. It is NOT a pure future. (See notes to Exercises 28.4–6.)

 - 2 When are we going to finish this book?
 - 3 When is Mr X going to start work?
 - 4 What are you going to do after the lesson?
 - 5 Where are we going to keep the chalk and duster?
 - 6 When are you going to have your next English lesson?
 - 7 Ask X if he (she) is going to watch TV tonight.

28.2
Elementary

Normal pure (or uncoloured) future is expressed by shall (first person), will (other persons), plus verb stem. It must be understood that when talking about people, the possibility of wish, will, promise or intention is always likely to be present. The purest futures are the least personal ones, especially when the future action is made to depend upon some external factors, as with if or when clauses. Except in questions, the will form is very commonly heard for all persons.

The SOUND-SIGN of futurity is —'ll + verb stem. Except as the first or last word of the utterance, the auxiliary shall for the pure future is usually pronounced [ʃl].

Must has future shall or will + have to; can has future shall or will + be able to.

But see also earlier exercises on must and can.

The following exercise is on the shall/will future, although some of the sentences might just as well be made with the going to future. Notice where going to is awkward or inappropriate, especially Nos. 4 and 15, understand, know. We found in Exercises 21.9, 10 that certain verbs avoid the continuous forms, probably because they are 'automatic' verbs that can scarcely be called into action at any given moment. Similarly it would be difficult to have any 'intention' regarding them, so that special circumstances are needed to make going to possible with them.

I shall know from his next letter.

I'm going to know the answer before I let you go.

* * *

● Put the following into the FUTURE SIMPLE tense; use the short form in negative sentences:

- 1 We always ask that question.
- 2 You never answer me correctly without the help of the book.
- 3 I never believe you.
- 4 You don't understand it.
- 5 I don't buy cheap things.
- 6 He never cleans his own shoes.
- 7 It doesn't cost very much.
- 8 We don't do any homework in the class.
- 9 Why doesn't she drink her cocoa?
- 10 I eat an orange every day.
- 11 He feels ill.
- 12 I never have much money.
- 13 You grow fatter every day.
- 14 It doesn't hurt you.
- 15 I know the answer now. (Tomorrow ...)
- 16 He can swim. (After six lessons ...)
- 17 I never look as pretty as her.
- 18 You must work harder.
- 19 I must read more books.
- 20 He doesn't like it at all.

28.4

Intermediate

Shall/will and going to. See previous Exercises.
Shall/will expresses pure futurity, hence is almost always found when the futurity depends on external circumstances, and not on any person's will or intention.

Try going to in these three sentences:

If you go with him, he'll give you a new one.

If you ever go to China, you'll see some queer things there.

You'll always find a welcome here whenever you call.

As a simple affirmative statement of intention, with no external circumstances (time, condition, reason, etc.) mentioned, the shall/will future tense is rare; where the futurity depends on the external circumstances, going to is rare.

He will sell his house. (rare)

He's going to sell his house. (normal)

He'll sell it if you ask him. (normal)

He is going to sell it if you ask him. (rare)

She'll know the answer. (normal; automatic verb, see notes to Exercise 28.3)

She is going to know. (rare)

The going to form is consequently rarely found when other clauses are present, because here the intention of a person is no longer important; it is a pure notional future depending on external circumstances.

More details about going to come in Exercises 28.5 and 28.6.

- Read each of the following sentences twice, referring to the future: first in shall/will form, and then in going to form. Replace the time expression in bold type by a future time expression if necessary.

EXAMPLE

He has just finished it.

ANSWER 1: He'll finish it next week.

ANSWER 2: He's going to finish it next week.

- 1 My sister cleaned my room yesterday.
- 2 We've already climbed the mountain.
- 3 They came here last year, didn't they?
- 4 It didn't cost so much a week ago.
- 5 He cut you a bigger piece of cake last time.
- 6 They didn't do any business with us in 1970.

- 7 Prices have gone up during the last few weeks.
- 8 Did he take you with him to the Zoo last time?
- 9 I have been very busy today.
- 10 He had a tooth pulled out yesterday.
- 11 He looked for you at the party last night.
- 12 Cyril hasn't shaved since yesterday.
- 13 I saw the queen three days ago.
- 14 We took our examinations in 1972.
- 15 Did we go out yesterday afternoon?
- 16 He stayed at home till six o'clock.
- 17 They haven't paid me since March.
- 18 Did Maisie know what to do?
- 19 Have you written to him since?
- 20 We didn't have time to see them all.

In most of these going to sounds better. Why? Why not in No. 18?

28.5

Elementary

See previous exercises and Exercise 28.6.

Going to. Notice that going to does not normally express simple futurity, but colours the future with INTENTION OF A FEELING OF CERTAINTY in the mind of the speaker.

He's going to write to me every week.

I'm going to climb to the top.

She's going to have a baby.

(A shall/will form would be out of place in these.)

That is why going to is more usual with persons than with things. Note use of going to in PASSIVE VOICE, where intention or certainty of the agent is implied:

This room is going to be cleaned.

All these trees are going to be cut down soon.

* * *

- Change the following sentences into the going to form of future:

- 1 He will leave tomorrow.
- 2 Where will he stay?
- 3 John will wait for us there.
- 4 We shall write letters all the afternoon.
- 5 He will lend me the money.
- 6 We shall eat them all.
- 7 The judge will ask you a few questions.

- 8 My father will build a new house.
- 9 We shall choose some new dresses.
- 10 I'm afraid it will cost a lot of money.
- 11 They will grow beans in their garden.
- 12 Mr Thomson will sell his house.
- 13 I'll sing it again this evening.
- 14 We'll work harder next year.
- 15 He'll speak to us about it.
- 16 The dining-room will be painted next week.
- 17 I shall have three weeks' holiday this year.
- 18 They will learn Russian.
- 19 That house will be pulled down soon.
- 20 I think I shall be sick.

28.6 Intermediate

Going to. There are many people who assert that this is the PURE FUTURE in English. Careful analysis of sentences with this form and shall/will form usually shows this to be untrue. There are instances when it MAY be so used, mostly in certain negatives, but the fundamental meaning seems to be as follows. (Try the effect of changing the forms round, and notice which is the natural one.)

WITH PERSONS: going to has the meaning of INTENTION OR CERTAINTY.

He's going to give me a new one tomorrow.
If you go with him, he'll give you a new one.

So you're off to China, are you? Well, you're going to see some queer things there.
If ever you go to China, you'll see some queer things there.

Surely you aren't going to put him to bed so soon?
If you want to come in for a chat, I'll put him to bed early.

I'm going to drink a glass of water.
I think I'll have a glass of water. (Cf. Exercise 28.5, No. 20; inevitably!)

You won't speak English well unless you go to England.
He says he's going to speak nothing but English when he goes to England.

Shall I leave without paying?
Are you going to leave without paying?

I wonder when he'll do it; I know he's going to.
I wonder when he's going to do it.

I'm going to give you one of these pills.
You'll take one of them every three hours!

WITH THINGS: going to has the meaning of probability or inevitability IN THE MIND OF THE SPEAKER.

This bus will take you to George Street.
Look out! The bus is going to overturn!

What's going to happen next?
What'll happen if you light the wrong end?

If there's a slump, things will get much dearer.
Now that there's a slump, things are going to get much dearer.

Malted milk will do you good. (It says so on the tin.)
This lovely malted milk is going to do you good. (I feel it in my bones.)

What time will the sun rise?
The sun's going to shine in a minute. (The cloud has nearly gone.)

It will rain. (Sense incomplete; no meaning.)

It's going to rain. (It seems so to me because I can see a storm coming up.)
As soon as the depression off Iceland gets further south, there will be a belt of rain across southern England.

This book will tell you all about it.
This book's going to be more difficult than I expected.

Notice that these differences, which are more clearly defined with persons than with things, are much less marked in the negative. Shan't, won't and not going to are more easily interchanged than their affirmative counterparts.

I'm afraid I shan't have time to finish it. (OR: I'm not going to)
I hope you're not going to buy any blue ones. (OR: you won't)

It is clear that no hard-and-fast rule can be given, as the difference is notional, not grammatical. In many cases either form is POSSIBLE, but the meaning will not always be the same.

- (28.6) ● Change the following sentences into the going to form of future:
- 1 She'll be married this spring.
 - 2 The strong man will lift all these weights above his head.
 - 3 I'll practise the violin all the afternoon.
 - 4 I know you will like my music.
 - 5 What! You won't come home this afternoon?
 - 6 I won't be treated like that!
 - 7 You won't get a ticket for my next concert.
 - 8 Cyril will walk home with me tonight.
 - 9 Maisie will sew on my buttons for me.

Like going to, the PRESENT CONTINUOUS can express a definite future, and its time is fairly immediate.

- We're going to the pictures this afternoon.
She's buying a new one soon.
They're playing some Beethoven next.

This form is scarcely ever used with THINGS, or with verbs of Exercise 21.10.

- Put the following into the immediate future of the PRESENT CONTINUOUS:
- 1 We shall start strong verbs on Monday.
 - 2 He'll come to see me the day after tomorrow.
 - 3 We shall set out at two o'clock.
 - 4 She will invite seven other people.
 - 5 I shall take her to the Zoo this afternoon.
 - 6 Will you stay at home tonight?
 - 7 They will see to it tomorrow.

- 8 I'll play tennis this afternoon.
- 9 He will use it again tomorrow.
- 10 The children will have cakes for tea today.
- 11 She will leave by the three o'clock train.
- 12 He'll give us a new one next week.

Just as the PRESENT CONTINUOUS is used as a definite immediate future, so the FUTURE CONTINUOUS is used as a definite but not-so-immediate future.

- He's playing a violin solo next. (OR going to)
He'll be playing some more later. (OR going to)

He's seeing him at once. (OR going to)

He'll be seeing him in a few minutes. (OR going to)

CONTINUOUS
FUTURE FORMS

He is going to do and he'll be doing have approximately the SAME MEANING, but the different grammatical form gives a DIFFERENT FEELING to each.

In the sentences:

(a) They are going to put on another play (soon).

(b) They'll be putting on another play soon.

(a) tells us the PRESENT intentions of the actors, (b) tells us of events at a future time, soon (which MUST be understood); it tells us of the RESULTS of the intention, but by-passes the intention itself.

From this we get the following second-person question-forms:

(a) Are you going to put on another play soon? (Direct question about intentions.)

(b) Will you be putting on another play soon? (The intentions themselves are by-passed and the question concerns future activities. This is more of a pure future, more remote, and therefore more polite.)

(c) Will you put on another play soon? (A request: please do so; we've enjoyed this one.)

The form in (b) is the modern equivalent of the older 'Shall you put on another play soon?' (Is it in your prearranged programme?)

● Turn the following into politer¹ questions by using the FUTURE CONTINUOUS form:

- 1 Are you going to use this spoon?
- 2 Are you going to need me any more tonight?
- 3 Are you going to stay here long?
- 4 Are you going to want any more like this?
- 5 When are we going to see you again?
- 6 When are you coming again?
- 7 What are you going to have for breakfast?
- 8 When are you going to post your letters?
- 9 When are you going to have the house painted?
- 10 When are you going to try the new ones?
- 11 When are you going to go away?
- 12 When are you going to have your next lesson?
- 13 When are you going to want your heater turned on?
- 14 How are you going to get back?
- 15 Where are you going to stay in Paris?
- 16 Are you going to spend much more time here?
- 17 Are you going to make any more cakes like these?
- 18 Which school are you going to send him to?
- 19 Are you going to pay for it yourself?
- 20 Are you going to have a haircut tomorrow?
- 21 Are you going to stay out all night again?
- 22 Do you require anything else?

¹ But politeness, in English, is very much more a matter of intonation than of words and syntax. A faulty intonation may make the 'politer' form less courteous than the less elaborate form.

- 23 Where are you spending your honeymoon?
 24 When are you going back to college?
 25 Are you going to visit Mary again this week?

COLOURED FUTURE WITH will/shall

Will used with first person colours the future with the speaker's intention or promise. But as most of our first person futures are presumably honest intentions, we find that will or 'll is one of the commonest future forms for all persons.

Shall with other persons colours the future with promise, compulsion or (in negative) restraint. It is not such a commonly used form as grammar books would suggest, its place more frequently being taken by a FUTURE SUBSTITUTE (see Exercises 28.14, 15).

I won't forget what you've told me. (promise)

You shan't leave till you promise to come again. (restraint)

You shall have it back tomorrow. (promise)

I'll begin again, and you shan't stop me this time.

He shall never come here again!

And notice, too, the use of will when asking for someone's co-operation:

If you'll wait here a moment, I'll fetch a chair.

– not to be confused with true condition

* * *

- Use shall or will in the following sentences:

- 1 You — not go until I know the truth.
- 2 You — have a piece of chocolate if you're good.
- 3 If you — look after the luggage I — buy the tickets.
- 4 You — have some more in a minute.
- 5 I'm determined he —n't come here again.
- 6 — you have a drink? What — it be?
- 7 I — see to it myself. You —n't pay a penny.
- 8 You — have a bicycle of your own when you're older.
- 9 '— you have tea or coffee?' 'I — have some tea, please.'
- 10 Members — not introduce more than three guests on any day.
- 11 'Britons never, never, never — be slaves.'
- 12 I promise you that you —n't lose by it.
- 13 If he —n't mend that stove, I — have to do it myself.
- 14 He — have what he asks for, but you —n't.
- 15 — you lend me £1 (a pound)? I — pay you back tomorrow.

28.13

See Exercise 28.12 on the will/shall future.

- Use shall and will in the following sentences, noticing where either is possible:
- 1 I —n't go to the tea-party unless you come with me.
- 2 I — come with you if you want me to.
- 3 — you? That's grand!
- 4 But let me warn you: I —n't stay any longer than an hour or so.
- 5 That's all right. I —n't stay any longer myself.
- 6 — there be many people there we know?
- 7 I can't tell you, but if Tom and Harry decide to go, we — know at least two people.
- 8 Tom is not the sort of person that enjoys tea-parties, but his mother seems determined he — go.
- 9 Poor Tom! I'm sure he —n't enjoy himself a bit.
- 10 Harry, on the other hand, — be in his element.
- 11 You're right. He — chatter to all the old women and flirt with all the pretty girls.
- 12 I'm glad you said 'pretty' girls. He —n't look at anyone who's not pretty enough to go on a chocolate-box.
- 13 Which reminds me: Anne — be there.
- 14 Why didn't you say so before? Now I know that, I — certainly come with you.
- 15 Good. By the way, when — Anne be taking her examination?
- 16 I don't know. We — probably find out tomorrow when we see her.
- 17 She's an undecided sort of person, isn't she? Her lecturer should say to her, 'You — take this examination next June, whether you want to or not.'
- 18 Quite right. People like Anne — only do things they are made to.
- 19 — there be any dancing after tea? If there is, I might take along with me a record of the old dance-tune, '— we dance the Polka?'
- 20 Please do. And we — make a point of being there punctually, so that Tom and Harry —n't say we've let them down.

FINAL NOTES

More advanced students frequently ask why we have both shall and will (and similarly should and would), so the following brief historical notes may be of interest.

Originally English had no separate future tense, and used the SIMPLE PRESENT instead. This is still an idiomatic way of expressing futurity in a vivid and flamboyant way, but, apart from a few stock phrases like The train leaves at 6.30, it is not very common; and these few stock phrases are often examples of the habitual present, and not futures at all!

There was also a form of the verb shall, with the meaning of command, compulsion or obligation; and a form of the verb will meaning 'want' or 'wish'. From these developed a PURE FUTURE tense, for both these ideas carry an idea of futurity with them.

But why choose I (we) shall and you (he, they) will for the PURE FUTURE?

Shall originally meant 'command', but as we so seldom need to give ourselves orders, its original force grew weaker in the first person and so became the natural word to use for a future with no particular colour or emphasis. Similarly will, meaning 'wish', is obviously sensible with I or we, but it is not easy to talk about other people's wishes, so in the second and third persons will has become the natural auxiliary for an uncoloured future. One should of course notice that the question Shall I? still implies 'Is this your command?' and Will you? generally has its original meaning of 'Do you wish?' (See also Reported Speech Exercise 51.9.)

There is a growing tendency for shall and should to be used less in the first person; this is partly due to the natural association of 'wish' or 'want' with a first person future: if I mention my future actions, it is highly probable that my own volition is brought into play regarding them; and so I'll is used quite naturally in statements. The increasing popularity of will/would owes something also to the natural desire for uniformity and easily spoken short forms, even to the extent of sacrificing some of the finer grammatical niceties. In some parts of the English-speaking world, notably Ireland, Scotland and parts of America, the use of will is almost universal, even in first person questions – What'll I do? Will I be seeing you? We'll have better weather soon, I'm thinking. But we still feel the need sometimes of distinct forms of VOLITION, etc., and PURE FUTURE. This has helped to bring about the popularity of other unmistakable ways of expressing FUTURE TIME (going to), VOLITION (want, wish, intend, mean, choose, etc.), or OBLIGATION (have to, am to, ought to). (See Exercises 28.14 and 28.15.)

There are apparent exceptions to the will/shall coloured future in the petulant expression Shan't and in the military use of will in such orders as Officers will appear properly dressed in public places.

Flags will be flown in honour of His Excellency's arrival.

Evening dress will be worn.

Perhaps there is a feeling that nothing can be more definite than the statement of a plain future fact – there is a feeling of the inevitable about its use in the above examples.

SUMMARY

Will and would are becoming increasingly popular for all persons in simple statements: they form contractions as 'll and 'd.

Shall and should are still used where it is necessary to avoid confusion. Look at the following interesting passage and notice how clearly should/would forms can differentiate between VOLITION, OBLIGATION, or PURE FUTURE.

I would injure no man, and should provoke no resentment; I would relieve every distress, and should enjoy the benedictions of gratitude. I would choose my friends among the wise, and my wife among the virtuous; and therefore should be in no danger from treachery or unkindness. My children should by my care be learned and pious, and would repay to my age what their childhood had received. – From Samuel Johnson's Rasselas.

The same contrast holds if the passage is put into the corresponding future forms.

SOME USEFUL WAYS OF EXPRESSING FUTURITY:

(1) I (we) shall (or he, etc., will) have more time next week, I expect. – PURE FUTURE

(2) I won't give you any. You (he) shan't have any. – FUTURE with full meaning of auxiliary; the COLOURED FUTURE

(3) He is meeting her tonight at eight. – Definitely agreed

(4) He'll be meeting her tonight at eight – Definitely agreed

(5) He's going to meet her tonight at eight. – It's HIS intention to do so.

(6) Will you meet her tonight at eight? – Request

(7) Will you be meeting her tonight at eight? – Is this event likely to take place? Is it on your programme?

(8) Shall he meet her as well? – Obligation

(9) Is he to meet her as well? – Same as No. 8; more usual in this form

(10) He's about to leave for London. – on the point of

CONJUNCTIONS

Although the main clause is future, the presence of temporal conjunctions such as when, until, as soon as, before, after, while is sufficient to indicate futurity, and such clauses remain in the present tense.

- Notice the tenses used in the following sentences, and add the missing time conjunction (not if):
- 1 He will stay here — you come.
- 2 I'll come and see you — I have time.
- 3 We shall be ready — you are.
- 4 — you come tomorrow, I will give you a new book.
- 5 — they show me their homework, I will correct it.
- 6 We shall go — he is ready.
- 7 She will speak to you — you come in.

- 8 You must wait — the light changes to green.
- 9 I'll write to you — I leave England.
- 10 He will remain in the south — the cold weather lasts.
- 11 These brave men will fight — they die.
- 12 — I live, I shall always remember his face.
- 13 You will be able to play the piano — you like.
- 14 They will not climb the hill — the moon rises.
- 15 Don't buy bananas — they become cheaper.
- 16 We must buy some shirts — they become dearer.
- 17 This coat will lose its colour — it's washed.
- 18 He will sell the cloth — the price rises.
- 19 I shall wait — the price falls.
- 20 The corn will grow quickly — the rain comes.

FUTURE PERFECT TENSE28.20

Intermediate

The FUTURE PERFECT bears the same relation to a future moment as the PRESENT PERFECT bears to the present moment, i.e. it tells us that a certain action will be completed by a certain future time. The fact of its completion by a certain time is what interests us, not the time of the action itself.

I've read three of Shaw's plays.

(I KNOW about them NOW.)

I shall have read seven of Shaw's plays by the end of the year.

(I SHALL KNOW about them THEN.)

The FUTURE PERFECT CONTINUOUS tense is not very often used.

By Christmas I shall have been working in this office for ten years.

Look at this pair of sentences:

He won't come till the play begins.

This means that he will come just at the beginning of the play.

He won't come till the play has begun.

This means that he will arrive after the beginning.

It is a FUTURE PERFECT idea; 'by the time he comes, the play will have begun.' See Exercise 28.20.

In the same way as a FUTURE SIMPLE idea is expressed by the PRESENT SIMPLE in time clauses (Exercises 28.17–19), so a FUTURE PERFECT idea is expressed by the PRESENT PERFECT.

ASSUMPTION

The use of FUTURE SIMPLE and FUTURE PERFECT tenses to replace the idea of I suppose that, take it for granted that, expect that, imagine that, etc., is a very interesting one. It occurs most frequently in debates, speeches, lectures, and dialectical writing, and is common enough in ordinary speech to warrant an exercise on it for more advanced students.

You'll have noticed from my lecture how complicated this subject really is.

= I imagine you have noticed . . .

This will be the right way.

= I take it that this is the right way.

Of course is often added to emphasize this idea.

* * *

- Recast the following sentences, omitting the introductory remark in bold type, and using the FUTURE SIMPLE, FUTURE CONTINUOUS, FUTURE PERFECT CONTINUOUS OR FUTURE PERFECT tense:

- 1 I suppose you understand why I can't come.
- 2 I suppose you have noticed how often Cyril has to wind his watch up.
- 3 I take it you appreciate my difficulty.
- 4 I take it your friends have got to London by now.
- 5 I expect you wonder why I haven't told you before.
- 6 I suppose you've recovered by now from the shock of meeting Maisie (of course).
- 7 I take it you have heard of Marlowe (of course).
- 8 I imagine you've been wondering all this time how my invention works.
- 9 I expect he knows what I mean (of course).
- 10 I take it he has told you about our plans already.
- 11 I imagine you haven't heard of me (of course).

- 20 I imagine you've learnt something new from this exercise, haven't you?

29 The Past Perfect Tense

29.1 Elementary

The PAST PERFECT tense is related to a moment in the past in the same way that the PRESENT PERFECT is related to the present moment, i.e. it describes an action completed before some special past moment we have in mind.

* * *

- Supply a suitable past tense of the verbs in brackets:

- 23 In England he soon remembered all he (learn).
- 24 The sun had set before I (be) ready to go.
- 25 The river became deeper after it (rain) heavily.

29.2 Intermediate

The idea of the PAST PERFECT as a 'Before-Past' leads to its logical use in REPORTED SPEECH (see also later exercises on this topic). When the SIMPLE PAST I saw him, is reported in relation to the introduction he said that, it takes place notionally before the past said, and must therefore be PAST PERFECT.

Ago always dates back from NOW. Before dates back from any point in past or future, including NOW.

31 Conditions and Unreal Past

31.1 Elementary

Like clauses beginning with when, as soon as, etc., if-clauses also have no shall, will, should, would, in them.

English can express THREE important ideas with if.

(1) He will come if you call him. – something will happen if a certain CONDITION is fulfilled.

(2) He would come if you called him. – the probable result of a certain condition that we suppose or imagine. The if-clause names action that is not taking place at this moment, but I can imagine the probable result. We include here all the unreal ifs, like: if you were a fish, the cat would eat you.

(3) He would have come if you had called him – but he didn't come! Why? Because you didn't call him.

All No. (3) types are impossible ideas, because we know the condition was not fulfilled, but we like to imagine the result if . . .

So we have:

TYPE (1) Main clause – FUTURE; if-clause – PRESENT. (Likely or probable.)

TYPE (2) Main clause – would; if-clause – PAST. (Unlikely or improbable; imaginary.)

TYPE (3) Main clause – would have; if-clause – PAST PERFECT. (Impossible.)

Unless is usually close in meaning to if not but it cannot be universally substituted for if not. It is not an equivalent in TYPE (3) conditions, and even in TYPE (1) conditions there may be a difference, e.g.

You will hurt yourself if you are not careful.
– so be careful

You will hurt yourself unless you are careful.
– so it would be better not to do it at all

NOTE: I should has largely been replaced by I would.

* * *

- Read the following sentences, notice carefully the tenses of the two verbs, and say what kind of condition each sentence is:

- 1 If I come, I shall see you.
- 2 You will spoil it if you aren't careful.
- 3 We would answer if we could.

- 4 They will get wet if it rains.
- 5 I would (should) be pleased if you came.
- 6 If I had known that, I should not have made a mistake.
- 7 It would have been better if you had waited.
- 8 If I were¹ you, I should go home immediately.
- 9 Will you help me if I need you?
- 10 He would have told you if you had asked him.
- 11 They would be silly if they did not take this opportunity.
- 12 If it is fine, I shall go for a swim.
- 13 If it rained, I would stay at home.
- 14 I'll help you if I can.
- 15 It would have broken if you had not caught it.

31.2 Intermediate

See previous exercise.

Of the three types of condition given, the first and third are far more important than the second.

* * *

- State the type of the following conditionals:
- 1 If you had done as I told you, you would have succeeded.
 - 2 If you did as I told you, you would succeed.
 - 3 You'll succeed if you do as I tell you.
 - 4 If you are good, I'll give you a piece of chocolate.
 - 5 If Maria had known English was so difficult, she would never have taken it up.
 - 6 If the rain failed to come, there would be a famine.
 - 7 If you eat too much, you will be ill.
 - 8 You would be ill if you ate too much.
 - 9 If I hadn't told him, he would never have known.
 - 10 You would catch the train if you left earlier.
 - 11 You will pass your examination if you work hard.
 - 12 If you had left earlier, you would have caught the train.
 - 13 You will catch the train if you leave earlier.
 - 14 If I'd lost my spectacles, I wouldn't have been able to read.
 - 15 If I were an orange, I should be spherical and juicy.

¹ Technically speaking, if-clauses are in subjunctive mood, but were is the only place where it still lives as a different form.

31.3

Elementary

See the Exercise 31.1 note on unless.

* * *

- Supply if or unless in the following sentences, noticing carefully the tense sequence:
- 1 He wouldn't have waited — you'd been late.
- 2 He won't speak French — he goes to France.
- 3 I'll go to the door — I hear the bell.
- 4 I shan't go to the door — I hear the bell.
- 5 — you ring the bell, the servant will come.
- 6 He'll come — you ring the bell.
- 7 — you don't ring the bell, the servant won't come.
- 8 He won't come — you ring the bell.
- 9 — he wrote to me, I should write to him.
- 10 I shan't write to him — he writes to me.
- 11 — the clock had been right, we would have caught the train.
- 12 — my watch hadn't been slow, I wouldn't have been late.
- 13 He will not learn much — he works harder.
- 14 — you send a telegram now, he'll get it this evening.
- 15 — he started immediately, he would arrive by midday.
- 16 I should never have found the house — the policeman hadn't helped me.
- 17 — you invited him, he would come¹
- 18 He would come — you invited him.
- 19 — you had invited him, he would have come.
- 20 He would have come — you had invited him.

31.4

Elementary

Look once more at the three principal types:

TYPE (1) He will come if you wait. (He'll come . . .)

TYPE (2) He would come if you waited. (He'd come . . .)

TYPE (3) He would have come if you had waited. (He'd have . . . you'd . . .)

(Notice in TYPE (2) we can find the last recognizable subjunctive form, If he (I) were . . .).

¹ In the last four sentences the normal spoken English contracted forms (he would = he'd, and he had = he'd) have been omitted to avoid confusion at this early stage. The teacher might, however, read them to the students with these contractions.

- Now read each of the following sentences first in the form printed and then in the other two forms:

- 1 He'll come if you wait.
- 2 If you ring the bell, somebody will come.
- 3 You'll catch the train if you take a taxi.
- 4 If he wrote to me, I should write to him.
- 5 You would have found the book if you had opened the bag.
- 6 If he saw you, he would speak to you.
- 7 The streets would be wet if it rained.
- 8 You'll be ill if you drink that water.
- 9 What will you do if you meet Mr Robinson?
- 10 I wouldn't have spoken to him even if he had spoken to me.
- 11 If a beggar asks you for money, will you give him any?
- 12 What would happen if the bridge broke?
- 13 If he had fallen into the river, he would have been drowned.
- 14 If he had been able to swim, he wouldn't have been drowned.
- 15 If you buy that big house, you will need several servants.
- 16 Will you be angry if I steal your pocket-knife?
- 17 Tommy would be sick if he ate all those chocolates.
- 18 If he'd been thirsty, he would have drunk some water.
- 19 I shall come and see you if I have time.
- 20 If you leave the letter on that table, my sister will post it for you.

31.5

Intermediate

- Read the following sentences in the form printed, and then in the other two forms:

- 1 We won't go out unless it stops raining.
- 2 If you could come too, it would be very nice.
- 3 It would have been better if they hadn't come.
- 4 I'll give it to you if you must have one.
- 5 If Cyril doesn't object, I shall join you.
- 6 He'll certainly do it if it's possible.
- 7 If the sun didn't shine, fruit wouldn't ripen.
- 8 He would steal it from you if he could.
- 9 If you go to town, will you buy something for me?

- 10 Maisie would do it if she wanted to.
- 11 If they hadn't told us, we shouldn't have found the way.
- 12 What would you do if a bee stung you?
- 13 He wouldn't have written if he hadn't heard some news.
- 14 If I had enough money, I would buy a radio set.
- 15 I shall have to buy a thick coat if the weather gets colder.
- 16 If you hit the dog, it will bite you.
- 17 We shall be pleased if our school wins the match.
- 18 You'll be able to speak English better if you study harder.
- 19 If he buys a house for £8,000 and sells it for £11,000, he'll make a good profit.
- 20 The soldiers will fight bravely if they understand their orders.

31.6 Elementary

It is not necessary for can, must, etc., to be made future in TYPE (1). See special exercises on can and must for details.

You can go this afternoon if you like. (permission)
You'll soon be able to swim if you practise hard. (capacity)

* * *

- Supply a suitable tense of the verbs in brackets:
 - 1 You will be ill if you (eat) so much.
 - 2 I (go) if I had known.
 - 3 If my car (not break) down, I should have caught the train.
 - 4 If she were older, she (have) more sense.
 - 5 If you (read) that book carefully, you would understand it.
 - 6 If the children (be) good, they can stay up late.
 - 7 I (buy) that hat if it were not so dear.
 - 8 You (kill) yourself if you always work as hard as that.
 - 9 If they had waited, they (find) me.
 - 10 I'm sure she will do well if she (go) to the University.
 - 11 If it (be) fine tomorrow, I shall play tennis.
 - 12 I shouldn't have thought it possible if I (not see) it.

- 13 I'm sure my sister would go out with you if you (ask) her nicely.
- 14 We (enjoy) the play better if it had not been so long.
- 15 They would do it if they (can).
- 16 If dinner is not ready, I (go) without it.
- 17 I (show) you how to do it if I knew myself.
- 18 If the dog had not woken us, we (never hear) the burglar.
- 19 Blackpool (be) ideal for a holiday, if there were not so many people there.
- 20 If he wants to play the violin, I (play) the piano for him.
- 21 The dog (bite) you if it had not been tied up.
- 22 If you don't shut that window, we all (die) of cold.
- 23 I shall be very angry if you (break) any more plates.
- 24 The child (be killed) if the train hadn't stopped quickly.
- 25 I would have come yesterday if I (have) nothing to do.

31.7 ● Supply a suitable tense of the verbs in brackets:

- Intermediate
- 1 If you (go) away, please write to me.
 - 2 If we (have) some bread, we could have some bread and cheese if we had some cheese!
 - 3 We are going to play tennis this afternoon if it (stop) raining.
 - 4 If you (be) in, I should have given it to you.
 - 5 If Johnny (eat) another cake, he will be sick.
 - 6 If you (not turn) off that noisy radio, I shall scream!
 - 7 If you (can) type, you ought to be able to get a job easily.
 - 8 If men (be) only more reasonable, there would be no more war.
 - 9 You would be taking a great risk if you (invest) your money in that business.
 - 10 We would not have despatched the goods if they (not be) in good condition.
 - 11 If it (be) convenient, let's meet at nine o'clock.

- 12 I wouldn't do that if I (be) you.
 13 It will be impossible for me to finish my work if you (not cease) this chatter.
 14 If Cyril (take) my advice, everything ought to go well.
 15 I would have come sooner if I (know) you were here.
 16 If you (want) to have tea ready in time, put the kettle on now.
 17 It is easy to paint pictures if one (know) how to.
 18 If she (not answer) the telephone, she would never have heard the good news.
 19 Tell him he must visit the Tower if ever he (go) to London.
 20 My uncle would be able to help us if he (be) here.
 21 If I (have) the courage, I would have answered him back.
 22 If it (rain), you will get wet.
 23 If you (want) me to help you, why didn't you say so?
 24 Maisie's mother would have known what to do if she (be) alive.
 25 If the sentence that had 'had had' had had 'had' it (be) correct.
 (Be careful of the reading of weak, strong and emphatic forms here.)

THE UNREAL
PAST

It will be noticed that in TYPES (2) and (3) of the conditional (see Exercise 31.1), the PAST SIMPLE OR PAST PERFECT tense is used when we suppose what is impossible. These are really subjunctives, but seeing that were is the only visible sign of this form that occurs with any frequency, the student needn't be asked to differentiate between past subjunctive and past indicative. The PAST SIMPLE tense is used for something unreal or wished-for NOW, and the PAST PERFECT when the supposition or wish was all in the past. Other expressions using the past tenses in this way are: I wish, as if, if only, would to God, suppose, it's (high) time, I'd rather.

If only I knew the answer (now)! If only I had known (yesterday)!

* * *

● Supply a suitable tense of the verbs in brackets:

- 1 I wish I (know) his name.
- 2 It's time we all (go) home.
- 3 I'd rather you (go) now.
- 4 It's about time you (get) the tea ready.
- 5 Don't you wish you (come) earlier?
- 6 Suppose I (get) there late!
- 7 He acts as if he (know) English perfectly.
- 8 Would to God you (be) a better husband to me!
- 9 If only he (not eat) so much garlic!
- 10 If only he (not eat) so much garlic last night!
- 11 I would have helped you if I (hear) about your trouble.
- 12 A person who (refuse) to eat would be dead in a month.
- 13 I'd rather you (pay) me now. Suppose he (ask) me for the money tomorrow!
- 14 If only he (tell) you the whole story!
- 15 It's high time you (have) a haircut.
- 16 I feel as if my head (be) on fire.
- 17 He said he wished he (never see) me.
- 18 You look as if you (can) do with a drink.
- 19 I'd rather you (give) me a new one instead of having it repaired as you did.
- 20 My wife says she wishes I (be) a thousand miles away; indeed, I wish I (be).

- 21 If only I (know) earlier, I'd have sent you a telegram.
- 22 I felt as if I (be pulled) through a hedge backwards.
- 23 I wish I (not break) it.
- 24 He came in, looking as if he (see) a ghost.
- 25 Isn't it about time you (set to) and (do) some work?

11.11

Advanced

Other types (apart from the three main types):

(1) CAUSE AND EFFECT: tenses parallel.

Oil floats if you pour it on water.

You were a fool if you went out without a hat on.

(2) A DOUBTFUL view of Conditional TYPE 1 is emphasized by the use of should; the inverted forms are the more literary.

Should he refuse you, refer him to me.

'If I should die, think only this of me.'

(Rupert Brooke)

(3) In POLITE FORMS where the consent of another person is sought, will and would are found after if. (See note to Exercise 28.12.)

If you will wait a moment I'll fetch a chair.

I should be very grateful if you would do that for me.

(4) GREATER IMPROBABILITY in Conditional TYPES (1) and (2) is achieved by using were to after if, and should, would, could, or might in the principal clause.

If you were to come tomorrow, I might have time to see you.

This construction must not be confused with the other use of is to = obligation, 'must'. Compare:

If he was to return at 7 o'clock, why didn't he?

If he were to return at 7 o'clock, he could take me out.

Conditional conjunctions:

if, unless, as if, if only, supposing, suppose, provided, providing, as long as.

* * *

● Complete the following sentences:

- 1 It would be a good idea if . . .
- 2 He wouldn't treat you unkindly provided . . .

- 3 The potatoes wouldn't have been burnt if ...
- 4 If you were to come tomorrow, ...
- 5 If the sun didn't shine, ...
- 6 You would never have caught that cold if ...
- 7 I'd go and see him if ...
- 8 We won't forget what we have learnt unless ...
- 9 I shall always like you unless ...
- 10 He wouldn't have begun to learn English if ...
- 11 If only you knew what I know, you ...
- 12 If I'd known she wasn't coming, ...
- 13 I should never have known if ...
- 14 If you had got up earlier this morning, ...
- 15 You can walk where you like, provided you ...
- 16 If he should arrive late, you ...
- 17 I'll go and call her if you will ...
- 18 If you would only suggest it to him, ...

- 21 He was walking about as if ...
- 22 I would have married him if only ...
- 23 He won't tell you anything else unless ...
- 24 If they were to send us plenty of sugar and fruit, we ...
- 25 I don't know if he (come), but if he does, ...

FINAL NOTES ON CONDITIONS

The inverted forms, Had I seen you earlier ... are less frequently found in modern spoken English than in classical written style. They should, however, be understood by more advanced students, who will meet them often enough as they extend their reading in literature. A useful way to practise this inverted pattern is to read each of the sentences of Exercise 31.4 as a TYPE (3) condition, first in the if-form, then in the inverted form. Here is No. 1 done in this way:

He would have come if you had waited.

He would have come, had you waited: or

Had you waited, he would have come.

It is better style if the inverted clause comes first.

32 Question-tags

32.1 Elementary

A very common device in conversation is that of making a statement and at once asking the listener to confirm it. In most languages this is done simply by means of a stereotyped phrase. (Cf. n'est-ce pas, nicht wahr, non è vero, ¿no es verdad?, nu-i așa, že ano (ze ne), nie prawda-li, не так-ли, اليس كذا لك etc.)

In English this has to be practised, as we have a variable form.

Positive statement, negative tag; negative statement, positive tag.

The auxiliaries repeat themselves in the tag. Other verbs use do in the tag.

He is here, isn't he? (He isn't here, is he?)

You will come, won't you? (You won't tell him, will you?)

He came yesterday, didn't he? (He didn't go, did he?)

See also preliminary Exercise 19.17.

* * *

- Read the following statements, adding the necessary question-tag:

- 1 He is early this morning.
- 2 We must go now.
- 3 You can swim well.
- 4 I was very quick.
- 5 It could be done.
- 6 You won't be late.
- 7 This winter hasn't been cold.
- 8 They ought not to be here.
- 9 You shouldn't smoke.
- 10 He has finished.
- 11 I am not so fat as you.
- 12 They always work hard.
- 13 He speaks English well.
- 14 You can help him.
- 15 You teach English.
- 16 They are learning English.
- 17 He has a lot of books.
- 18 She is too young.

- 19 You eat very quickly.
- 20 We must answer the letter.
- 21 John drinks too much.
- 22 He is greedy.
- 23 You have a new dress.
- 24 George has just left.
- 25 He lives at the end of the road.
- 26 He didn't come.
- 27 You were there.
- 28 I mustn't be late.
- 29 Boys don't like to wash.
- 30 She doesn't play tennis.
- 31 We got home very late.
- 32 I didn't hurt you.
- 33 You answered my invitation.
- 34 He had been to Switzerland.
- 35 She sang well.

32.2 Intermediate

The positive forms need and dare are rarely heard in the affirmative with question-tags, but when so used, are treated as full verbs.

You need to come earlier, don't you? (= must)

Have and have to. See notes to Exercises 14.3 and 18.1. I am usually has the tag aren't I? (for intonation see Exercise 32.3.)

Used to has a question-tag with did.

* * *

- Read the following sentences, adding the appropriate question-tag:

- 1 You broke the window.
- 2 They didn't see you.
- 3 That boy ran very fast.
- 4 My wife cooks well.
- 5 You don't like sugar.
- 6 He can do that for you.
- 7 I am very stupid.
- 8 I am not stupid.
- 9 She doesn't want to go.
- 10 I may come with you.
- 11 He loves fishing.
- 12 We ought not to have listened.

- 13 They should have been able to do it.
- 14 You knew that before.
- 15 He plays the violin badly.
- 16 They went out just now.
- 17 You'll have some more tea.
- 18 We had better wait for your friend Maisie.
- 19 You have your lunch at one o'clock.
- 20 You don't have to go just yet.
- 21 You had a swim yesterday.
- 22 He might be there.
- 23 You needn't stay long.
- 24 He used to live here.
- 25 I am older than you.
- 26 You will come.
- 27 You would like to come.
- 28 I shan't be in your way.
- 29 I ought to ring him up.
- 30 He'll fall down.
- 31 You never used to wear a hat.
- 32 I'm afraid I'm a little late.
- 33 He hadn't met you before.
- 34 He made you do it again.
- 35 You used to love going out with Cyril.

32.3 Advanced

The range of intonation patterns for tag questions is enormous, but students should be particularly aware of one general distinction.

- (1) The speaker can be sure that the statement is right:

Tom must know the way to Piccadilly Circus. He lives in ↘ London, ↘ doesn't he?
- a fall on London and doesn't he

- (2) Or he may really want an answer (Yes or No) from the person spoken to because he is not sure:

I wonder what Tom's doing on this train. He lives in ↘ London, ↗ doesn't he?

Imperatives are made into more polite¹ requests by adding a positive future-tag.

Stop that noise, will you?
Let's go for a walk, shall we?

¹ Or more petulant, depending on intonation.

Notice also: You'd better stay, hadn't you? You'd rather go, wouldn't you?

(32.3)

- Add a question-tag to the following sentences:
- 1 They arrived yesterday.
- 2 You have heard about that.
- 3 You like coffee.
- 4 I may speak to him. (permission)
- 5 I ought to visit her.
- 6 You'd rather I didn't say anything.
- 7 He didn't have to speak to me.
- 8 I have to buy some matches.
- 9 He wasn't to speak to me.
- 10 He won't fall down.
- 11 You will come.
- 12 You wouldn't like the window open.
- 13 He used to beat his wife.
- 14 I am very late.
- 15 She came very late.
- 16 He has your book.
- 17 He has his breakfast at nine o'clock.
- 18 He has got to go now.
- 19 He couldn't have arrived before the others if he missed the fast train.
- 20 Come and see me tomorrow.
- 21 Have another cigarette.
- 22 I suppose he ought to have known that.
- 23 I take it you won't be coming then.
- 24 In that case he'll have to get a new one made.
- 25 Let's pretend we're not here.
- 26 Let me have a look.
- 27 You never used to work so late.
- 28 Just read it to yourself.
- 29 Let me read it for you.
- 30 Let's read aloud.
- 31 That's the sort of thing you would do.
- 32 You would lose it.
- 33 I'd better go.
- 34 You love your husband.
- 35 You shouldn't have been such a fool.

32.4 Advanced

A form of tag is frequently heard in English when one person wishes to pass a truculent, sarcastic or incredulous comment on another person's remark. This is done by repeating the remark and adding a tag, both being positive or negative. Correct intonation is important to catch the proper emotional content.

I've broken a cup. – Oh you have, have you?
I won't eat it! – Oh you won't, won't you?
I hate you! – You do, do you?

* * *

- Add surprised, angry, truculent or sarcastic tags to the following (the teacher to make the remark, the student to add the comment):
- 1 I want you to give me some more money.
- 2 I spoke to the Prime Minister this morning.
- 3 He had a better collection of stamps than yours.
- 4 You mustn't talk to me like that!
- 5 I'm very fond of expensive presents.
- 6 I'd go quite mad if I had to live with you!
- 7 Our teacher speaks English much better than yours.
- 8 I've thrown your homework into the wastepaper-basket.
- 9 I'd rather go out with John than with you.
- 10 They'll send you to prison.
- 11 He thinks you're an old fool!
- 12 So do I!
- 13 I shall have to put you into a lower class.
- 14 I'm going home by myself today.
- 15 You can do the whole exercise again.
- 16 He hates her like poison.
- 17 I think this sentence is too hard for you.
- 18 They want you to give them better wages.
- 19 You can have the bits that are left over.
- 20 I feel very sorry for you.
- 21 I thought you didn't want any more!
- 22 You're a very rude person!
- 23 And so is your friend!
- 24 I'll tell my wife what you said!
- 25 No, I won't listen to you!

These tag forms are liable to get a little complicated in uneducated town dialects:

You don't half drink a lot, don't you? – I do, do I? –
Not half, you don't!

(It's quite all right, your teacher will explain.)

33 get and got forms

33.1 Elementary

In spoken English the form I've got is used very extensively for I have (in the sense of 'I own'). I'd got in PAST tense, but less frequently; past tense form occurs mostly in reported speech.

* * *

- Say the following sentences, using the form with got instead of the simple verb have:
- 1 I have some more at home.
- 2 He hadn't any like this.
- 3 Have you a dog?
- 4 I'm afraid I haven't time to do it.
- 5 I see you have a new car.
- 6 Have you the tickets?
- 7 He has plenty in his shop.
- 8 She has some lovely flowers in her garden.
- 9 Have they your address?
- 10 We have some new photos to show you.
- 11 The cat hasn't anything to eat.
- 12 Have you someone to help you?
- 13 It has a bit broken off the top.
- 14 Have you anything more to say?
- 15 I've plenty of time now.
- 16 That woman has an attractive hat on.
- 17 We've no more left.
- 18 Have you everything you want?
- 19 I hadn't any money on me yesterday.
- 20 I haven't any now.
- 21 How many children has she?
- 22 He asked me for some cigarettes, but I hadn't any.
- 23 I've enough money to buy two.

- 24 Has he a job now?
- 25 My friend has a Rolls Royce.
- 26 The children have a beautiful dolls' house.
- 27 Had he the kind you wanted? (Did he have the kind you wanted?)
- 28 What have you to show me?
- 29 Haven't they anything better to do?
- 30 He hadn't a penny when I knew him.

Notice that we avoid the question-form Had I? etc., and usually use the did form even for simple possession, e.g. in No. 27 above. This is probably because had is felt to apply to the past moment only, as in the type:

They didn't have electric light in Ancient Rome.

33.2 Intermediate

The use of get as shown in Exercise 33.1 has also spread to the form have to = 'must'.

What have I got to do next?

The negative form is not the same as mustn't, but replaces needn't (i.e. it is the OPPOSITE of must). See also earlier exercises on must, Exercises 16.1, 2.

I haven't got to go just yet.
= don't have to, or needn't

When the stress falls on got it reinforces very strongly the idea of obligation. The PAST tense form, I'd got to do it or I hadn't got to do it, is rarely heard without this emphasis (had to and didn't have to being preferred), except in reported speech, where a parallel form is sought.

I had to get to school by 8.30.

You hadn't got to do what he said.

'I've got to practise it every day.'

He said he'd got to practise it every day.

Notice that have without its object can never change to have got.

Have you got the books? – Yes, I have,

which shows it to be a quasi-perfect tense.

* * *

- Say the following sentences, using a form with got instead of the simple verb have:
- 1 I don't have to get up so early every morning.
- 2 Have you anything else to give me?
- 3 He told me he didn't have to work any more.

- 4 Does she have to ring you up every time?
- 5 Why have you to give him so much money?
- 6 I'm afraid I have to go now.
- 7 Is this all I have to do?
- 8 You seem to have plenty to do.
- 9 Has your friend Maisie to come too?
- 10 Have we enough money?
- 11 Do they have to travel with us? (emphatic)
- 12 You didn't have to listen to him.
- 13 She has a pimple on her nose.
- 14 Has Cyril the sandwiches?
- 15 I don't have to sleep there, do I?
- 16 Did you know she hadn't anything to wear?
- 17 I wish I knew if she had any money.
- 18 I had a better one at home.
- 19 Has he the same edition as the rest of us?
- 20 Have you the time on you?
- 21 She said she didn't have to be home before midnight.
- 22 I have to go to the dentist this morning.
- 23 They have two dogs and three cats next door.
- 24 You don't have to do what your sister tells you.
- 25 Do I have to eat all this rice-pudding? (emphatic)
- 26 Have you time to go to the post?
- 27 'We have too much to do.' 'Have you really?'
- 28 What time do you have to get up?
- 29 She told me she didn't have to earn her living.
- 30 We have no servant, so mother has to do all the work. (emphatic)

33.3 Advanced

The got-form of Exercises 33.1 and 33.2 is never found when the verb is in the IMPERATIVE, the FUTURE, or any of the PERFECT tenses.

Don't have any more!
I've had no news since Wednesday.

Nor in those phrases where have and its object represent a single semantic whole.

He had a very good journey.
Do you have breakfast at eight?

But we can say, I haven't got time to do it.
See also notes to Exercise 18.1 on the difference between he doesn't have to and he hasn't got to.

* * *

- Say the following sentences, using a form with got instead of the simple verb have WHEREVER POSSIBLE:
- 1 Did you have any money when you were in Switzerland?
 - 2 Did you have a good journey back?
 - 3 He has quite a lot of friends.
 - 4 He has a party and invites them all at least once a month.
 - 5 Have you a clean handkerchief?
 - 6 Do you have a clean handkerchief every day?
 - 7 Have you enough clean handkerchiefs for every day of the week?
 - 8 Have some more tea!
 - 9 We don't have to wear evening dress, do we?
 - 10 I have a holiday tomorrow.
 - 11 I shan't have another holiday till Christmas.
 - 12 He has to work overtime for a few weeks.
 - 13 Why didn't you do it when you had the opportunity?
 - 14 Doesn't she have to work on Saturday?
 - 15 Have you a cigarette? Have one of mine!
 - 16 Do you have to go back tonight?
 - 17 Do you have lunch at home?
 - 18 Do you always have a swim before breakfast?
 - 19 He said he had a nicer one at home.
 - 20 He said he had three dances with her.
 - 21 It has to be seen to be believed.
 - 22 She has more money than she knows what to do with.
 - 23 I've no time to play the fool.
 - 24 Do you think he has a chance of passing the examination?
 - 25 I always have difficulty in finding my way here.
 - 26 We never have coffee after lunch.
 - 27 We never have enough money to go to the cinema.
 - 28 He hasn't a leg to stand on.
 - 29 Do you ever have time to read a novel at one sitting?
 - 30 Do you really have a good time at these weekly parties?

Get instead of become. This use of get is very common. There is an interesting development of this in the PASSIVE VOICE, where the verb get replaces be usually to stress the moment of action rather than the resultant state. (Owing to the frequent use of past participles as adjectives, the ordinary passive construction cannot always make it clear whether ACTION OR STATE is meant.)

The boy was hurt.

The boy got hurt.

He was married to a beautiful girl. (state)

He got married to a beautiful girl. (action)

I got wet through standing in the rain. (became)

My arms got badly burned in the sun.

34 Predicative so and *not*34.1
Elementary

A useful and important time-saver in English speech is this use of so with I think, believe, hope, am afraid, etc., in responses.

I think it will be fine tomorrow. – Oh, I hope so. (affirmative)

You haven't caught cold, have you? – I don't think so. (negative)

● Respond in a similar way to the following statements (the statements to be read to the students):

- 1 Is there time for another cup of tea? (think)
- 2 He left a week ago, didn't he? (believe)
- 3 Your mother won't be angry with you, will she? (not think)

- 19 Won't they be able to have more than two days' honeymoon? (not think)
- 20 Will you be seasick crossing the Channel? (hope)

35 do and make

35.1

Intermediate

These two verbs often depart from their fundamental meanings of 'act' and 'construct' in idiomatic usage. Examples of fundamental meaning of do and make:

What are you making? – A cake.

What are you doing? – Writing a letter.

Idiomatic use of these two verbs can only be learnt by experience. The following two exercises practise a number of do and make idioms.

* * *

● Complete the following sentences with do or make:

- 1 He — a lot of money last year.
- 2 They — peace at last.
- 3 I always — my best.
- 4 I shall — all the arrangements for you.
- 5 It has nothing to — with you.
- 6 He — a lot of business with us.

- 11 I will have nothing to — with such people.
- 12 My friend Maisie always — fun of me.
- 13 My friend Cyril can — tricks with his ears.
- 14 A soldier must — his duty.
- 15 It is my birthday; — come to tea.

- 16 I think the train leaves at nine, but you had better — certain.
 17 I have nothing to — this afternoon.
 18 It won't — you any harm to take another week's holiday.
 19 How do you —?
 20 Have you — your homework?

35.2

Advanced

See Exercise 35.1.

Notice the colloquial expressions:

Nothing doing = There's nothing interesting in progress or I'm not going to help you.

It doesn't do to = It's not proper (right; advisable) to and others in the exercise below.

- Supply a part of the verb do or make:
 - 1 That glass of wine has — me good.
 - 2 She will — him a good wife.
 - 3 Will you — me a favour?
 - 4 Are you trying to — me out a liar?
 - 5 You must — up for lost time.

- 19 I'm afraid half a spoonful won't — at all; he'll have to — without it altogether.
 20 There's nothing — here; let's — our way out.

36 Infinitive Implied by its Particle

36.1

Intermediate

A very odd but important idiom, particularly in spoken English, is the habit of finishing a phrase (usually a response) with the infinitive particle to, leaving the verb to be implied.

Will you show me how to do it properly? — I shall be glad to.

- Respond to the following questions or statements, using the expression given in brackets:
 - 1 Why can't you come to the pictures with me? (not be allowed)
 - 2 Say 'Sir' when you speak to me! (refuse)
 - 3 Read the letter if you want to. (not wish)
 - 4 'I'm afraid I can't come after all.' 'But ...' (promise)
 - 5 Why do you put sugar in your soup instead of salt? (prefer)
 - 6 'You didn't bring any cabbage from the market?' 'I (mean), but I forgot.'
 - 7 'You must take more care of it.' 'Yes, ...' (ought)
 - 8 Why haven't you proposed to Maisie yet? (not have chance)
 - 9 Can't we stop for another coffee? (not be time)
 - 10 'He says you are to see him tomorrow.' 'I suppose ...' (have)
 - 11 'He has painted his dining-room bright red.' 'Well, he (have the right).'
 - 12 Why didn't you visit him while you were there? (not have occasion).¹

¹ See Exercise 40.1 for a note on the difference between occasion to and the (an) opportunity of —ing.

- 13 'Your friend Cyril spoke very rudely to me last night.' 'I'm sure he (not mean).'
- 14 'Why didn't you dance with him?' 'He (not ask).'
- 15 'You didn't say goodbye to me.' 'No, I (forget).'

37 else and or else

37.1 Elementary

Else. This interesting adverb is now so closely bound to certain pronouns that it is rarely heard apart from them. The some, any, and no compounds are followed by else to avoid the clumsy form 'any other person', 'some other thing', etc. All are singular, including everyone else. Interrogatives (but rarely why, which, when) are similarly followed by else.
For possessives see next exercise.

- Say the following sentences in a better way, using else:
- 1 Have you any other thing to say?
- 2 You must see another person.
- 3 May I stay at some other place?
- 4 What other thing must I do?
- 5 I have some other thing to show you.
- 6 What other place can I go to?
- 7 What other person is coming with you?
- 8 There's no other thing to say.
- 9 Ask some other person to lend it to you.
- 10 All the other people have a green ticket.
- 11 'Haven't I seen you in some other place?'
- 12 'No, you haven't seen me in any other place.'
- 13 What other person did you speak to?
- 14 No other person had a dog like mine.
- 15 What other thing could I do?
- 16 Has he some other thing to tell us?
- 17 All the other people have gone.
- 18 What other person did you see?
- 19 At what other place can I find one?
- 20 'What other person is coming?' 'No other person.'

37.2 Intermediate

How else and when else are less frequently met with than the forms in the previous exercise, and so are not so important for elementary students.

Since else is felt to be firmly tied to the word preceding it, the correct possessive form 'anyone's else' sounds unnatural; the accepted form in current English is anyone else's.

The same applies to the interrogatives with else. One still hears occasionally, 'What could I do else?' but it seems to be dying out. Perhaps for the sake of clarity, the teacher should insist on What else could I do? and for the possessive: Who else's can it be?

- Say the following sentences, using else:
- 1 Have you decided on any other thing yet?
- 2 I think this is some other person's hat.
- 3 At what other time could we meet?
- 4 If you can't find my umbrella, any other person's will do.
- 5 In what other way can you possibly do it?
- 6 What other thing is there to talk about?
- 7 No other person's room has been paid for.
- 8 If it wasn't your own father, what other person's could it be?
- 9 Cyril is dancing with some other person's partner.
- 10 In what other way can it possibly be mended?
- 11 I wonder if any other person's signature would do instead?
- 12 I wonder what other person's would do instead?
- 13 Can you tell me any other place to visit?
- 14 I'm afraid Maisie has gone out with some other person.
- 15 I jammed the brakes on and swerved to the left. What other thing could I do?
- 16 Hurry up! All the other people's glasses are empty.
- 17 What other person do you want some scandal about?
- 18 I'm afraid you must put on some other thing if you want to bathe here.
- 19 You must have mistaken me for some other person. I've never lived in any other place but here.
- 20 Isn't there any other person's time you can waste instead of mine?

Or else. This is a very useful connective expressing the condition if not. It is very frequently met with in conversation, but rarely learnt and practised by foreigners.

Come early, or else you won't get anything to eat.
= If you don't, you won't get . . .

Or can always take its place; else acts as a kind of intensifier.

* * *

- Join the following pairs of sentences with or else:
- 1 Put your coat on. If you don't, you'll catch cold.
- 2 You must hurry. If you don't, you'll be late.
- 3 We must look pleased. If we don't, he'll be cross.
- 4 Hide it. If you don't, they will steal it.
- 5 I must clean it. If I don't, it will get rusty.
- 6 Follow him. If you don't, he'll get away.
- 7 You must put it on ice. If you don't, it will melt.
- 8 Hold it by its neck. If you don't, it'll bite you.
- 9 We must keep chickens. If we don't, we shan't have any eggs.
- 10 We must tear it up. If we don't, they'll find out our secret.
- 11 Shut the door quietly. If you don't, you'll wake the baby.
- 12 You must pay him well. If you don't, he won't work for you.
- 13 You must build a high wall. If you don't, you will lose all your fruit.
- 14 Cook it in butter. If you don't, it'll be hard.
- 15 Take it away. If you don't, I'll scream!
- 16 Put it down quickly. If you don't, you'll burn your fingers.
- 17 We must go now. If we don't, we'll miss the train.
- 18 You must finish your work now. If you don't, you won't be able to go out tonight.
- 19 I must go home. If I don't, mother will be cross with me.
- 20 Do as you are told. If you don't, you'll be punished.
- 21 Tell the cook to put the meat in the oven now. If she doesn't, it won't be ready for dinner.
- 22 She ought to take more exercise. If she doesn't, she'll get fat.

- 23 Milk must be kept in a cool place. If it isn't, it will turn sour.
- 24 Sit down. If you don't, you'll be tired.
- 25 Help me with my homework. If you don't, I won't help you.

38 Infinitive

38.1
Intermediate

Frequently a clause having the same subject as the main sentence can be more concisely expressed by using an infinitive.

I was glad when I heard of your success.
I was glad to hear of your success.

Notice also its use after a superlative.

He was the first man to climb Mount Everest.

* * *

- Reword the following sentences using the infinitive:
- 1 He was sorry when he heard of your disappointment.
- 2 He hopes that he will know by tomorrow.
- 3 It seems that it is improbable.
- 4 Do you understand what you have to do?
- 5 We should be sorry if we heard bad reports of him.
- 6 The candidate did not expect that he would pass his examination.
- 7 Elsie was told that she must not dirty her dress.
- 8 The boys only laughed when they saw the little girl cry.
- 9 She asked if she might leave the room.
- 10 I hope that I shall live to see my son a successful doctor.
- 11 That was the first picture that came by satellite.
- 12 My friend was delighted when she learned of the arrival of our baby.
- 13 Do not promise that you will do it, if you are not sure that you can.
- 14 The doctor warned Cyril that he should not touch alcohol.

- 15 The last person who spoke like that about my friend Maisie was in hospital for two months.

38.2

Read notes to Exercise 38.1.

Advanced

* * *

- Replace clauses with INFINITIVE phrases:
 - 1 I should be delighted if I could join you.
 - 2 He was annoyed when he heard that the Conservative Party had got in again.
 - 3 She was sorry that she had missed the beginning of the concert.
 - 4 I am glad now that I see all the mess has been cleared up.
 - 5 We must wait till we hear the examination results before we make any plans.
 - 6 My daughter will be thrilled when she wears an evening dress as lovely as that.
 - 7 Mary was mortified when she found that she would have to wear a wig.
 - 8 They would be very surprised if they were to receive an invitation.
 - 9 I was afraid at the thought of going past the haunted house alone.
 - 10 You would be foolish if you dyed your hair red.
 - 11 I would love it if I could own a house in the country.
 - 12 She was hurt when she found that her young man had forgotten her birthday.
 - 13 Bob was pleased when he heard he had been promoted.
 - 14 I was sorry that I had to leave so early.
 - 15 She is happy that she has found such a nice place to live in.

TOO, ENOUGH

38.3

Intermediate

See Section 10 for more elementary examples.

Too = excess; is a kind of negative.

It was too cold (for us) to go out.

= It was so cold (that)¹ we couldn't go out.

Enough = sufficiency; is a kind of positive (but see next exercise).

It was cold enough to freeze our fingers.

= It was so cold (that) our fingers froze. (It was very cold and . . .)

N.B.—Too COMES BEFORE and enough COMES AFTER the adjective.

- Reword the following sentences using too or enough:
 - 1 This coffee is so hot that I can't drink it.
 - 2 He's very tall and can touch the ceiling.
 - 3 His car is so big that Maisie can't drive it.
 - 4 I've got so fat that I can't wear this dress now.
 - 5 The weather was so hot that we couldn't go out.
 - 6 Grandfather Giles is so old that he can't learn French.
 - 7 The student was very clever, and could solve any mathematical problem.
 - 8 This battery is strong, and should last forty-eight hours.
 - 9 This novel is so short that it can be read in a few hours.
 - 10 The fields are still wet, and cannot be ploughed.
 - 11 Your nails are so long that they might scratch anybody's eyes out.
 - 12 I'm so excited that I can't think.
 - 13 This problem is so difficult that I can't explain it.
 - 14 The turkey was so big that mother couldn't put it in the oven.
 - 15 You're quite old and you can ask her yourself.
 - 16 That question is so personal Cyril can't answer it.
 - 17 The accident was so terrible we can't talk about it.
 - 18 She is quite old and she ought to know better.
 - 19 You're so old you could be my grandfather.
 - 20 Maisie is so tall I can't kiss her without standing on a chair.
 - 21 That orange you gave me was so sour I couldn't eat it.
 - 22 They were so empty-headed they couldn't learn a single thing.

- 23 She was very foolish and she believed everything I told her.
 24 He was so angry he wouldn't speak to me.
 25 The window was so dirty they couldn't see through it.

38.4 See previous exercise.
Intermediate and Advanced Note also that a negative enough to is the equivalent of two negative clauses.

He wasn't rich enough (for her) to marry.
 = He wasn't rich and so she didn't marry him.

* * *

- Reword the following using too or enough:
- 1 The policeman could not run very fast, and so was unable to catch the burglar.
- 2 I think you are very strong and can lift this trunk.
- 3 That tea-cup is so badly broken that it can't be mended.
- 4 Some apples are so sour that we can't eat them.
- 5 You don't eat much; that amount wouldn't keep a sparrow alive.
- 6 There is not much beer, so you can't all have a drink.
- 7 There was a lot of food left over; it would have fed a dozen more people.
- 8 I have very little petrol; it will not get us there.
- 9 He is quite well, and can go out again now.
- 10 The river was so deep they couldn't wade across.
- 11 The light is so dim that it can't be used for close work.

- 14 The path was so slippery that we couldn't walk along it.
- 15 An elephant's trunk is so strong it can hold a log of wood.
- 16 The current was so strong he couldn't swim against it.

- 17 You're so young that you don't know about such things yet.
 18 Mr Tumbrill is so fat he can't tie up his own shoes.
 19 He's not very good so I can't marry him.
 20 He said he was so thirsty he could drink a well dry.

Note the popular expression:

It was too dark (etc.) for words.

39 -ing form – Gerund and Present Participle

39.1 Elementary

The part of the verb that ends in -ing has two very important functions.

(1) It can have the force of an adjective as well as that of a verb.

An old house; a burning house.

A good story; an exciting story.

Exciting the crowd with his angry words, the speaker moved to the edge of the platform.

We call this the PRESENT PARTICIPLE.

(2) It can have the force of a noun as well as that of a verb.

Swimming is a sport.

Climbing mountains is a sport, too.

We call this the GERUND.

A number of verbs and many verbal combinations like be fond of or give up can be followed by the -ing form of a verb instead of the infinitive or a clause. When this is a GERUND, it can be the object of the main verb, and (as it is a verb itself) can have its own object.

Do you like tobacco?

Do you like smoking?

Do you like smoking a pipe?

He's fond of music.

He's fond of singing.

He's fond of singing pop songs.

* * *

- (39.1) ● Complete the following sentences by putting the given verbs into the gerund form:
- 1 They started (write) the lesson before the teacher came in.
 - 2 I began (read) a novel yesterday.
 - 3 We don't like (have) to do homework.
 - 4 Do you mind (speak) to John and (ask) him to help us?
 - 5 We enjoyed (see) you and (hear) all your news.
 - 6 We thought of (drive) across France. We're rather tired of (go) by train.
 - 7 It has stopped (rain). I hate (go) out in the rain.
 - 8 I love (eat) oranges, but I dislike (peel) them.
 - 9 I can't help (wonder) whether we should risk (go) without our raincoats.
 - 10 My uncle has given up (smoke) and now prefers (eat) sweets.
 - 11 I hate (practise) (read) aloud without first (learn) the new words.
 - 12 I suggest (do) more sentences on the gerund next time.
 - 13 I began (look) for the missing papers a few days ago, but now I must stop (try) to find them.
 - 14 I like (come) to school by bus, but I hate (stand) in the rain and (wait) for it.
 - 15 Start (do) the exercise now, and stop (write) as soon as I tell you to.

Notice that by leaving out and in No. 14, waiting becomes a PRESENT PARTICIPLE.

39.2
(Elementary and)
Intermediate
'SUBJECT' OF
THE GERUND

Since the GERUND is a noun, it is logical to find it preceded by a POSSESSIVE PRONOUN OR a NOUN IN THE POSSESSIVE FORM.

- Do you object to a cigarette?
- Do you object to our cigarettes?
- Do you object to smoking?
- Do you object to our smoking?
- Do you object to our smoking cigarettes?

In practice this pattern is restricted almost entirely to pronouns and proper names. Non-personal nouns do not normally have a possessive form, nor can we easily make a possessive form with more complicated subjects. So we also have a parallel pattern using the objective (common) case.

There was no sign of the dinner appearing before I left.
We insisted on rich and poor being treated alike.
Will you approve of me and my friend attending the class as visitors?

Examples of this pattern are very common. They are not participle constructions but true gerunds, since the 'object' in each case is not merely the portion in italics, but the whole phrase to the end of the sentence. Therefore it is not surprising to find the same pattern used when a pronoun or proper noun is in SUBJECT relation to the gerund.

Do you mind their/them coming too?
I don't like your/you coming late every time.
I'm not very keen on Mary's/Mary living there alone.

In general the POSSESSIVE form is considered to be more literary and elegant; the OBJECTIVE form is found mainly in the spoken language, where it is probably just as common as the possessive form.

The following short passage from Dickens's David Copperfield is of interest:

(A dream) of the pair of hired post-horses being ready; and of Dora's going away to change her dress: of my aunt and Miss Clarissa remaining with us; and our walking in the garden; and my aunt . . . being mightily amused with herself . . .

(The whole of this long description of David's wedding in Chapter 43 is written in gerunds, and is well worth reading carefully.)

* * *

- Read the following, replacing the (pro)nouns in bold type by possessives:
 - 1 Our teacher won't like us coming late to school.
 - 2 I don't mind you talking to Cyril, but I always remember him complaining of you staying too long.
 - 3 Please excuse us calling you by your first name.
 - 4 I wonder why Maisie hates me wearing this pink shirt and green tie?
 - 5 It's no use you asking him to lend you any money.
 - 6 I'm afraid of John losing the way.
 - 7 They insisted on me going again next week.

- 8 Nobody minds you singing in class, but we can't stand you singing out of tune.
- 9 Do you remember me asking for the book before?
- 10 Cyril doesn't like the idea of me learning to ride his motor-cycle.
- 11 Please forgive me asking such a personal question.
- 12 Maisie can't understand me wanting to keep goldfish.
- 13 Cyril says he doesn't remember you lending him any money.
- 14 We shall miss you coming in to talk to us in the evenings.
- 15 Our friends objected to us leaving so soon.
- 16 I don't remember you having said before that you wanted to come.
- 17 I don't much like the idea of Mary going home alone in the dark.
- 18 You must please forgive us interrupting you in this way.
- 19 Did your uncle agree to you coming to see me?
- 20 I just can't understand you wanting to do this exercise again!

39.3 ● Read the following, replacing the possessives in bold type (Elementary and) by (pro)nouns:

- Intermediate 1 Would you mind my opening the window?
- 2 My friend Cyril can't understand my treating him like that.
- 3 I won't have your writing homework in pencil.
- 4 Did you give it back without his asking you?
- 5 Mother hates our eating and drinking between meals.
- 6 I remember their coming in, long after midnight.
- 7 I don't fancy his living with us for six months.
- 8 Cyril will never forget my showing him how I can stand on my hands.
- 9 I can't help your forgetting to bring your books.
- 10 I can't imagine their refusing to pay for it.
- 11 The teacher dislikes their sitting too far from the blackboard.
- 12 The doctor doesn't object to my eating a little meat now and then.

- 13 I can excuse Betty's being rude to me, but I can't forgive her being rude to Maisie.
- 14 My parents don't like my going out alone at night.
- 15 I'll have to insist on his not disturbing us before the end of the lesson.
- 16 I was afraid of your leaving without me.
- 17 Do you remember his coming here for the first time?
- 18 I can't understand their forgetting to come to our party.
- 19 The weather won't stop your playing in the match.
- 20 If you don't mind my saying so, I think we should do part of this exercise again.

SURVEY OF COMMON VERBS THAT ARE FOLLOWED BY
-ING FORM
OF VERB

LIST 1. VERBS FOLLOWED BY GERUND

appreciate	go on (= continue)
avoid	keep (on)
consider	leave off (= cease)
delay	mention
detest	mind (negs. and questions)
dislike	miss
enjoy	pardon
escape	practise
excuse	put off (= postpone)
fancy (negs. and questions)	recollect
finish	stop
forgive	suggest
give up¹	understand
can't resist	deny²
can't stand	postpone²
can't help	risk²

I couldn't deny that he'd made a reasonable excuse.
(I couldn't deny his having made . . .)
He denied knowing anything about the missing jewels.
It went on raining for days.
Do you recollect (my) telling John about the new house?

¹ And very many other transitive phrasal verbs, i.e. verb + adverbial (get off going to prison; talk over buying a house) and verb + preposition (see through his pretending to be an expert; get out of doing something unpleasant) combinations.

² The 'subjects' of the gerunds following the last three verbs can only be in the POSSESSIVE form; but as the effect is very heavy, it is more usual to employ a clause (see first example).

They don't understand your/you needing more money.

I've put off (delayed) writing to him till today.

I don't think anyone mentioned (Mary's/Mary) being there.

I couldn't resist buying such lovely apples.

Avoid drinking too much water with your meals.

We all appreciate your wanting to help us in our difficulties.

You certainly mustn't miss seeing this wonderful film.

What good luck! I've escaped being asked to do another grammar question.

I considered (thought about) painting the ceiling blue.

I gave up smoking when I was a young man.

Please excuse (pardon, forgive) my disturbing you.

OR: Please excuse (etc.) me for disturbing you.

In addition to these verbs, a few other common gerund constructions are worth noting here:

worth, it's no use, introductory it and there, the idiom there is no . . ., verbal object of all prepositions.

The play really wasn't worth watching. (See LIST 3.)

If it's worth doing at all, then it's worth doing well.

It's no use (your) asking for more when it's all gone.

It's been a pleasure meeting you.

I was surprised at there being no one to meet us.

There's no knowing (or telling) what will happen next.

Once (= as soon as) he starts telling stories, there's no stopping him.

We didn't mind your insisting on Mary's coming with us on the trip without paying anything.

LIST 2. SOME COMMON VERBS FOLLOWED BY EITHER GERUND OR INFINITIVE

advise	forget	prefer
agree	hate	propose
allow	intend	regret
attempt	leave	remember
begin	like	start
cease	love	study
continue	mean	try
dread	permit

There is often a difference of meaning between the gerund and infinitive constructions; examples will be given in Section 40.

LIST 3. GERUNDS WITH MEANING OF PASSIVE INFINITIVE
The OBJECT of the gerund is the SUBJECT of the main verb, e.g.

Your hair needs cutting. (. . . needs to be cut).

deserve

want merit

won't/doesn't/didn't bear

need

won't/doesn't/didn't stand

(His success) is past hoping (praying) for

(It's an idea) worth carrying out.

My shoes want mending.

His opinions won't bear repeating in public.

His brave action certainly deserves rewarding.

- 25 My wife hates (I, read) a newspaper at breakfast.

39.5Intermediate

See previous exercise.

LIST 4. OBJECTIVE CASE PLUS -ing (PRESENT PARTICIPLE)

This should not be confused with the true GERUND; the 'subject' of the -ing form is never in the POSSESSIVE case with this group of verbs.

*feel	*see
*hear	*watch
*listen to	hark at
*notice	smell
*observe	look at
*perceive	have (rare in present tense)

can imagine

he kept me waiting, etc.

we caught them stealing apples, etc.

we'll set/start/get them working, etc.

* These eight verbs can also be followed by the infinitive. (See next two exercises for difference between -ing form and infinitive.)

I heard him practising his violin.

I can smell fish cooking.

He didn't notice me waiting for him.

Hark at that woman talking!

He'll have us speaking English in a few months.

* * *

- Complete the following sentences by using the -ing form of the given verbs:

- Let's listen to (he, play) the piano.
- I noticed (the children, talk) together, and later caught (they, climb) my apple-trees.
- I heard (they all, come) downstairs and (go) into the kitchen.
- As we were passing your house in the car, we saw (you, cross) the road.
- We observed (a cat, watch) (a bird, feed) in the garden.
- I can't imagine (they all, get) to school in time.
- Just look at (all those dogs, run) across our garden!
- We didn't mean to keep (they, stand) so long in the rain.
- We must get (they, work) on a new play while their enthusiasm lasts. I hope we'll have (they, act) in a real theatre before long.
- For a short while he watched (we, peel) potatoes, then he looked at (the meat, roast) in the oven.
- I think I can smell (something, burn).
- Can you imagine (I, wear) a pink and blue tie?
- I didn't notice (you, watch) (we, have) a swim.
- They caught (he, open) your letters.
- I've always liked (see) (they, play) together.

40 Infinitive and Gerund40.1*Intermediate

The most important verbal constructions using the -ing form have been listed and practised in Section 39. Even more verbs require an INFINITIVE construction, either with the particle to or without it. There are a few verbs that may be followed by either the -ing form or the infinitive, but as the meaning may also be different, we shall mention the more important constructions in these notes.

LIST 4 of Exercise 39.5 gives the first 8 verbs as having both PRESENT PARTICIPLE and INFINITIVE constructions. The -ing form describes the action in progress (like a CONTINUOUS tense); the infinitive is used for a complete act.

I saw him crossing the road. (On the way to the other side.)

I saw him cross the road. (From one side to the other.)

I heard him singing in his bath. (Noticed this act in progress.)

I heard him sing at the concert. (I heard his whole performance.)

I watched John and Bill playing chess for a while, then I went home. (The game still continued.)

I watched John take Bill's queen, then I went home.

The verbs of LIST 2 may be followed by a GERUND or an INFINITIVE, usually with a difference of meaning. The basic difference is often that the GERUND is more general in meaning; the INFINITIVE suggests some special occasion (or series of occasions) with a subject more or less implied.

Riding is pleasanter than walking. (Comparing two activities.)

You'll find it better to take a bus than (to) walk. (Talking of some person's actions for some certain journey.)

I hate telling lies. (The act of lying in general.)

I hate to tell you this, but . . . (This particular thing that I must now tell you.)

I prefer staying quietly at home to going to a cinema. (In general.)

Come and see a film tonight. – No, thanks; I prefer to stay at home. (On this occasion.)

Here are some more comparisons between these two constructions:

like, don't like. With an INFINITIVE the affirmative means 'I prefer, want'; the negative means 'I am unwilling'.

I like to feel independent.

What would you like to eat?

John always likes to get to school in good time.

I shouldn't like to work as hard as he does.

I didn't like to say so, but . . .

I don't like to refuse him, but I'm afraid I shall have to.

With a GERUND the affirmative has the more general meaning of 'I am fond of'; the negative expresses the speaker's DISLIKE (a weak form of hate).

I like talking to you. (I always have found pleasure in your company.)

(Notice how should/would and INFINITIVE is used with the verbs like, love and hate when we wish to express the present single act: I should like to talk to you.)

Children like playing more than studying.

I don't like waiting in the rain.

Compare:

I don't like waking up so early as this. (= dislike)

I don't like to wake him up so early as this. (= don't want to) remember, forget. These have two meanings:

(1) the working (or not) of memory (INFINITIVE).

(2) (not) to have a recollection of something (GERUND).

I must remember to post the letter. (must not forget)

I don't remember posting the letter. (can't recall, bring to mind)

I forgot to come to the exam yesterday. (didn't remember)

I shall never forget taking this exam. (will always have this memory)

With these two verbs, therefore, we find that the INFINITIVE points to the future, the GERUND, to the past. A similar contrast is found when for (and the GERUND) has a past meaning, the INFINITIVE a future one:

I paid him for translating my letter. (after the translation)

I paid him to translate my letter. (before the translation)

He was kept indoors for being naughty.

He was kept indoors to do his homework.

afraid to, afraid of.

I'm afraid to make her angry. (I daren't make her angry.)

I'm afraid of making her angry. (I don't want to do this because I think it will make her angry.)

I'm afraid to disturb him at this late hour. (I daren't disturb him.)

I can't play the piano to you now as I'm afraid of disturbing him. (I don't want to play because the noise might disturb him.)

allow, permit. When a personal object is present these verbs take an INFINITIVE; otherwise they take a GERUND.

The librarian doesn't allow (permit) us to talk here.

The librarian doesn't allow (permit) talking here.

mean. (= to intend) takes INFINITIVE;
(it) means (= signifies) takes GERUND.

I mean to work harder next year.

We meant to tell you, but we forgot.

Having a party tonight will mean (our) working extra hard tomorrow.

The transport strike meant (their) having to walk to work every day.

try. With INFINITIVE it has the meaning 'make an effort or attempt'; with GERUND it means to test (by making an experiment).

He tried to speak French to us. (He made an effort to do so.)

He tried speaking French to us. (He spoke French, hoping that we should then understand him better.)

I tried to write with my left hand. (I made an effort to do so.)

I tried writing with my left hand. (I did write with my left hand, being curious to see the result.)

He tried to grow potatoes there. (He did his best to make them grow.)

He tried growing potatoes there. (He actually grew some, to see if they would be a successful crop for that kind of soil and climate.)

regret. Note the meanings of the three following constructions:

I regretted saying it wasn't true. (was sorry that I said . . .)

I regret having said it wasn't true. (am sorry that I said . . .)

I regret to say it wasn't true. (am sorry that I must now say . . .)

opportunity. The two usual constructions are:

(1) to have the (an) opportunity of (with GERUND).

(2) (There will) be an opportunity to (with INFINITIVE).

Construction (2) is nearly always introduced with some part of the verb be, and means 'a convenient time'.

You'll have an opportunity of meeting him later.

It'll be a good opportunity (for us) to ask for more books.

Last year I had the opportunity of going to London.

Let's hope there'll be an opportunity for you to go, too, one day.

occasion. Always with INFINITIVE: to have occasion to. The meaning is 'to have a reason for doing' or 'to find it necessary to do'.

I had occasion to go to London last year. (business reason)

I hope I shan't have occasion to punish you. (need to)

Compare:

If I have an opportunity of speaking to him, I'll give him your message. (meet him by some chance)

If I (ever) have occasion to speak . . . (if there is some reason why I must speak to him)

PREPOSITIONS

All prepositions are followed by a GERUND, except to. After to we sometimes find the INFINITIVE, as if the to were the infinitive particle. The most usual expressions where we find this confusion are used in the following examples:

They finally agreed to pay half the money in advance.

We're not accustomed to stay up so late.

He had a tendency (an inclination) to drink tea at all hours.

There was little incentive to work harder.

In these sentences the to is not strictly part of the infinitive; a gerund can be used instead. Apart from the five expressions above, to is regularly followed by the gerund:

I'm looking forward to seeing you next week.

I hope you're not averse to meeting a few foreigners.

Are you opposed to (Do you object to) my leaving early?

* * *

- Put the verbs between brackets into their correct form (notice any alternatives that might give a different meaning):
- 1 Have you ever watched people (try) (catch) fish?
 - 2 If you dislike (peel) onions, try (hold) them under water while (do) so.
 - 3 There'll be an opportunity (ask) questions before (leave) the hall after (hear) the lecture.
 - 4 His ideas are well worth (listen to) in spite of (they, sound) so unpractical.
 - 5 I hoped (arrange) (come) early (help) (put) the room in order for the party.
 - 6 I know you will pardon (I, say) so, but you keep (give) us too many hard words (spell) in English.
 - 7 I've had occasion (complain) of (he, come) late again.
 - 8 It's silly (risk) (get) your feet wet.
 - 9 Stop (make) a fool of yourself by (keep on) (repeat) the same question.
 - 10 I must remember (remind) Cyril that the garden needs (water).
 - 11 I remember (allow) them (play) in my garden without first (ask) for permission.
 - 12 We mustn't risk (be) late for the concert. I put off (go) last week, and I don't want (miss) (hear) him again.
 - 13 I appreciate (you, not want) (mention) (he, have) been to prison before (come) to work for us.
 - 14 Is it any use (I, ask) you (insist) on (John, be) present without (wait) for any further invitation?
 - 15 I recollect (my grandfather, say) that if a job was worth (do) at all it was worth (do) well.
 - 16 He likes (read) crime stories so I can't understand (he, be) unable to resist (look at) the end of the book first.
 - 17 I don't mind (the children, play) in the garden, but I won't have (they, walk) over my flowers.

- 18 There's no (know) what might happen if we start (they, work) on plans that won't bear (look into).
- 19 Don't (keep) (I, wait) long before (answer) my question.
- 20 Listen to (the baby, cry)! He can't stand (have) to wait for his food, and he won't leave off (cry) till he gets it.

- 40 I dislike (be) looked at while (attempt) (learn) (ski).
- 41 I want (you, wait) before (decide) (accept) his offer.
- 42 Can you imagine (he, study) (be) an acrobat?
- 43 At all costs we must avoid (treat) him in a way that might mean (he, turn) elsewhere for business.
- 44 I'm sorry (disturb) you with my sneezes; I've felt this cold (come on) for weeks.
- 45 They refused (allow) us (go in) without (sign) the book.
- 46 Why do you keep (object) to (have) the party at the Station Restaurant? Has anyone mentioned (go) there?
- 47 I usually manage (escape) (be) asked to these meetings, but this time I forgot (think up) a good excuse in time.
- 48 Forgive (I, ring) you up so late, but I couldn't allow your birthday (pass) without (congratulate) you.
- 49 'Did you remember (post) my letter on your way home?' 'I remember (go) into the post office for some stamps, but even then I'm afraid I forgot (post) it.'
- 50 I should like you (know) that it's no use (blame) me for your delay. I can't help (you, not be) allowed (leave) for America without first (finish) (write) your doctor's thesis.

41 Perfect Infinitive of Imaginary Past

41.1 Intermediate

The form to have eaten takes the place of the infinitive when certain constructions, notably is to, ought to, like, are used for imagined action in the past.

He is to come tomorrow.

He was to have come yesterday . . . (but he didn't).

Note that I should like to go has the past forms:
(1) I should like to have gone.

(2) I should have liked to go.

(3) I should have liked to have gone.

The type (3) is very clumsy, but strangely enough quite commonly heard. The other two are logically preferable, and the first is the more frequently heard. (See also notes to Exercise 41.2.)

Must, meaning 'is (logically) so', makes its past by adding a perfect infinitive.

He must be a fool. (= he certainly is!)

He must have been a fool. (= he certainly was!)

* * *

(41.1) ● Put into the imaginary past:

- 1 You ought to get here earlier.
- 2 They are to arrive at seven o'clock.
- 3 I suppose I ought to be more careful.
- 4 I should like to see the Pyramids of Egypt on my way home.
- 5 Maisie ought not to eat so many chocolates.
- 6 I am to stay away for a whole week.
- 7 Would you like to win the first prize?
- 8 How much ought I to give him?
- 9 Most of us would like to go there again.
- 10 Is he to repair this one, too?
- 11 I should like to see Cyril in yellow swimming shorts.
- 12 This must be the book you're talking about.
- 13 He is to visit Paris before returning to America.
- 14 They would like to get here before us.
- 15 Your wife ought to tell you all about it.
- 16 You should not give the baby a penknife to play with.
- 17 Lady Billingham is to open the new hospital.
- 18 Your grandfather must be a kind old gentleman to give you such lovely presents.
- 19 I ought to send my aunt a Christmas present.
- 20 We would like to spend a holiday together.

41.2 See Exercise 41.1.
Advanced Some people assert that there is a difference of meaning between

- (1) I should like to have gone; and
- (2) I should have liked to go.

This difference is largely imaginary, but is argued presumably as follows:

They say that in (1) the liking is a present one, and in (2) it is past. This idea is clearer if we consider carefully the following pair:

(1) I should like to have gone. (What a pity I didn't!)

(2) I should have liked to go (if only I had known about it at the time).

The PERFECT INFINITIVE is commonly used to express an unfulfilled hope or expectation:

I hoped to have seen you before now.

We meant to have stayed there a week.

Henry was to have bought some wine ... (but he forgot).

* * *

● Put into the imaginary past:

- 1 I am to go there tomorrow, weather permitting.
- 2 You ought not to use the electric light more than is necessary.
- 3 I should like to lend you some books.
- 4 There is to be a special train to the coast on Thursday.
- 5 You ought to know better than to do that.
- 6 He ought not to eat melon if he knows it disagrees with him.
- 7 According to the weather prophets, it ought not to rain on the day of the race.
- 8 This dress is to be made with a fashionably short skirt.
- 9 They would like to leave the cinema before the end of the picture.
- 10 The ground-to-air missile system ought to be a useful part of the defence.
- 11 These chocolates ought not to cost more than thirty pence a box.
- 12 The policeman says he would like to have more evidence before arresting the suspected thief.
(N.B. - says need not be changed to said.)
- 13 The telegram ought to be sent only if the patient dies.
- 14 An exhibition of paintings is to be held at the British Institute on July 9th.

- 15 You ought to buy your hats at a cheaper shop.
 16 It would certainly be better not to speak to him at all.
 17 I expect to meet you at Interlaken.
 18 He would laugh to see you with that funny hat on.
 19 It is better to love in vain, than never to love at all.
 20 I'm sure she would like to cook it herself.
 21 They hope to win the tournament by Thursday.
 22 He certainly would be foolhardy to attack them unarmed.
 23 I mean to have another try if I can.
 24 You might find it easier to leave me out altogether.
 25 It would be easier to climb over the mountain than to go round the valley, if there weren't so much snow.

42 Verb, Noun or Adjective

42.1 Elementary

Many common words can be used as both verbs and nouns. Because they occur more frequently as verbs, students are apt to get less practice in their use as nouns.

* * *

- Make two sentences with each of the following words: (a) as a verb; (b) as a noun:
 cook; bite; swim; walk; answer; drink; rain; rest; work; smell; shave; smile; use¹; burn; cut; fight; pay; play; brush; dress; sleep; watch; kiss; look.

42.2 Intermediate

- Make sentences with each of the following words: (a) as a verb; (b) as a noun:
 burn; cough; fall; fear; copy; fold; light; drive; mark; smoke; sneeze; show; stand; taste; break; call; climb; cover; fly; help; kick; measure; move; colour; water; arm; hand; damage; place; act; dust; iron.

42.3 Advanced

- Make two sentences with each of the following words: (a) as a verb; (b) as a noun:
 change; doubt; jump; laugh; lift; start; stop; turn; step; rub; shake; tear; touch; want; bend; catch; draw; hold; leave; make; air; book; shoe; stomach; mouth¹; finger; thumb; eye; steam; house²; match; dog; harbour.

42.4 Elementary

- Make two sentences with each of the following words: (a) as an adjective; (b) as a verb:
 dry; open; shut; warm; clean; hurt; wet.

42.5 Intermediate

- Make two sentences with each of the following words: (a) as an adjective; (b) as a verb:
 dirty; clear; cut; empty; light; live³; mean; free.

42.6 Advanced

- Make two sentences with each of the following words: (a) as an adjective; (b) as a verb:
 complete; equal; loose; second; separate⁴; wrong; better; frequent⁵; right.

43 have a —

43.1 Elementary

Some languages, notably the Slavonic group, can make a distinction between an action done once only and an action done repeatedly. In English we have the have a plus verb-noun pattern for the 'once only' form.

We were riding in the car. (when we saw him)

We rode there in the car. (means of transport)

We had a ride in the car. (had one experience of this action)

Although this can be a means of defining one particular performance of the action designated by the verb-noun, it must be admitted that the simple tense is usually equally good.

² v. [hauz], n. [haus]

³ a. [laiv], v. [liv]

⁴ a. ['sepɪt], v. ['sepəreɪt]

⁵ a. ['fri:kwənt], v. [fri'kwent]

- (43.1) ● Make short sentences in the PAST, FUTURE OR IMPERATIVE form with have a plus:
drink; look; rest; ride; walk; talk; smoke; swim;
wash; bath.

43.2 See Exercise 43.1.
Intermediate

- Make short sentences with have a plus:
sit down; lie down; go; dance; chance; throw.
In some of these expressions take is sometimes heard.
Take a walk, look, bath, etc.

44 Interrogatives

44.1 See also preliminary Exercise 8.1.
Elementary

SUBJECTIVE CASE:

Who for persons in general – pronoun

What for things in general – pronoun

What for persons or things in general – adjective

Which for restricted persons or things – pronoun and adjective

Who broke my pencil? (of all possible people)

What has happened? (of all possible things)

What books are these?

What people live in this country?

Which of you can answer my question? (limited choice)

Which house is it, No. 32 or No. 34? (limited choice)

Of course there are occasions when the general and restricted interrogatives seem equally good, and the choice then depends on the speaker's point of view.

* * *

- Add the question-word to the following questions:

- 1 — went with you to London?
- 2 — of these books is your favourite?
- 3 — girl won the beauty competition?
- 4 — is my place?
- 5 — came in just now?

OBLIQUE CASES. In the spoken language who serves for both SUBJECT and OBJECT, and whose for the POSSESSIVE. There is no possessive for what and which; for 'of what' and 'of which' see Exercise 44.6 on prepositions with interrogatives.

See Exercise 44.4 for further note on who? = whom?

Who saw you yesterday?

Who did you see yesterday?

– Note the inversion when anything but the subject is placed first.

Whose car is that? (Whose is that car?)

GENERAL REVISION

44.9

Intermediate

In the same way as explained in Exercise 44.6, prepositions are separated from the interrogative where.

Where have you come from?

Note the question-form: What is . . . like?

* * *

- Ask questions with interrogatives (including why, when, where, how) to which the following statements are the answers. The point of the question appears in bold type:

- 1 A leaf is part of a tree.
- 2 My father is an engine driver.
- 3 That handsome man over there is Mr Green.
- 4 I am coming back on Friday.
- 5 She is singing because she is happy.
- 6 You left your glasses on the table.
- 7 My friend Maisie married a sailor.
- 8 He opened the door with a key.
- 9 Cyril has only £17 in the bank.
- 10 I have two cigarettes.
- 11 I intend to remain here for two weeks.
- 12 You can give your old trousers to the poor.

- 13 He has given the book to his wife.
- 14 If you want to know, that is my dog.
- 15 Clumsy Clara must have broken it.
- 16 You ought to have finished the work last week.
- 17 I don't buy a car because I can't afford one.
- 18 Oregon is an American state.
- 19 I am going to London with my parents.
- 20 I gave £5 for this dog.
- 21 She says she has two brothers.
- 22 Everybody says he is a good writer.
- 23 She is a very charming girl.
- 24 Well, I really want both of them.
- 25 It took them about four months to make this film.

44.10 Advanced

See Notes to Exercise 44.9.

Advanced students might like to see the full table of positionals in literary English.

here	there	where? (= place)
hither	thither	whither? (= to)
hence	thence	whence? (= from)

In the modern spoken language, and to a large extent in modern literary English, only the top three remain, being modified by from to express direction away; to can be used with where but is not strictly necessary.

Notice the use of Whereabouts? when asking for approximate position.

Note the colloquial form: How (What) about —ing

How about going to the pictures?
— Is it a good idea?

* * *

- Write questions to which the following statements might be the answer. The point of the question appears in bold type:

- 1 I am taking this garden roller home for my uncle.
- 2 My brother is as strong as a horse.
- 3 He stole the money for the sake of his starving father.
- 4 That magnificent car is my brother's.
- 5 They make false teeth by means of a mould.
- 6 Iraq produces 5 per cent of England's oil needs.
- 7 The human heart is about as big as a clenched fist.

- 8 Henry lives about three miles away.
- 9 Our conversation was entirely about business matters.
- 10 All of us liked your lecture.
- 11 I was going to get it from the chemist's.
- 12 I was going to put it in the cupboard.
- 13 He jumped on the policeman's foot.
- 14 He fell into the river because he forgot he was on a boat.
- 15 He is a very handsome fellow.
- 16 You've told him dozens of times not to do it.
- 17 This magnifying-glass is for counting stamp perforations.
- 18 The English for 'zmrzlina' is 'ice-cream'.
- 19 You must drink out of the blue cup.
- 20 His apartment is just about two miles beyond the bridge.
- 21 Maisie is as stupid as they make them.
- 22 I put your ear-rings somewhere near the clock on the mantelpiece.
- 23 All this time I've been thinking how nice it would be to be home again.
- 24 Yes, I think a short walk before supper is a very good idea.
- 25 Old Tom is as fat as a porpoise these days.
- 26 Well, since you ask me, I took you for a bigger fool than you appear to be.
- 27 As a matter of fact, he scored seven out of ten.
- 28 Since you mention it, you went off with my umbrella.
- 29 He fell seventy feet down the cliff.
- 30 Czechoslovakia is a fascinating country.

45 Interrogative Responses

45.1 Intermediate

The automatic question responses to statements fall into two main groups:

TYPE (1) Where the agent or prepositional part of the command is missing, and the response asks for further clarification.

Go quickly. – Where to?
Open it. – What with?

These are normally spoken with a falling intonation. The preposition is always at the end in this pattern; whom is never heard.

For TYPE (2) see Exercise 45.2.

The remarks below should be addressed to the student, who should make an appropriate response. Some of the prepositions are suggested.

* * *

(45.1)

● Respond as above to the following:

- 1 Listen.
- 2 Send it at once.
- 3 Look.
- 4 Cut the string.
- 5 Go on, have another dance! (with)
- 6 Don't you ever sit and think? (about)
- 7 Sharpen my pencil, will you? (with or for)
- 8 Mother has given all my clothes away.
- 9 I've just bought a birthday present. (for)
- 10 Address this envelope.
- 11 Play with me. (at)
- 12 I've just received a big parcel.
- 13 John's just arrived by air.
- 14 I've been to the pictures. (with)
- 15 Tell me a story. (about)
- 16 Take it away. (to)
- 17 I'm thinking. (with)
- 18 I've been punched on the nose.
- 19 He's married at last.
- 20 I'm writing a book.

45.2

Intermediate

See also Exercise 45.1.

TYPE (2) is a response of surprise, consternation or mere misunderstanding of the complete sense. In Exercise 45.1 the sense was always incomplete, so the emphasis always fell on the PREPOSITION in the final position as the active agent.

Write a letter! Who to?

–The whole idea of 'to what person' is missing, and comes naturally in the strongest position, i.e. the end.

In TYPE (2) we question THE WHOLE IDEA, and repeat it with the accent on the QUESTION-WORD, which now takes the final position. Notice the changed intonation.

TYPE (1): Open the bottle. – What with? (falling intonation)

TYPE (2): Open the bottle with this pin. – With what? (rising intonation)

Why, when, where, and the how compounds behave similarly. Whom does not occur.

The statements below are to be addressed to the student, who should make a suitable response.

* * *

● Respond, as TYPE (2) above, to the following; the key words are in bold type:

- 1 These chocolates are for you.
- 2 He gave it to your mother-in-law.
- 3 Clean it with your handkerchief.
- 4 I came here on a tricycle.
- 5 I'm going to tea with the King.
- 6 Have you seen the new play by my great-aunt Gertrude?
- 7 Cyril has fallen on a cactus!
- 8 An army marches on its stomach.
- 9 Will you finish off this letter to the Home Needleworkers' Socialist Association?
- 10 In our play I act the part of a Grand Duchess.
- 11 I'm waiting for my grandmother.
- 12 He couldn't come because he was drunk.
- 13 I'm going for a walk with your friend Maisie.
- 14 You can cook a kipper on a candle.
- 15 Send this parcel to my great-uncle's youngest brother-in-law.
- 16 I've had measles sixteen times.
- 17 So I told her about your affair with that pretty dancer! (two possible responses)
- 18 I like my breakfast at half past five.
- 19 Mix it with lemonade.
- 20 I bought the whole set for five pence!

45.3

Advanced

See notes to Exercises 45.1 and 45.2.

There is a further development of TYPE (2), expressing extreme surprise, consternation, or disbelief. Here the whole of the speaker's remark is echoed to him with the unbelievable section turned into the appropriate interrogative. This interrogative takes a heavy stress and quickly rising intonation.

So I had the bill sent to my wife. – You had it sent to WHOOO!!!?

Sir, you're nothing but a raving lunatic! – I'm a WHAAAT!!!? (Note that the indefinite article is retained.)

I dyed my hair green yesterday. – You dyed it WHAAT colour!!!?

(The teacher reads the statement, the student responds.)

* * *

● Respond similarly to the following remarks:

- 1 Columbus discovered America in 1764.
- 2 I love eating raw fish.
- 3 She wants to be a film star.
- 4 I'm afraid you'll have to sleep in the bathroom.
- 5 Mr Poorly has £45,000 in the bank.
- 6 I had lunch with the Prime Minister yesterday.
- 7 Nero was a kind-hearted emperor.
- 8 For my dinner yesterday I had a jar of pickles.
- 9 Jane is going to marry the dustman!
- 10 She was wearing a hideous ostrich-feather hat.
- 11 My brother has twenty-nine children.
- 12 So I gave your plans of a submarine to a strange-looking foreigner.
- 13 Baby has swallowed a teaspoon!
- 14 Schoolmistresses are usually very attractive.
- 15 The cat has had kittens in father's hat!
- 16 I left my cigarette-end on the petrol-tin.
- 17 My sister is going to live at Omsk.
- 18 She was seen riding on a coal-cart.
- 19 Just throw the rubbish out of the window.
- 20 Darling, I've bought this bottle of whisky for your sake!

46 Relatives

46.1

Elementary

GENERAL REMARKS

The apparently haphazard English system of relatives is best approached by teaching them from the beginning in their two main groups of DEFINING and NON-DEFINING relatives. Although the following exercises are meant for practice in spoken English, the points they deal with are equally applicable to the written language.

By far the greater number of relatives in general use are of the DEFINING type; this kind should therefore be taught first, though some grammar books deal with the forms of the non-defining relative as the standard, and include the defining relative rather as an after-thought.

For the sake of clarity, the following forms should be taught and practised in writing and speaking. The forms in square brackets [] are acceptable alternatives, but are NOT recommended for active teaching; teach contact-clauses by omitting that whenever possible. A that in round brackets () can be omitted; in spoken English it usually is.

DEFINING RELATIVE

	PEOPLE	THINGS
SUBJECT	who [that]	that [which]
OBJECT	(that)	(that)
PREPOSITION	(that) . . . preposition	(that) . . . preposition
POSSESSIVE	whose	of which [whose]

NON-DEFINING RELATIVE

SUBJECT	—, who —,	—, which —,
OBJECT	—, whom —,	—, which —,
PREPOSITION	—, preposition + whom —, [—, who(m) — preposition,]	—, preposition + which —, [—, which — preposition,]
POSSESSIVE	—, whose —,	—, of which —, [—, whose —,]

DEFINING RELATIVE

Here the relative clause is an essential part of the idea being expressed, in that it defines or limits its antecedent to one particular selected type.

The man is coming to tea. (Well, what man?)

The man who [that] wrote this poem is coming to tea.

who wrote this poem cannot be omitted, since without it we cannot define the man.

Most of the relatives of spoken English – probably at least 90 per cent – fall into this category. In Exercise 46.1, Numbers 1 to 10 are in the simplest form, with the defining relative clause at the end of the sentence, as in:

That's the boy who broke the window.

Here's the book I lost last week.

It would be convenient to use that throughout, but custom prefers who in the subject for persons (especially proper names), and inefficient mechanism gives us whose and of which for the possessive, since that has no possessive of its own, and cannot suffer a preposition before it.

We can therefore tabulate the following elementary types:

SUBJECT: The man who [that] wrote this poem is coming to tea.

The book that [which] is lying on the table is mine.

OBJECT: The man you met yesterday is coming to tea. (The man that you met yesterday is coming to tea.)

The book I put on the table is mine. (The book that I put on the table is mine.)

We prefer the contact-clause without that.

For Prepositionals and Possessives see next exercise.

The forms in square brackets are possible alternatives, but the main forms as outlined above should be insisted on in the exercises.

N.B. – Defining relative clauses are NEVER preceded by a comma in writing.

(46.1) ● Add the missing relative, but make a contact-clause where possible:

- 1 I know a man — eats paper.
- 2 It's a kind of paper — you can eat.
- 3 He eats only the paper — his wife makes.
- 4 His wife is a woman — loves a joke.
- 5 She's one of the people — I really like.
- 6 You can't write on the paper — she makes.
- 7 Has this paper got a flavour — pleases you?
- 8 Have you met anyone else — does such tricks?

- 9 I'm looking for somebody — I can trust.
- 10 I want to find a man — will lend me money.
- 11 The man — you want has just left.
- 12 The lady — was here yesterday has gone to London.
- 13 The magazine — you lent me is very interesting.
- 14 The chair — was broken is now mended.
- 15 The old man — lives next door has just died.
- 16 Women — work in hospitals are to be admired.
- 17 The cigarette — you are smoking is a Player's.
- 18 The girl — lives opposite my house is very pretty.
- 19 The fish — I ate yesterday was not so good.
- 20 The street — leads to the school is very wide.
- 21 The flowers — I cut this morning are still fresh.
- 22 The dress — you are wearing is lovely.
- 23 The person — is sitting next to me is not very clever.
- 24 The man — cut your hair did it very badly.
- 25 The letter — we received today had no stamp on it.
- 26 The music — the orchestra is playing is a Strauss waltz.
- 27 Was the hat — you were wearing yesterday very expensive?
- 28 The boy — threw that stone will be punished.
- 29 The doctor — she visited is famous.
- 30 The noise — you hear is only our dog fighting.

46.2

Elementary DEFINING RELATIVE

The prepositional and possessive forms are as follows:

PREPOSITIONAL

PEOPLE:

The man you spoke to yesterday is coming to tea. (The man that you spoke to yesterday is coming to tea.)

Use of whom should be strongly discouraged here.

THINGS:

The book you were looking at just now belongs to me. (The book that you were looking at just now belongs to me.)

Use of which should be strongly discouraged here.

POSSESSIVE

PEOPLE:

The man whose name I always forget is coming to tea, or

The man I always forget the name of is coming to tea.

THINGS:

This case is very rare with things; we prefer a way out.

The book with the torn cover is mine.

(= The book of which the cover is torn ... - very clumsy.)

N.B. - A defining relative clause is never preceded by a comma.

(46.2)

● Add relatives, WHERE NEEDED:

- 1 The book — I was reading yesterday was a detective story.
- 2 The man — you spoke to in the street is my English teacher.
- 3 I should like to see the trees — you picked these apples from.
- 4 There's the lady — purse has been stolen.
- 5 The people — you were living with in London are coming to see you.
- 6 The picture — you were talking about has been sold.
- 7 People — live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones.
- 8 Buy it back from the man — you sold it to.
- 9 What's the name of that man — wife has run away and left him?
- 10 Can you remember the person — you took it from?
- 11 Where is there a shop — sells picture-postcards?
- 12 That's the knife and fork — I eat with.
- 13 Where is the man — sold me these sun-glasses?
- 14 What's that music — you are listening to?
- 15 I don't like the house — he lives in.
- 16 The man — made these shoes doesn't know his trade.
- 17 Here comes the girl — I am hiding from.
- 18 The people — are looking at that house are my parents.
- 19 The house — they are looking at is my house.
- 20 And the girl — you see at the door is my sister.

● Add relatives, WHERE NEEDED (i.e. use contact-clauses where possible):

- 1 The knife — we cut the bread with is very sharp.
- 2 The man — I gave the book to has died.
- 3 The shop — we buy our cakes from is shut.
- 4 The girl — works in the office is my sister.
- 5 I'm afraid that's all — I've got.
- 6 The paint on the seat — you are sitting on is still wet.
- 7 The ties — Cyril wears are awful.
- 8 Any man — listens to you is a fool.
- 9 The old gentleman — lives across the road has got married for the fifth time.
- 10 The policeman — helmet you knocked off is at the door.
- 11 The horse — you were telling me about yesterday came in last.
- 12 The man — is sitting at the desk is the secretary.
- 13 The man — you see at the desk is the secretary.
- 14 The girl — mother I was talking to has left the room.
- 15 The man — I pointed out to you in the street is a crook.
- 16 The pretty girl — you were speaking to just now slapped Cyril's face yesterday.
- 17 This is the very room — I first met my wife in.
- 18 'It's a wise child — knows its own father.'
- 19 All the people — ever met him have disliked him.
- 20 The coat — I gave Maisie for her birthday is already wearing out.
- 21 Any paper — you read will give the same story.

- 22 The glass — you are drinking out of hasn't been washed.
- 23 A woman — mind is made up is more obstinate than a mule.
- 24 She's the most beautiful woman — has appeared on this stage.
- 25 The meat — we had for lunch was very tough.

NON-DEFINING RELATIVES

NON-DEFINING RELATIVES are not very common in speech, but occur quite frequently in the written language. The reason is that speech prefers simple sentences, and the NON-DEFINING relative is a deliberate inclusion of additional matter within the sentence. Often the non-defining clause comes from a stylistic combination of two distinct statements (see Exercise 46.9).

Compare the following examples:

- (1) DEFINING: The boy (that) you saw yesterday is coming to tea.
- (2) NON-DEFINING: My brother Dick, whom you saw yesterday, is coming to tea.

The relative clause in (2) can be left out without any material damage to the sense, whereas the same omission in (1) robs the sentence of a most essential fact. The normal conversational form of (2) would probably be: 'My brother Dick's coming to tea. You saw him yesterday, you know,' or, 'You remember you saw my brother Dick yesterday? Well, he's coming to tea.'

The non-defining relative is ALWAYS preceded by a comma in writing. This is very important in the written language, because only whom belongs exclusively to the non-defining relative, and such sentences as:

NON-DEFINING: My wife, who lives in New York, has just written me a letter.

DEFINING: My wife who lives in New York has just written me a letter.

have startlingly different meanings.

NON-DEFINING: He has two sisters, who work in the Ministry. (= only two sisters)

DEFINING: He has two sisters who work in the Ministry. (= and presumably other sisters who work elsewhere)

The two sentences with NON-DEFINING clauses show the two principal uses of the non-defining relative.

(1) Parenthetical. (2) Connective (= and ...).

Forms to be used:

	PEOPLE	THINGS
SUBJECT	—, who —,	—, which —,
OBJECT	—, whom —,	—, which —,

N.B. — The non-defining objective case whom and which, unlike the defining objective case that, can NEVER be omitted in this kind of relative clause.

The punctuation referred to above is reflected in speech. The first comma represents the introduction of a separate intonation pattern or 'tune'. The need for students to make this difference in intonation — if only mentally while reading — justifies the inclusion of these exercises in a book largely devoted to spoken English. But notice that the 1st person is avoided in the following exercises since we are usually speaking informally when we are using the 1st person, whereas the non-defining relative is generally a formal construction.

- Add the necessary relative pronoun to the following:
- 1 Louis XIV, — we mentioned last week, became king in 1643.
- 2 The princess, — had been married for ten years, had just had her ninth baby.
- 3 The author, — has been to Paris, has just returned.
- 4 See page 33 for a map of the area, — we also printed in our last number.

NON-DEFINING RELATIVE

The other cases are:

	PEOPLE	THINGS
POSSESSIVE	—, whose —,	—, of which —, [—, whose —,]
PREPOSITIONAL	—, to etc. whom —, [—, who(m) — to , etc.]	—, to etc. which —, [—, which — to , etc.]

The forms in square brackets are alternatives that occasionally occur, but which should not be taught to students. N.B. — The whom and which of the non-defining relative is NEVER omitted like the corresponding that of the defining relative.

- 3 It was the last king of Ruritania, — name few people can remember.
- 4 The elephant, — is an animal that never forgets, lives more than a hundred years.
- 5 Nicholas II, to — you were referring, was the last czar of Russia.
- 6 He is a famous scientist, about — many books have been written.
- 7 The chief of police, — work is very important, takes care of the public safety.
- 8 Geometry, about — so many books have been written, is not really a dull subject.
- 9 They developed the hovercraft, — seemed to have a great future.
- 10 The King, — life has been devoted to his country, deserves his popularity.
- 11 Parliament, — has just started a new session, is going to discuss the new Bill today.
- 12 This subject, about — I was speaking yesterday, is an important part of our course.
- 13 The Tower of London, about — a lecture is to be given tomorrow, is a famous historic building.
- 14 Beethoven, — music you have just been listening to, was one of the world's finest composers.
- 15 You should not miss the Iguazú Falls, — are said to be the finest in the world.
- 16 The lark, — has a very sweet song, builds its nest on the ground.
- 17 We cannot decide whether tomatoes, — we are all fond of, are a fruit or a vegetable. (See End-preposition note, Exercise 46.10).
- 18 The science of medicine, in — progress has been very rapid lately, is perhaps the most important of all the sciences.
- 19 Chess, — is a very old game, is difficult to play.
- 20 Mme Curie, — discovered radium, is one of the greatest women of our age.

MIXED TYPES

Two other important occasions where that is preferred to who are:

After an interrogative.

Who that understands music could say his playing was good? (More usually found in writing than in speech.)

After much; little; few. (Compare all, any, only, Exercise 46.3.)

The few that came were enthusiastic.

- Combine the following ideas by means of DEFINING or NON-DEFINING relatives, using a contact-clause wherever possible:
- 1 Is that the new station? You pointed it out to me last week.
- 2 This is the man. I gave money to him this morning.
- 3 Anne Boleyn was Henry VIII's second wife. Henry executed her in 1536.
- 4 Who would look elsewhere, as Henry did? He had such a charming wife.
- 5 An old soldier sits begging on the pavement. His legs were shot away in the last war.
- 6 His stepmother was not very kind to him. He was living with her.
- 7 He had seen only a few policemen. They were all young. (Begin with 'The few . . .')
- 8 Last week I went to see the country town. He used to live in that town.
- 9 Bring me the cigarettes. I left them on the table. The table stands by the window.
- 10 Mozart spent the last ten years of his life in Vienna. His birthplace was Salzburg.
- 11 What was the name of the girl? She came here last night.
- 12 This large map belonged to Ptolemy XI. In the middle of it you can see part of the Arctic Circle.
- 13 We now come to Euclid. Readers are well acquainted with his work.
- 14 I'm sure it was Cyril. He told her to do it.
- 15 The matter has been settled. You were arguing about it last night.

46.8
Advanced

It has been pointed out that the NON-DEFINING RELATIVE is not heard in spoken English, except as a CONNECTIVE. (See next exercise.)

The idea of parenthetical and supplementary remarks is achieved in speech by simple conjunctions like and, but, because, for, since, as, etc., or by various speech devices for introducing parentheses and asides, like by the way, you remember, incidentally, etc.

The Lord Mayor, whom you met at the reception yesterday, gave me a handsome present.

The above sentence would never occur in spoken English but is quite a normal written English construction.

In speech it would be expressed as two separate ideas:

Either: You remember you met the Lord Mayor yesterday?

Well, look what a handsome present he gave me!

or: The Lord Mayor gave me this handsome present. You met him at the reception yesterday (you know).

* * *

- Using any simple connective devices, or splitting the material into conversational units, reduce the following series of non-defining relatives to an acceptable spoken form of narrative:

- 1 The Prime Minister of Ruritania, to whom I introduced you last week, is extremely fond of his national drink.
- 2 The national drink of the Ruritarians, which (as you know) is mint tea, comes from the neighbouring country of Rusticaria.
- 3 So the import tax on mint, by which the Ruritarians vastly increase their national income, is a very high one.
- 4 My friend the Prime Minister, who after all only had the best interests of his country at heart, attempted to cut the tax down by half.
- 5 The leader of the ensuing revolution, which succeeded in overthrowing the government, dismissed my friend from his post.
- 6 The return of the old high tax, which now seemed inevitable, would mean that the neighbouring mint-growing country must sell at rock-bottom prices to enable the Ruritarians (who aren't, on the whole, very rich) to buy the commodity at a reasonable price.

- 7 The Rusticarians, many of whom had hoped for better selling-prices, were terribly upset by the revolution, which to them meant a return to pinching and scraping.
- 8 The Ruritarians, most of whom had been looking forward to bigger and better tea-parties, at which of course their own national delicacy, pickled peach-stones, would be consumed in large quantities, were also terribly upset by the revolution, which to them meant a return to pinching and scraping too.
- 9 The revolutionaries, who had only used the Prime Minister's attempt to reduce the mint import tax as an excuse to get control, were terribly upset by the result, through which they were now compelled to buy their tea at the old high price, which prevented them from celebrating as much as they would have liked.
- 10 The Rusticarians, in whose minds their neighbours' revolution figured as a blow against their own national prestige as the Land of Mint and Honey, at once broke off all diplomatic relations with the Ruritarians.
- 11 The impending state of war, which would probably bring about the ruin of both countries, was only less tragic than the cutting off of the supplies of luscious green mint, without which the Ruritarians could scarcely live.
- 12 The situation was aggravated by the action of the Urticarians (from whose country the Ruritarians import their national delicacy, pickled peach-stones), who suddenly announced a rise in the price of that commodity, which according to them was due to the scarcity of fruit because of drought.
- 13 The despair of the Ruritarians, for whom life was now scarcely worth living, was so great that the Revolutionary Government, in which nobody now had much confidence, recalled my friend the ex-Prime Minister, who had spent a happy week trying to grow mint in the stony soil of his country estate.

- 14 My friend the Prime Minister at once cut the import tax on mint by half, in honour of which Ruritanian flags were flown throughout Rusticaria; and peach-trees began to flourish miraculously throughout Urticaria, whose government were willing to sell their produce to their neighbours at any price.
- 15 So my friend has brought peace to the Ruritanians, who now consume even more of their national drink, fresh mint tea, which they get from the gratified Rusticarians, and enjoy their national delicacy, pickled peach-stones, which they get from the thankful Urticarians, who would otherwise have half their crops rotting on the trees.

CONNECTIVE
RELATIVE

The only form of NON-DEFINING RELATIVE found with any frequency in the spoken language is the who, which, etc., replacing and. It forms a stronger link with the first part of the sentence when we wish to avoid a repetition of either the subject or object or the whole idea of the first part.

It was invented by the Earl of Sandwich, and he gave his name to the thing we eat today.

It was invented by the Earl of Sandwich, who gave his name to the thing we eat today.

He bored a hole in my tooth, and it was very unpleasant.

He bored a hole in my tooth, which was very unpleasant.

Sometimes, however, the non-defining clause is a mere trick of style, as in a number of cases in Exercise 46.8, not to be recommended to students for imitation:

It crashed into a bus-load of children, who were all killed (OR all of whom were killed).

— Better as: They were all killed.

- Reconstruct the following sentences, using a relative pronoun as a connective:

- 1 He walked along the wall on his hands, and that was a very difficult thing to do.

- 2 He has three sons, and they all work in the same office.
- 3 He gave each of the ladies a rose, and this earned him their smiles.
- 4 He studied hard in his youth, and that contributed to his success in later life.
- 5 His cousin built several houses, and they are none of them more than five miles from the heart of London.
- 6 Cyril used to be fond of boxing, and that accounts for his crooked nose.
- 7 John went fishing last weekend, and that is one of the pleasantest ways of spending one's leisure.
- 8 There were two spare rooms upstairs, and neither of them had been used for years.
- 9 They have four children, and they all go to a Comprehensive School.
- 10 He passed his examination with honours, and this made his parents very proud of him.
- 11 The soldier on overseas service had a baby girl aged three years, but he had never seen her.
- 12 He was dropped when he was a baby, and that made him a permanent invalid.
- 13 They are going on a voyage of exploration to the South Pole, and it will be a dangerous undertaking.
- 14 There were two dwarfs at the circus, and neither of them was over three feet high.
- 15 The Professor came home drunk the other night, and that shocked the whole neighbourhood.

DEFINING RELATIVE. Read notes to Exercises 46.1–3 for general remarks on the defining relative.

Advanced students frequently ask why we say such and such a thing. The following brief notes on the relative are added for this purpose to be expanded as required by the teacher.

HISTORICAL. That was originally used in relative clauses of all kinds; the wh— forms were purely interrogative. Gradually the wh— forms came to be used side by side with that, and since the eighteenth century have gained great popularity in English, largely through the efforts of classical writers, especially Addison and Johnson, who attempted to make an English imitation of Latin grammatical forms.

Dr Johnson refers to end-prepositions, that, and contact-clauses as 'colloquial barbarisms'. Dryden writes of himself, 'I am often put to a stand in considering whether what I write be the idiom of the tongue, . . . and have no other way to clear my doubts but by translating my English into Latin.' Addison has an enlightening essay in the Spectator in which he reverses historical development by maligning the 'Jacksprat' that, which he asserts has been damaging poor who and which. All this classical imitation caused a great deal of confusion, and introduced several erroneous ideas and clumsy forms. That fell into disuse in written English, but lived happily on in speech. Oddly enough the pendulum swung the other way when things with an archaic flavour became popular through the later Romantics, especially through the works of De Quincey. Partly because of this contrived lapse from use in the written language, and partly because we have come to feel it as a 'neuter' word, it is rarely heard for persons in the subjective case; and as it is the custom to make a contact-clause with the objective and prepositional cases, we don't hear it there either. We have had to borrow whose for the possessive.

END-PREPOSITION. The defining relative with that or as a contact-clause frequently requires the preposition at the end of the clause. This valuable idiomatic device in the English language should not be forced into the background in favour of the unnatural Latin-English form with the preposition in front of the word it governs. Many hideous phrases are written, and sometimes even spoken, in a misguided effort to avoid what is really a sound English construction. Such phrases as it's worth waiting for; it depends on who you're dealing with; we've done the best we could think of; that was all it amounted to, etc., can scarcely be expressed in any other way. Students should beware of trying to use the Latin construction with phrasal verbs i.e. strongly associated verbs and particles (laugh at, wonder at, take care of, do without), and when such combinations form one semantic whole (give up, take over, etc.) where the particle has an adverbial force. A lieutenant once dared to correct a telegram from a superior officer on this point. He received a further telegram reading: 'Insolence is something up with which I will not put.'

OTHER USES OF that AS DEFINING RELATIVE

DOUBLE CONTROL. Which and who are definitely at a disadvantage here, and may cause one to make stupid mistakes, especially when writing with the erroneous idea that wh— is better style. The book you spoke of and recommended to me cannot be 'the book of which you spoke and recommended to me.' Similarly, The book I referred to and read out of.

DOUBLE RELATIVES. We normally find the wh— form for the second of two relatives, whether the second one further defines the first or is co-ordinate with it.

You're the only person I've ever met who could do it.
The paper I read every day and which I find so enjoyable.

These are forms that occasionally occur but which should not be taught.

PREDICATIVE that (nearly always omitted). Wh— forms never found.

She's not the woman she was before she married.
I'm not the fool you thought me.

(This is not to be confused with the common colloquial idiom: 'I met Mrs Taylor; Miss Binks that was.')

That + there is. Never wh— forms, and nearly always omitted.

It's the only one there is in the shop.

The number of mistakes there are in this homework is simply astounding.

All that. We have seen that all as an adjective usually has that, like other superlative ideas. As a pronoun, however, we now prefer all who for persons.

A welcome is extended to all who (or that) wish to come.

It was all (that) I could do to keep myself from laughing.

USES OF that AS A SHORT CUT IN CLAUSES OF A RELATIVE TYPE.

(1) Ellipsis

He did it in the way (that) I should have done it myself. (= in which)

You can break it with the same ease (that) you can break an egg. (= with which)

N.B. — The preposition implied by that must have appeared already.

(2) That to indicate time

By the time (that) you have finished, it'll be too late.
I met her the year (that) my Uncle William died.

(3) That to indicate place

I'll go anywhere (that) you want me to. (= I'll go to any place (that) you want me to)

N.B. — From this it is but a short step to the forms with introductory it.

It was there (OR while at school, at five o'clock, then, at the seaside, etc.) that I first met my wife.

It's to you (that) I'm talking.

It's you (that) I'm talking to.

which lead one to consider that a conjunction and not a pronoun. (See note to Exercise 46.4.)

CONNECTIVE RELATIVE

As, same, such, so + as.

I've done the same as you have. (= I've done the same thing that you have)

She was as nice as could be.

You're just the same as you always were.

Wh— CLAUSES, DEFINING AND NON-DEFINING

There are certain cases where the preposition cannot be put at the end of a defining clause, and in such cases the wh— form must be used. The clause may, of course, still be a DEFINING RELATIVE, spoken without a pause or written without a comma.

Beyond, round, around, opposite, besides; than whom, than which (the last two never occur in the spoken language)

DEFINING: The man opposite whom I am sitting has a new book.

DEFINING: This is the point beyond which I've never been.

NON-DEFINING: St John's Glacier, beyond which nobody has ever climbed, is only about 8,000 feet high.

Even with these words the 'end-preposition' form of clause is on the increase.

The man I'm sitting opposite.

The fountain they are standing round was built by the Romans.

INSEPARABLE ADVERBIAL PHRASES

The courage with which he faced his enemies was truly inspiring.

(We cannot say 'the courage he faced his enemies with' as we can say 'The pen I wrote the letter with has a steel nib.')

PARTITIVE USE OF of

I have two friends, both of whom are on holiday at the moment.

The train ran into a bus-load of children, many of whom were British.

OVERHEARD IN A CLASSROOM

TEACHER: A preposition is a bad word to end a sentence with.

PUPIL: Please, teacher, you've just ended a sentence with 'with'.

TEACHER: Ah, but what did I end the sentence with 'with' for? Do you know?

PUPIL: No, teacher; and I don't know what you ended that one with 'with with for' for!

- 10 The house is mine. In its windows there is a light. (This makes a clumsy relative, what other way can you find?)

- 11 It's all — there is to last us a week, — is not a very cheering thought, is it?
- 12 It'll be dark by the time — you get to the river, so I'm afraid you'll have to go back the same way — you came.
- 13 Mr Trotter was born in Omsk in 1892. He came to London three years ago.
- 14 I appreciate the kind words. You have welcomed me with kind words.
- 15 Boswell wrote a fine biography of Johnson. His own life was far from admirable.
- 16 Put it down anywhere — you like and take anything else — you want — you can see.
- 17 The girl — was at the party is about the only friend of yours — I've met — I really like.
- 18 I'm just the same — I was the day — I first met you.
- 19 O. W. Holmes was one of America's most gifted humorists. He said that the American constitution could never be used to further private interests.
- 20 The statements were all untrue. He made statements concerning his Aunt Tabitha's strange disappearance.
- 21 The tree fell on to a party of fishermen. All of them were injured.
- 22 He repudiated the charge with dignity. His dignity greatly impressed the judge. (Begin, 'The dignity . . .')
- 23 The spoon was stolen from a hotel. He was eating with it.
- 24 This is the horse. It kicked the policeman. I saw him trying to clear away the crowd. The crowd had collected to watch a fight. Two men had started the fight.
- 25 He's the best man — I can find — can mend it within an hour.
- 26 This instrument was in the museum. Its works are all rusty.
- 27 All the while — I'm working, it's you — I'm thinking of.
- 28 He played the piece, — was quite difficult, in the - exact manner — I play it myself, but on an instrument — I wouldn't even accept as a gift.

- 29 I have forgotten whether music soothes the savage 'breast' or the savage 'beast'. According to Shakespeare music is the food of love. He ought to know.
- 30 All — applied were given such jobs — were suited to them; but those — applied first, of — were selected the best — could be found, were given the job — they most desired; any — came later could not always get the jobs — they were looking for.

Note the different uses of that in:

'I pointed out that¹ that² "that"³ that⁴ that⁵ man had written was in the wrong place.'

Here is a favourite nursery-rhyme:

This is the farmer that sowed the corn
 That fed the cock that crowed in the morn
 That wakened the priest all shaven and shorn
 That married the man all tattered and torn
 That kissed the maiden all forlorn
 That milked the cow with the crumpled horn
 That tossed the dog
 That bit the cat
 That killed the rat
 That ate the malt
 That lay in the house
 That Jack built. (All DEFINING RELATIVES.)

47 Relative and Interrogative Links

47.1 Elementary

Who, what, which, where, why, etc., are very important as link-words. They form a very elementary type of complex sentence that is extremely common in both spoken and written English.

An infinitive phrase is usual when the subjects of both sections are identical, the sense of the infinitive phrase being future. Compare:

I don't know which to take.
I don't know which I took.

Note also verbs of request:

Tell him where to go (= where he must go).
Ask him what to do (= what you must do).

Who is used in both subjective and objective cases.

- 4 He told me — book to take.
- 5 Do you know — to make coffee?
- 6 Ask him — to put the TV set.
- 7 I don't understand — to drive a car.
- 8 He wants to know — club to join.
- 9 You must go — he tells you.
- 10 Can you suggest — to write?
- 11 She doesn't know — dress to wear.
- 12 I can't remember — to do it.
- 13 We don't know — to show it to.
- 14 I shan't forget — to find it again.
- 15 He doesn't know — to open it with.
- 16 Can you tell me — could advise me in this matter?
- 17 A lawyer advised me — to do.
- 18 My friend couldn't remember — way to go.
- 19 They don't know — your house is.
- 20 I can't imagine — you are so cross with me.

47.2
Intermediate

Remember who is normally used in both the subjective and objective cases.

● Add the missing links:

- 1 She doesn't understand — to do the exercise.
- 2 I can't think — to buy for dinner.
- 3 Have you decided — to ask to the party?
- 4 They don't know — to meet us tomorrow.

- 5 I am wondering — to do with my old clothes.
- 6 Tell me — to be there, and I shall not be late.
- 7 It is difficult to know — to choose.
- 8 He doesn't know — to think of this arrangement.
- 9 We can't think — to go for our holidays.
- 10 I don't know — to punish him.
- 11 They were not sure — room to give you.
- 12 He wants to learn — to build a boat.
- 13 Do you know — to get a good meal in this town?
- 14 Nobody told me — to leave these letters.
- 15 Tell us — to begin work.

47.3

Elementary

When the subjects are different, a clause is always added.

I don't know who she was speaking to.
He asked me how I had done it.

The clause in these cases is closely related in form to the reported question (Exercise 51.7). In fact we may see many of the Section 47 clauses as reported questions. The links are not the same as the relatives considered in Section 46, since they do not relate to an antecedent within the sentence. Compare:

He proposed a motion, which was accepted.
— NON-DEFINING RELATIVE which related to antecedent a motion.

I don't know which they accepted.

Who, what, etc., so used, are for this reason sometimes called INDEPENDENT RELATIVES.

Notice that who is invariably heard in place of whom in the objective case or with end-prepositions.

* * *

● Add the missing link:

- 1 I wonder — he means.
- 2 I have no idea — he arrived.
- 3 He was telling me — he had fought the champion.
- 4 Do you know — you are talking to?
- 5 I have no idea — he will come.
- 6 Will you please tell me — soon you can finish it?
- 7 I wonder — hat this is. It's certainly not mine.
- 8 Aren't you going to tell me — you saw at the pictures?
- 9 You haven't told me — you did last night.

- 10 Lots of people don't know — Vladikavkaz is.
- 11 Can you tell us — road leads to the station?
- 12 I've forgotten — she gave it to.
- 13 I wonder — she married.
- 14 I can't think — she married him.
- 15 Have they told you — time to come?
- 16 Can you see — is coming down the street?
- 17 You must tell the librarian — book you are taking.

Who, what, which, whose, when, where, how + ever. They are all written as single words, whoever, whatever, etc. and usually pronounced with stress on the first syllable of ever. Note that whoever's is usually preferred to whosever. There are two main uses in modern English.

(1) IN THE SENSE 'it doesn't matter who, which, when', etc.

Whoever says that is a liar.

I'll sell it to whoever arrives first.

Eat whatever you like.*

I'll do whatever you tell me to.*

We were warmly welcomed wherever we went.

We shall be pleased to see you whenever you care to call.

Learn whichever poem you find most interesting.

The three of them agreed that whichever (whoever) arrived first should save seats for the other two.

The simple pronoun what can usually replace whatever (as in the examples marked *); who and which are no longer used in this way in modern English.

(2) PARENTHETICALLY (suggesting ignorance or indifference).

I'll give the pen back to John or Henry, or whoever it belongs to.

I'll come at 10 or 10.30, or whenever I can get there.

* * *

● Add the appropriate ever form to the following:

- 1 — one of us has got to pay for it, it won't be me.
- 2 Take — much you want and — you want to.
- 3 — smashed my glasses shall pay for them, — he's hidden himself.
- 4 Take this bag, basket or — it is, and hang it up — you can find room for it.
- 5 — I stay in Brighton, or — else I stay on the south coast, I'm sure to meet that school-teacher fellow Robinson or Robertson or — his name is.
- 6 — quickly I dry myself after a bath, I always

- catch — variety of cold there is going.
- 7 Please take — one you want and bring it back — you like.
- 8 — told you to keep off meat was quite right; I think you should go on doing — he tells you to.

- 20 — travels will find there's no place like home, — he may go; — humble it may be, there will be a yearning in his heart — he thinks of it.

49 Emphatic Colloquial Interrogatives

49.1 Intermediate and Advanced

The uses of -ever in the previous exercise must not be confused with its very common use in spoken English merely to emphasize the speaker's surprise, consternation or annoyance in question form. Ever is written here as a separate word, and usually there is stress on BOTH words: who, what, etc., and the first syllable of ever. This ever has exactly the same meaning as on earth.

Who on earth is that young man in the yellow waistcoat? Who ever can he be?
What ever are you doing?

COMPARE:

Whatever he does, he does badly.

In angry or impetuous speech, stronger expressions take their place, notably the dickens,¹ the devil, the blazes, the hell; all except the last are tolerable in normal society if the situation warrants violent emphasis, though references to the infernal regions should perhaps be avoided in the presence of sensitive ladies.

What the devil do you mean by that?
Who the blazes do you think you are?

Whom and whose are not used in this spoken form.

* * *

- Read the following remarks, reinforcing them with ever, on earth, or any of the stronger forms at will. Be careful of stress and intonation:

- 1 What made you do that?
- 2 Why are you late?
- 3 When is Maisie coming?
- 4 Who broke my pen?
- 5 Who do you think you're talking to?
- 6 Why don't you mend it yourself?
- 7 Where did I pack my toothbrush?
- 8 How can I see when you're standing in my light?
- 9 What do you expect me to do about it?
- 10 Why don't you tell her all about it?

¹ No connection with the novelist; even Shakespeare used 'What the dickens.'

- 11 Who are you?
- 12 How did you get here?
- 13 Who can I give it to?
- 14 What have I done with my other trousers?
- 15 Where have you been?
- 16 What is she up to now?
- 17 Who told you I'd give you one?
- 18 How can we get there in time?
- 19 What did you want to do that for?
- 20 Why didn't you punch Cyril on the nose?
- 21 Where can that child have got to?
- 22 What do you mean by it?
- 23 How did the cat get through that small hole?
- 24 When are you going to realize it can't be done?
- 25 Who put the jam-spoon in the butter?

EMPHATIC CLAUSE INVERSION

49.2 Advanced

A fairly common device for emphasis in spoken English is the trick of changing the order of principal and subordinate clauses, in order to lay greater stress on the adverbial phrase. A couple of examples will explain this more easily.

I don't know how far he's gone.

He's gone I don't know how far.

I don't know how many things she's broken.

She's broken I don't know how many things.

The majority are how . . . constructions.

* * *

- Change the following into a similar emphatic form. Remember that intonation is important:
 - 1 I don't know how many books I've read.
 - 2 I don't know how many times I've told you.
 - 3 You know who I gave it to.
 - 4 I don't know how deep he had to dive to get it up.
 - 5 I don't know how long I've been waiting for a bus.
 - 6 I don't know how long he's been away.
 - 7 I don't know how many people he's spoken to.
 - 8 I don't know how many years ago I read that.
 - 9 I don't know how many times he has been to see you.

- 10 I don't know how much money she spent on decorating the house.
- 11 You know where I've been (to).
- 12 I don't know how many children she's got.
- 13 I don't know what she was dressed up like.
- 14 I don't know how often you've been told that.
- 15 I don't know how far we walked.

50 there is and it is

50.1 There is, there are. This is the most usual way of denoting existence in English, when the subject has not PREPARATORY already been defined.

THERE

The two books are on the table. (We know which books.)

There are two books on the table. (Location of two unknown books.)

'Two books are on the table' is a grammatically possible but very rare form.

* * *

- Add the correct form of There is to the following:
 - 1 — two dogs in the garden.
 - 2 — a good film on at the Regal.
 - 3 — a lot of people in the park yesterday.
 - 4 — a party in our house tomorrow.
 - 5 — an old friend of yours at the concert last night.
 - 6 — a train coming now.
 - 7 — (negative) another train for at least two hours.
 - 8 — a few changes since you left last week.
 - 9 — a lot of work to do this afternoon.
 - 10 — some chocolates on this plate when I went out just now.
 - 11 — one for you tomorrow.
 - 12 — plenty of knives in the drawer.
 - 13 — only a footpath here last year.
 - 14 — a new moon tonight.
 - 15 — no mistakes in your last exercise.
 - 16 — no fruit on this tree for many years.

- 17 — a thunderstorm soon, I think.
 18 — four hundred children in the school this year.
 19 — an accident outside our house last night.
 20 — a lot of visitors this morning.

50.2 It is, was, etc. These expressions are useful for introducing a complex subject (phrase or clause), which would sound very clumsy if made the real subject.

IT It's impossible to guess her age.
 It is wrong not to do as you are told.

* * *

● Add the correct form of it is to the following:

- 1 — a pity (that) she is so stupid.
 2 — a shame to spend all this money.
 3 — a wonder (that) you didn't hurt yourself.
 4 — stupid not to go yesterday.
 5 — a great day when he passes his examination.
 (Note that 'a great day' is not the true subject of this sentence.)
 6 — nice having you to tea last Wednesday.
 7 — wonderful to see you again next week.
 8 — possible (that) he doesn't understand English.
 9 — strange (that) she didn't speak to you.
 10 — true (that) Solomon had a thousand wives?
 11 — wrong to think (that) all people are greedy for money.
 12 — funny that I can see better with one eye than with both.
 13 — lovely to go for a sail tomorrow.
 14 — cruel to beat a dog like that.
 15 — funny seeing you in this place.

50.3 Elementary See notes on Exercise 50.2. It is also the meaningless subject for impersonal verbs and a few expressions of time and distance.

It's raining hard.
 It was nearly 10 o'clock.
 It's a long way to Timbuktu.

* * *

● Add the correct form of it is to the following:

- 1 — a long time ago.
 2 — fine tomorrow, I think.

- 3 — good for you to take exercise.
 4 — very wet last month, and now — windy.
 5 — raining for three hours without stopping.
 6 — a long time since I saw you.
 7 — a shame that those trees had to be cut down.
 8 — going to snow, isn't it?
 9 — snowing since 11 o'clock. When will it stop?
 10 — easy for him to find fault, but — not fair.
 11 — terribly hot in August last year.
 12 The church clock struck. — exactly 5 o'clock.
 13 — probable you'll find it in your pocket.
 14 — only 100 kilometres from here.
 15 You can get there in an hour, but — not easy to find the way.

50.4 Elementary See notes to Exercises 50.1-3.

* * *

● Add the correct form of it is or there is to the following:

- 1 — fine today.
 2 — a good thing to be accurate.
 3 — a man standing under that tree ten minutes ago.
 4 — here that I saw him.
 5 — a post office in the village.
 6 — nothing left if we don't go soon.
 7 — a long time since I had a holiday.
 8 — a fact that he is a rich man.
 9 — often a rainbow after rain.
 10 — a pity (that) you can't come with me.
 11 — too early to leave yet.
 12 — a beautiful park near my home.
 13 — the same film at the Metro for three weeks.
 14 — difficult to find a house in the town next year.
 15 — a drink for everyone who was thirsty.
 16 — a new car in the next street.
 17 — not true to say that she is my friend.
 18 — a dog running across the road.
 19 — a train which leaves at nine o'clock.
 20 — not far from my house to the station.

 23 — a long way from the house to the bus-stop.
 24 — high time you went home.
 25 — an even shorter way to it across the fields if only we had known it.

51 Reported Speech

IMPERATIVE

51.1 Elementary SAY AND TELL

Say. Usually with the actual words spoken. It is never used with the infinitive in reported speech.

Tell. Never used, in the sense of 'recount', with the actual words spoken. A personal object is always present. Imperatives become infinitive phrases in reported speech, preceded by a verb such as tell, order, command, ask, with a (pro)noun for the person addressed.

Bring me a book.

He asked her (him, us, etc.) to bring him a book.

* * *

● Put into REPORTED SPEECH, using the verb indicated:

- 1 Go away. (He told)
- 2 Come here. (I asked)
- 3 Eat it up. (Tell)
- 4 Run away. (They told)
- 5 Pay at once. (They ordered)
- 6 Fold it in half. (She asked)
- 7 Give me another. (Ask)
- 8 Write quickly. (Tell)
- 9 Sit down. (We asked)
- 10 Have a cup of tea. (She asked)
- 11 Come at five o'clock. (He told)
- 12 Pick it up. (He ordered)
- 13 Wash your face. (He told)
- 14 Clean my shoes. (I asked)
- 15 Do it again. (Tell)
- 16 Open the door. (Ask)
- 17 Hold this. (She asked)

- 18 Play the piano. (They asked)
- 19 Come in. (He ordered)
- 20 Look out. (I told)

51.2

Intermediate

See notes to Exercise 51.1.

A negative imperative is reported by means of a negative infinitive.

Don't do it.

He asked me (her, us, etc.) not to do it.

* * *

● Put into REPORTED SPEECH:

- 1 Clean it yourself.
- 2 Wrap it up in a piece of paper.
- 3 Cut the corners off.
- 4 Fasten your safety belts.
- 5 Don't sit on my bed.
- 6 Wait there till I come.
- 7 Don't speak until you're spoken to.
- 8 Leave it on the piano.
- 9 Don't wipe your dirty fingers on my nice clean tablecloth.
- 10 Don't try to be funny.
- 11 Brush it off when it gets dry.
- 12 Don't put your elbow on the table.
- 13 Look where you're going.
- 14 Mind the steps.
- 15 Get your hair cut.
- 16 Shut the door after you.
- 17 Hold it round the middle.
- 18 Don't spill it on the carpet.
- 19 Pull your socks up.
- 20 Take a look at yourself in the mirror.

This is a revision exercise and contains other REPORTED SPEECH forms in addition to the Imperative.

* * *

● Put the following into REPORTED SPEECH:

- 1 Go to bed and don't get up till you're called.
- 2 Eat up your dinner at once or I'll punish you.
- 3 Write your name clearly at the top and then take down these points as I call them out.

- 4 Bring in the two accused men and take care they don't get away. (The judge . . .)
- 5 Don't spend all your money on food and drink. Save some for the future.
- 6 Drive as fast as you can. I don't want to be late.
- 7 Wait here under the tree until the rain stops.
- 8 Do what you're told or you'll get into trouble.
- 9 Imitate my pronunciation if you want to speak well.
- 10 Come and see me whenever you have a few hours to spare. Don't wait for me to ask you every time you want to come.
- 11 Hurry up if you want to go out with me.
- 12 Tell me when it's quarter past eight.
- 13 Be a good girl and sit quietly for five minutes and Auntie will give you a sweet.
- 14 Treat other people the way you'd like them to treat you.
- 15 Take a cold shower before breakfast if you want to keep fit.

REPORTED SPEECH - STATEMENT

51.4 Elementary

When the reporting verb is in the PRESENT SIMPLE, PRESENT PERFECT, or FUTURE SIMPLE tense, there is no change of tense in the words reported. Notice only the necessary change of person.

'I am very sorry.'

He will tell you

He says

He has just told me

} (that) he is very sorry.

* * *

- Put the following sentences into REPORTED SPEECH, introducing them with a verb in the PRESENT, PRESENT PERFECT, or FUTURE tense:

- 1 I am going to town with my sister.
- 2 You have bought yourself a new hat.
- 3 We are very late.
- 4 I want to speak to you.
- 5 We have finished our work.
- 6 He is ready to come with us.

- 7 They do not know you.
- 8 I will answer the phone.
- 9 You can do it if you try.
- 10 She has done her homework well.
- 11 We are living in another house now.
- 12 I have been shopping all the morning.
- 13 I have not told you anything yet.
- 14 You may see the photographs if you like.
- 15 She has written me a long letter.
- 16 I am giving a party this week to all my friends.
- 17 You have an excellent cook.
- 18 We have not heard the news.
- 19 I like oranges better than bananas.
- 20 They are learning higher mathematics.
- 21 He is sitting over there.
- 22 You are not working hard enough.
- 23 She has given me a present.
- 24 You play the piano very well.
- 25 I have flown about a million kilometres.
- 26 You have been very quick.
- 27 Elizabeth has gone to school.
- 28 They are waiting outside.
- 29 We always try to please you.
- 30 I have been smoking too much.

51.5 Elementary

When the reporting verb is in the PAST SIMPLE or PAST PERFECT tense, or is a should/would form, the words reported are viewed in a different perspective. The speech is now remote, and seen as relating a sequence of events happening in the past, the tenses being changed accordingly.

'I am a student, and I have studied for three years.'

He said (that) he was a student and had studied for three years.

So the following tense changes are automatic after past tense reporting verbs:

DIRECT SPEECH	REPORTED SPEECH
make(s)	made
is making	was making
has/have made	had made
made	had made
shall/will make	should/would make should/would make should/would have made*

* This does not hold for the should/would form of polite requests, which usually remains unchanged.

Adverbs of time and place and a few other expressions also change. Here are some examples (to be taken as convenient equivalents, not as 'rules'):

here = there now = then yesterday = the day before this = that ago = before next week = the following week etc.

But these 'equivalents' should be used with common sense:

'This vehicle isn't safe.'

He said that the vehicle was not safe. (the, not that, unless this is stressed)

And it is not always necessary to use any equivalent at all, as the past tense of the introducing verb is often quite sufficient.

'I am coming to see you now.'

He said he was coming to see me. (then is not wanted)

* * *

(51.5)

- Put the following sentences into REPORTED SPEECH, introducing them with a verb in the PAST tense:

- 1 I am ill.
- 2 I met him last year.
- 3 They will be here soon.
- 4 She has finished now.
- 5 I am living in London.
- 6 He is going to Berlin tomorrow.
- 7 I've just been to the butcher's.
- 8 I can come next week.
- 9 I don't know what he'll say.
- 10 They went away yesterday.
- 11 Wait till I come.
- 12 I think she is married.
- 13 I fell downstairs.
- 14 I'll leave it on the table.
- 15 I'm sorry I'm late.
- 16 I am very stupid.
- 17 She is quite charming but hasn't much sense.
- 18 He can come in when I have finished my work.
- 19 The clock will never work again if you try to mend it.

- 20 I lost my temper yesterday morning.
- 21 I'll come as soon as I can.
- 22 I've sold all those you gave me yesterday.
- 23 I was very ill yesterday.
- 24 I learnt all this nonsense a long time ago.
- 25 I have never been here before.
- 26 I haven't done my homework.
- 27 You may have to stay in bed for a week.
- 28 She will be here in half an hour if she isn't late.
- 29 That is the last time I saw him.
- 30 I shall try to be in time today. I'm sorry I forgot to come yesterday.

51.6

Intermediate

Read notes to Exercise 51.5.

Must. In ordinary speech must has three possible meanings, each of which has a different form when reported. Can and needn't sometimes behave in a similar way. (See earlier exercises on must.)

(1) Necessity or compulsion AT THE MOMENT OF SPEAKING – a TRUE PRESENT. This, of course, becomes a PAST when reported.

He said he

'I must go now.' – had to go at once.

'I needn't go.' – didn't have to go.

'I mustn't go.' – wasn't to go.

(2) Necessity or compulsion in the future; as a substitute for shall have to. This, of course, behaves like a future, and changes to the should/would form in reported speech for must and needn't.

He said he

'I must go next week.' – would have to go the following week

'I needn't go next week.' – wouldn't have to go

'I mustn't go . . . ' – wasn't to go

(has no future form)

(3) Permanent ruling or prohibition. Here the must remains unchanged.

'You mustn't cross the road against the red light.'

He told us we mustn't cross the road against the red light.

All natural laws and eternal truths may remain in the PRESENT SIMPLE.

* * *

- (51.6) ● Report the following, putting the introducing verb in the PAST tense:
- 1 I would do the same myself if I were in your place.
 - 2 I tried to ride a bicycle but I fell off three times.
 - 3 I shall expect to see you next Wednesday.
 - 4 These apples won't keep, they are too soft.
 - 5 I haven't had enough time to finish what I intended to do. I can do some more later on.
 - 6 I expect to hear some news tomorrow; I will tell you if I do, so that you needn't worry.
 - 7 You must leave the country at once.
 - 8 People mustn't fish in this river.
 - 9 You must decide what you want to do.
 - 10 You must do it all again before next week, though I must confess it's the first bad repair you've done. You'll get a new job to do when you've finished it.
 - 11 The football match will take place tomorrow afternoon. All spectators are requested to obtain their tickets before five o'clock today.
 - 12 Last night I went to the cinema and saw Peter O'Toole's latest film. I enjoyed myself very much, and am going to take my other girl-friend tonight. (Cyril said that . . .)
 - 13 I am eighteen years old. I was previously employed in a large shop in this city, and my employers considered me to be very capable.
 - 14 When I get back I'll give you the five pounds I borrowed from you yesterday. I hope I shan't meet with an accident.
 - 15 I can't do it now, but I expect I can do it next week.
 - 16 By the time we reach the hill, the enemy will have cut us off from the rest of our men. We shall have to fight our way back along the coast, where the enemy has fewer troops.
 - 17 If you can't type any better than this, you had better not type at all. I can't pay people for incompetence, so you will have to leave tomorrow. (He told Maisie that . . .)
 - 18 You must not forget what I told you last lesson.

I shall expect you to be able to repeat it next lesson by heart. You will have to learn it all again if you can't.

- 19¹ I waited for you yesterday till six o'clock, but you didn't come. I thought you would come later, so I left a message with the porter.
- 20¹ I don't believe a word you are saying. I think it would be better for everybody if you spoke the truth. This is not the first time you have deceived me, and I hope it won't occur again.

REPORTED SPEECH (QUESTIONS)

51.7 Elementary

The word-order of REPORTED QUESTIONS is the same as a simple STATEMENT; there is no inversion as in a simple question. In questions introduced by a question-word (who, what, how, when, etc.), this word serves as a link between the introducing verb and the reported question. See also Exercise 47.3.

'What is your name?' (My name is X)
He asked me what my name was.

* * *

- Put the following sentences into REPORTED SPEECH with the introducing verb in the PAST tense. Vary the introducing verb: he asked, enquired, wondered, wanted to know, etc.
- 1 Where are you going? (He asked me . . .)
 - 2 How did you do that? (They wanted to know . . .)
 - 3 Who will come to the pictures with me?
 - 4 When will my dress be finished?
 - 5 Why are you so sad?
 - 6 What is the matter?
 - 7 Which book are you taking?
 - 8 Where ought we to meet tonight?
 - 9 Who showed you my work?
 - 10 How could you be so unkind?
 - 11 When did they tell you that?
 - 12 Why has she not eaten anything?
 - 13 What am I to do?
 - 14 What is the time?

¹ In the second part of these two sentences it is quite convenient to use the verb think (appearing in the words spoken) as introducing verb-for that part of the report.

- 15 How do you know that?
- 16 Where has he put my pencil?
- 17 When are you beginning your holiday?
- 18 Where can I go for it?
- 19 How do you like this cake?
- 20 Why does he sing so loudly? (We wondered ...)

Elementary

See Exercise 51.7.

If the question has no question-word, but is one of the type that can take yes or no for an answer, whether or if is used as a link between the introducing verb and the reported question.

'Have you seen him anywhere?'

He asked me if (whether) I had seen him anywhere.

Whether is a more accurate word to use, since it implies if or if not, but if, being shorter, is more commonly used.

SHALL QUESTIONS

Shall in REPORTED QUESTIONS requires a special preliminary exercise if its behaviour has not already been learnt. Questions beginning Shall I...? are of two types.

TYPE 1 PURE FUTURE

Shall I ever forget her?

TYPE 2 REQUEST (= Do you want me to?)

Shall I open the window?

In TYPE 1 the Shall I? becomes: ... if he would ...

In TYPE 2 the Shall I? becomes: ... if he should ...

TYPE 1 'Shall I ever forget her?'

He wondered if he would ever forget her.

TYPE 2 'Shall I open the window?'

He asked if he should open the window.

REPORTING
A REPORTED QUESTION

The only point to remember is the change of tense in both parts.

'Do you know who is coming?'

He asked if I knew who was coming.

'Do you know who killed him?'

He asked if I knew who had killed him.

'Did you wonder why I didn't come?'

He asked if I'd wondered why he hadn't come.

But we rarely find a succession of PAST PERFECTS, any other CONTEMPORARY actions being left in the PAST SIMPLE.

'Did you wonder why I didn't come when I was wanted?'

He asked if I'd wondered why he hadn't come when he was wanted. (didn't come is also heard)

* * *

- Put the following sentences into REPORTED SPEECH with the introducing verb in the PAST tense. Vary the introducing verb.
- 1 Can you tell me why you are so sad?
 - 2 Must you always ask me what I'm doing?
 - 3 Do you know how far it is to the station?

- 4 Have you any idea when he did it?
- 5 Will you please find out when he last wrote to me?
- 6 Did you know what you were doing at the time?
- 7 Can you see the marks he made on the carpet?
- 8 Will you please tell me when you expect to come?
- 9 Have you any idea when you'll be this way again?
- 10 Won't you find out why he doesn't like us? (This is really an imperative. Treat as such.)
- 11 Where were you when the rain started?
- 12 Have you sewn on my buttons as I asked?
- 13 Did you notice whether she was wearing make-up or not?
- 14 Do you mind if I close the window?
- 15 Was the Mayor present when the new school was opened?
- 16 What do you think you are doing?
- 17 Who do you suppose would believe that story?
- 18 Do you know if any decision was arrived at?
- 19 Do you know why he was so cross?
- 20 Is it true that they were seen alone together?
- 21 Can you tell me what the time is?
- 22 Is this the spot where the murder was committed?
- 23 Can you remember when you last heard that tune?
- 24 How can one tell if she is speaking the truth?
- 25 Do you know which is the cup you used?

LATE RESPONSE

This is a curious but not uncommon trick of conversation combining the principles of direct and reported speech in one. Sometimes a remark is passed, the exact meaning of which is not fully grasped at the moment; after a short lapse of time the listener reverts to the speaker's original subject, asking about the doubtful point, but usually framing his DIRECT question in the tense of a REPORTED QUESTION with a past tense introducing verb. Examples will make this clearer – the words in italics are those the listener is questioning.

Mr A. I'm supposed to go again on Friday.

[Pause, or more miscellaneous conversation.]

Mr B. When were you supposed to go again?

(= When did you say you were supposed to go again.)

Mr A. His name is Tanner-Whyte.

[Pause; or conversation.]

Mr B. What was that man's name?

(= What did you say his name was?)

Imperatives take was (were) to, or more rarely had to.

Mr A. Put it among the papers in the third drawer down.

[Pause for forgetting.]

Mr B. Where was I to put it?

(= Where did you say I was to put it?)

And in the past:

Mr A. They made at least seventeen copies and sold them all.

[Pause; or more conversation to confuse the mind of Mr B.]

Mr B. How many copies had they made?

(= How many did you say they had made?)

N.B. – Note the rising intonation from the low-pitched question-word.

• • •

- The teacher reads the statements below. A pause, or further conversation is to be imagined, then the student makes a response, asking about the point in bold type, in the manner suggested above:

- 1 He was at the pictures all the time.
- 2 My husband is very fond of a piece of pie for his supper.
- 3 Take the pink cushion with you when you go!
- 4 He ate a double helping of meat and potatoes just before he collapsed.
- 5 I'm taking the dog as far as the common for a run.
- 6 I packed three suitcases before I found I wasn't to go after all.
- 7 It's gone half past three!
- 8 We're coming again Monday week.
- 9 The cunning old man hid it under a rose-bush in his own garden.
- 10 When you get there, go into the third door on your right as you face the building.
- 11 ... and I shot five tigers while I was in India.
- 12 I'm going to do it all again on the 15th of July.
- 13 My friend cannot come because she has a touch of flu.

- 14 She put it in the left-hand cupboard.
 15 I'm supposed to have finished it by five o'clock.
 16 Bring me that book over there.
 17 My husband has gone away for a week.
 18 Let's go and sit in the rose-garden.
 19 She cleans her floors with a special kind of polish.
 20 I am meeting an old school-friend of mine tomorrow night.

REPORTED SPEECH (MIXED TYPES)

51.13 Intermediate

When statements and questions are mixed, each section must be introduced by an appropriate verb: tell, say, explain, remark, etc., for STATEMENTS ONLY; ask, enquire, want to know, wonder, etc., for QUESTIONS ONLY. A useful connective device for question plus statement is: adding that . . .

'I'm off to the pictures. Where are you going?'
 He said he was off to the pictures and wanted to know where I was going.

* * *

- Put the following into REPORTED SPEECH, with the introducing verbs in the PAST tense:

- 1 It is cold in here. Is the window open?
- 2 Do you think it will rain? It is very cloudy.
- 3 I must write some letters now. What date is it?
- 4 How do you like Maisie's new dress? I bought it for her at a sale.
- 5 We are going for a country walk. Would you like to come too?
- 6 What time is it? My watch has stopped.
- 7 This is a most interesting book. Have you ever read it?
- 8 What is the matter? You don't look very well.
- 9 That looks difficult to do. Can I help you?
- 10 Are you free tomorrow night? I would like you to come to my party.
- 11 The dog has stolen the meat. What are we to do?
- 12 How far is it to Birmingham? I hope¹ we can get there before dark.

¹ Use as introducing verb.

- 13 Who do you think is England's greatest dramatist? I like Shaw best.
- 14 How long have you been learning English? Your accent is very good.
- 15 It is time to go. Have you got all your things?
- 16 Is that the postman? I hope he has a letter for me.
- 17 Would you like to see the garden? It is very pleasant out there.
- 18 Where are the Barkers spending their holidays? They usually go to Bournemouth.
- 19 You are late home. What have you been doing?
- 20 Would you like a cup of tea? It's just been made.
- 21 I am learning English. Can you speak English?
- 22 I have a headache. Can I have an aspirin?
- 23 Will you explain what Cyril means? I don't know what he is talking about.
- 24 The matter will soon be dealt with. Have you anything more to ask?
- 25 Have you a light? I've forgotten to bring my matches.
- 26 Do you understand it now? I'll explain it again if you don't.
- 27 Why can't you answer at once? You're not always so slow.
- 28 I've read this book before. Have you something else I can read?
- 29 May I take an apple? They look so nice.
- 30 Can you tell me the time? I shall have to leave at five.

 - 24 'Will you come to tea with me next Monday?' 'I don't know if I shall be free, but I should love to come if I am.'

- 25 'Will you take some castor oil?' 'No. I don't like it. Do you think a medicine I don't like will do me good?' 'No, I suppose not.'

REPORTED SPEECH (EXCLAMATIONS)

51.15 Intermediate

Reporting an exclamation is usually best achieved by a circumlocution reflecting the spirit of the original exclamation.

Exclamations are not often reported in spoken English, so too much time should not be wasted in hunting for the best expression. The other forms of REPORTED SPEECH are far more important.

Some exclamatory forms are really questions (rhetorical) or imperatives.

'What a lovely garden (this is)!'

He remarked what a lovely garden it was.

'Hello! where are you going?'

He greeted me and asked (me) where I was going.

'Oh dear! I've torn my frock.'

She exclaimed bitterly that she had torn her dress.

or: She sighed and said that she had torn her dress.

See previous exercises. It is convenient to refer to the 'changes' that occur when speech is reported, and the exercises in this book are in the form of 'translation' of direct to reported speech, but it is important to remember that the forms of reported speech are used in many circumstances besides the reporting of words spoken.

52 Passive Voice

52.1 Elementary

Simple construction: appropriate tense of verb be with the PAST PARTICIPLE.

The PASSIVE VOICE is very important in English. Probably quite 90 per cent of the passive sentences spoken or written are of the type replacing the indefinite pronoun or reflexives in other languages. (Cf. French on, German man, and the use of reflexive verbs in Slavonic languages.)

In this important class of passive voice sentences we have an unknown or vague active voice subject; it remains unexpressed in the passive voice. The agent with by is not needed.

ACTIVE: Someone has stolen my books.

The indefinite subject someone occupies the most prominent place. We prefer:

PASSIVE: My books have been stolen.

52.2 Elementary and Intermediate

When the verb in the active voice takes two objects, it is more usual in English to make the PERSONAL object the subject of the passive voice.

1 2

ACTIVE: Someone gave me a book.

PASSIVE: I was given a book.

¹ In the passive voice it is more usual to put an adverb of manner immediately in front of the past participle it qualifies: viz.—
This chair is very well made.

The form A book was given (to) me would be used when we need to stress this new subject.

* * *

(52.2) ● Put the following sentences into the PASSIVE VOICE with a PERSONAL SUBJECT:

- 1 They gave my little sister a ticket, too.
- 2 People will show the visitors the new buildings.
- 3 Someone has already paid the electrician for his work.
- 4 They promise us higher wages.
- 5 Somebody will tell you what time the train leaves.
- 6 Someone ordered the prisoners to stand up.
- 7 Somebody recommended me to another doctor.
- 8 Someone taught him French and gave him a dictionary.
- 9 They will allow each boy a second plate of ice-cream.
- 10 The authorities refused Cyril a passport.
- 11 They will ask us all several questions.
- 12 When we first met, they had already offered me a job at the bank.
- 13 Someone will read you another chapter next time.
- 14 They requested the stranger to leave the meeting.
- 15 This is the third time they have written to us about this.
- 16 They still deny women the right to vote in some countries.
- 17 They have made my uncle a captain.
- 18 They asked the rest of us to be there at eight o'clock.
- 19 The others told the new students where to sit.
- 20 Someone is showing Maisie how to bath a baby.

52.3

Elementary

See Exercises 52.1 and 52.2.

The general principle governing the use of the passive voice is as follows: when the main interest of the speaker or writer is on the verb activity itself rather than on the active subject, there is a desire to express this idea first. In the sentence People speak English all over the world too much weight is given to the vague subject people, when our real concern is the SPEAKING OF ENGLISH. The passive voice form

English is spoken all over the world puts the idea in a much better perspective. The agent by people is superfluous – we have just used a passive construction to get rid of it anyway!

WARNING. In all PASSIVE VOICE exercises the use of by with an agent must be rigorously suppressed, except in those examples where, although our interest in the predicate has led us to use the passive voice, the active subject has some interest of its own and is necessary for complete sense, e.g.

This poem was written by Keats shows greater interest in the poem (the speaker is presumably discussing it, or reading it), but mention of the poet is necessary to complete the sense. Such active subjects as I, we, you, they, one, someone, nobody, people, a man, a boy, the servant, etc., are very seldom worth mention in the passive construction.

PREPOSITIONS. Prepositions or adverb particles must not be left out with verbs requiring them; there is a tendency to forget them.

ACTIVE: They will look after you well.

PASSIVE: You will be well looked after. (Note position of adverb of manner.)

 50 Somebody has locked the box and I cannot open it. (2 PASSIVES)

52.5

Advanced

See Exercises 52.1 and 52.2.

People say = It is said

The passive form here only brings in another vague subject, the introductory it. So we generally prefer the subject of the clause introduced by it as the subject of the passive voice.

ACTIVE: People say that figs are better for us than bananas.

PASSIVE (1): It is said that figs are better for us than bananas.

PASSIVE (2): Figs are said to be better for us than bananas.

(PASSIVE (2) is the best.)

Another good use of the passive, more usually found in the written language than in speech, is as a device to save changing the subject of a clause sequence.

ACTIVE: He spoke at great length; people asked him many questions at the end, which he answered satisfactorily.

This is more concisely expressed with the help of the passive voice:

He spoke at great length, was asked many questions at the end, and answered them all satisfactorily.

* * *

● Put the following sentences into the PASSIVE VOICE:

- 1 Somebody must have taken it while I was out.
 2 You must iron this dress for tonight.
 3 Did the noise frighten you?

- 4 They treated us to some ice-cream.
 5 Don't let the others see you. (PASSIVE REFLEXIVE)
 6 The orchestra played that piece beautifully.
 7 He's so good at golf nobody can beat him.
 8 The doctor had to operate on him to find out what was wrong.
 9 Didn't anybody ever teach you how to behave?
 10 They did nothing until he came.
 11 I can assure you I will arrange everything in time. (2 PASSIVES)
 12 Somebody will meet the visitors at the station.
 13 A sudden increase in water pressure would break the dam.
 14 Men can shell cities from a distance of several miles.
 15 One cannot eat an orange if nobody has peeled it. (2 PASSIVES)
 16 They took the collection half-way through the meeting.
 17 The police are sure to ask you that question.
 18 Her beauty struck me deeply. (AGENT)
 19 You needn't think your joke took me in. (AGENT)
 20 They should not make the celebration an excuse for bad behaviour.
 21 People generally assume that money brings happiness. (Money . . .)
 22 Let me know if there is anything we should do.
 23 They gave the thief a fair trial and sent him to prison. (2 PASSIVES)
 24 Poverty drove him to desperation.
 25 You must account for every penny.
 26 A new company has taken the business over.
 27 They tell me somebody has shot your uncle. (2 PASSIVES)
 28 Somebody can't have shut the safe properly.
 29 They can't put you in prison if they haven't tried you. (2 PASSIVES)
 30 We'll have to examine you again.
 31 People say tortoises live longer than elephants. (Tortoises . . .)
 32 I should love someone to take me out to dinner. (PASSIVE INFINITIVE)

parently correct grammatically is NEVER seen or heard in modern English; plenty of, a lot of, a great deal of, replace much and many in simple affirmative statements. Much is particularly objectionable in affirmative statements; many is uncommon.

Similarly far (= extent of distance) has a long way; far off (= position at a distance) has a long way off; and far away, far back have a long way away, a long way back in simple affirmative statements.

* * *

(53.1) ● Bearing this in mind, read the following statements in the AFFIRMATIVE:

- 1 He hasn't got much money.
- 2 It wasn't far off.
- 3 You haven't done much.
- 4 They haven't many friends.
- 5 She hasn't given me much.
- 6 We haven't gone far.
- 7 There's not much coffee in this pot.

TOO

Too meaning also can be used only at the end of a phrase. It is more frequently used in the spoken language than also.

* * *

● Read the following sentences, replacing also by too:

- 1 I've also got one like that.
- 2 My friend also speaks German. (2 MEANINGS, 2 INTONATIONS)
- 3 You must also buy yourself a new hat.
- 4 He also gave me one. (2 INTONATIONS, STRESSING he OR me)
- 5 The dog also wants his dinner.
- 6 Make me one also!
- 7 Mary has also gone away.
- 8 My youngest daughter also can swim.
- 9 We've also been there.
- 10 She has two dogs and also a cat.
- 11 I was also in town on Monday.
- 12 Can we also come?
- 13 Have you also read Oliver Twist?
- 14 You must also wash the saucepans.
- 15 He is mad about golf and also tennis.

- 16 Did you also go and see your grandmother?
- 17 I've also had pains in my back.
- 18 The fruit crops are also good this year.
- 19 Can't I also go to the theatre?
- 20 You can't have your cake and also eat it.

JUST AS WELL, JUST AS SOON, RATHER

53.5 Might (just) as well, would just as soon, would rather are three very important forms for expressing preference. They are extremely common in speech, but rarely employed successfully by a foreign student.

Consider the ideas:

'Come at six.' 'I want to come at five.'

The response can be given further nuances:

- (1) I might just as well come at five.
 = It's immaterial to me (as far as I'm concerned);
 Why not at five? – a counter-proposal.

- (2) I'd just as soon come at five.
 = I'd like five equally well, if it makes no difference to you. Unlike (1), this type demands the implication 'I'd just as soon do this as (do) that' (subject to your approval). A weak preference.

- (3) I'd rather come at five.
 = This is what I'd prefer. Stronger preference than (2). All three are useful vehicles for sarcasm.

• • •

- Make three sentences with each of the ideas in brackets: (a) with might (just) as well; (b) with would just as soon (short form); (c) with would rather (short form). It is preferable to go through the exercise with (a), then with (b), then with (c):

- 1 Let's go to the pictures. (stay at home)
- 2 Let's have a cup of tea. (have a glass of hot water)

- 3 Lend him the money. (throw it away)
- 4 You must get up at half past three. (not go to bed)
- 5 The radio is making unintelligible noises. (not listen)
- 6 Take a few of them, they're very cheap. (buy the lot)
- 7 It's rather a long way to walk. (go home on foot)
- 8 Shout for help! (save your (my, our) breath)
- 9 I wonder if we could buy just one to make it a pair? (throw the other one away)
- 10 Here's £50 to give away. (spend it on myself)
- 11 I haven't heard a word you said! (talk to a brick wall)
- 12 Shall I tell him for you? (tell him myself)
- 13 Perhaps we ought to put it in the refrigerator. (eat it all up now)
- 14 Sorry my car's out of order. (walk)
- 15 I'm giving you £5 for your birthday. (have it now)
- 16 I keep asking him for your money. (forget about it)
- 17 I know it's raining, but let's go for a walk. (stay here)
- 18 Shall we leave the dog behind? (take it with us)
- 19 Ask her to do it for you. (do it . . .self)
- 20 Come and meet my father. (talk to you for a bit first)

(Just) as well also has the meaning 'it is advisable (a good thing) that (if) . . .'

It's very cold. It would be as well to take your coat.
 Look at the rain! It's just as well you came when you did.

CERTAINLY AND SURELY

53.6
 Advanced

Certainly takes the same position as the frequency adverbs (Exercise 25.1); has the meaning 'I, etc., know for a fact,' 'it is definite'.

Surely can replace certainly, but is rarely found with this meaning. Coming at the beginning of a sentence, or less frequently at the end, or immediately after the subject if it is a pronoun, it has the meaning: 'I firmly believe, I very much hope, this to be true; it's not certain, but I feel confident it will probably happen.'

You're surely not going out in this rain!
 Surely you're not going out in this rain. (= I should be very surprised if you did.)
 I'm certainly not going out in this rain.
 It's worth going to see, surely. (= I believe it is, don't you?)
 It's certainly worth going to see. (= There is no doubt in my mind.)
 He surely won't forget to bring it. (= I hope not.)
 He'll certainly not forget to bring it. (= I know he won't.)

* * *

(53.6) ● Reconstruct the following sentences, using certainly or surely according to the sense:

- 1 I know he'll be there.
- 2 I expect he'll be there, don't you?
- 3 I doubt very much if he believes you.
- 4 I know he doesn't believe you.
- 5 I can't believe it'll last much longer.
- 6 You haven't forgotten me, have you?
- 7 Of course I haven't.
- 8 I've a strong feeling that's Mr Pubsey over there.
- 9 I'm quite sure that you can't convince me.
- 10 I assure you I'm not going to try.
- 11 I've a strong suspicion I've met you before somewhere.
- 12 Of course I'm not going to tell you!
- 13 I doubt very much whether you want another one, do you?
- 14 It's quite definite I can't buy it at that price.
- 15 You're not going to buy it at that price, are you?
- 16 Of course I've never been drunk!
- 17 I don't believe he lives as far along as this.
- 18 Quite definitely my children are not going out as late as that.
- 19 I've a strong feeling that your room was arranged quite differently last time.
- 20 Do you mean to say he's going to marry the butcher's daughter!
- 21 I'm sure you are mistaken; at least I hope so.
- 22 There is no doubt that she led him on.

- 23 I know his parents will disapprove.
- 24 It is probable that they will be able to dissuade him, don't you think?
- 25 I'm sure they will try.

FAIRLY AND RATHER

53.7 Elementary and Intermediate

The words fairly and rather are both used in English to express 'to a moderate degree', but foreign students frequently use the wrong one.

Fairly is used when the speaker or writer wishes to affirm some positive or pleasant idea; rather is used when the idea is negative or unpleasant. Or we might say that fairly is a step TOWARDS an ideal, but rather is a step AWAY from it; or that fairly is half-way to enough, whereas rather is half-way to too. (See Exercises 38.3 and 38.4.)

So we say a person is 'fairly well' because well is an ideal we strive for; but a person is 'rather ill' because illness is an undesirable state to achieve.

To say 'Mary is rather tall for her age' suggests she is on the way to being 'too tall'. She is taller than we should like, she is ungainly, or she is outgrowing her strength. To say 'Mary is fairly tall for her age' expresses a plain fact, something more pleasant than otherwise. The 'tallness' here is an ideal we approve of.

To sum up:

Fairly is used with a positive or pleasant idea; i.e. we approve of the ideal we are approaching.

Rather is used with a negative or unpleasant idea; i.e. we disapprove of the 'ideal' we are approaching.

Fairly is never used with comparatives

I did it rather better last time.

Fairly is never used with colours, unless the colour is modified by light or dark.

- (a) This one's a fairly light green.
(I think it's light enough for you.)
- (b) This one's a rather light green.
(It won't do for you; you want something darker.)

(Phoneticians please note the rising tail of (a) and sudden fall on light in (b); similarly in all these fairly-rather sentences.)

- (c) Your nose is rather blue.
(but you don't want it to be.)

Notice the alternative word-order with rather:

I've got a rather bad cold.

I've got rather a bad cold.

* * *

- Put either fairly or rather in the blank spaces:
- 1 The last exercise was — easier than I thought it would be, but this one is — more difficult.
 - 2 The sentences all seem too easy for you. Ah! this one seems — difficult.
 - 3 I can't hold it any longer. It's — hot.
 - 4 Have another cup of tea. It's still — hot.

- 5 This room's — big. Haven't you anywhere smaller?
- 6 This room's — big. I think it'll do.
- 7 The straw is — dry. Be careful you don't set light to it.
- 8 This wood is — dry. I think it'll burn all right.
- 9 I'm afraid that box is — small. You won't get more than half of them in.
- 10 That box looks — small. I think it'll easily go in my pocket.
- 11 'This flat looks — tiny for six people.' 'Yes, I suppose you'll want a — large one.' 'At all events I'll need something — bigger than this.'
- 12 I don't think I can buy that. It's — expensive.
- 13 The buses are — full at five o'clock, so come later. You'll find them — empty at about six.
- 14 I'm sorry if the meat is — hard. I'm afraid it's been cooked — more than necessary.
- 15 Mend it with this piece; it seems — hard, and shouldn't break easily.
- 16 I shan't be able to read the whole play in one evening; it's — long.
- 17 You should have a — long dressing-gown to keep your ankles warm.
- 18 I'm afraid I've written it — quickly, but I think you'll find it — correct.
- 19 I can finish it — quickly if you keep quiet for a few minutes.
- 20 I've got a — good memory for names, but I'm — bad on dates.

53.9
Advanced

See Exercises 53.7 and 53.8 for fundamental differences.

Rather as an understatement for very. Sentences like:

I've got some rather good news for you.

That's really rather clever of you.

I must confess I thought she was rather charming.

He showed me some rather fine landscapes by Constable.

obviously do not conform to the fundamental patterns of Exercises 53.7 and 53.8. This use of rather is part of the English love of understatement, a national characteristic that has affected our language idiom in many ways.

It wasn't at all a bad play.
They weren't half glad to be home again.
Similar mistakes are not uncommon.

(and other such double negative ideas)

QUESTION: Would you like another cup of tea?

RESPONSE: Not half!

Well, I wouldn't say no.

I shouldn't object.

Ra-ather! (wave-intonation)

I don't mind (if I do).

This understatement use of rather is a diffident way of expressing very, especially where the Englishman hates to be definite on a subject of a complimentary, eulogistic or emotional nature.

* * *

(53.9)

- Put fairly or rather into the blank spaces:
- 1 Don't you think my friend Maisie is really — pretty?
- 2 Surely it's — obvious that you can't carry more than one at a time.
- 3 Don't whisper to me now, it looks — obvious!
- 4 You must agree that I look — well in this suit.
- 5 I should go and see that film; it's really — good.
- 6 I think I'll buy it. The price seems — reasonable.
- 7 Read this book. I think you'll find it — interesting.
- 8 School teachers generally get — long holidays.
- 9 Your hair is — long, Cyril! Go and get it cut!
- 10 It is — easy to get a secretarial job these days.
- 11 It was — unkind of Cyril to be so rude to you.
- 12 It's really — cheap; quite a bargain, in fact!
- 13 I thought her little girl was — sweet. Didn't you?
- 14 These yellow apples aren't very good, but I think you'll find the red ones — sweet.
- 15 The left shoe is a bit tight, but the other one fits — well.
- 16 That blue hat suits you — well!
- 17 It was — clever of you to do it all by yourself!
- 18 I can't say he's a brilliant student, but he's — intelligent.
- 19 Your little boy seems really — intelligent for his age.

- 20 What's that — remarkable-looking building over there?

TAILPIECE. The correct use of fairly and rather involves a psychological choice rather than a grammatical one. Thus we see from the notes to Exercise 53.7 that we normally expect something to be fairly easy or rather difficult to do. But if our 'ideal' is the difficulty, as in Exercise 53.8, No. 2, it is quite natural to speak of a suitable sentence as fairly difficult and an unsuitable one as rather easy.

54 Phrase Openings

54.1

Intermediate

We include here many of those stock phrases that lead easily into our thoughts. They are commonly followed by an infinitive or a that-clause, and it is a very valuable conversational exercise for more advanced students to be given such an opening and be asked to finish the sentence.

A WORD OF ADVICE TO TEACHERS. In exercises where a student has to make a sentence of his own (as, for example, in this exercise, or freely on opposites or derivatives, etc.), ALWAYS give the next question to the next student to think about. If necessary, keep yourself two students ahead of schedule, but at all costs avoid wasting time.

Examples of phrase openings:

It's good for you to eat plenty of vegetables.

It's wrong for a student to neglect his homework.

It was the fault of the teacher that he didn't understand.

The time has come for us to say goodbye.

He was sometimes heard to swear.

Here are some openings to be completed by intermediate students; hundreds of others can be invented by the teacher when required.

Some useful openings require inversion of subject and verb; in general, this type of opening is more frequently found in writing than in speech.

Examples of more difficult openings:

Only in this way could I manage to see him.

At no time have I ever been more frightened than now.

The essentials of good government are sound administration and honest officials.

We are not so considerate for the feelings of others as we should be.

It's not the words that matter so much as the way you say them.

55 The Comparison Game

55.1 Elementary

A simple free-construction exercise can be made by taking objects of a similar nature and asking the following two questions:

- 1 How is X like Y?
- 2 How does X differ from Y?

The student then makes a few sentences on those points of similarity or difference he can find.

* * *

- Using the following pairs of words, make a few sentences on:

- (1) How is X like Y?
- (2) How does X differ from Y?

56 Prepositions and Adverbial Particles

56.1

Elementary
and
Intermediate

PREPOSITIONS usually come before the words they control. They indicate various relationships between words or phrases, the most usual being those of time, space (position, direction, etc.), and mental or emotional attitudes.

They can also come AFTER the words they govern, notably in questions and in relative clauses.

What can I cut the bread with?

This is the book I was telling you about.

Many verbs get strongly associated with certain prepositions in one of two ways:

- (1) verb and preposition keeping their basic meanings.
- (2) as a compound having an idiomatic meaning (we cannot guess the meaning from the two parts).

TYPE (1) Take the book in your hand and open it at page 4.

He's sitting on a chair and looking out of the window.

He spoke about his holidays.

TYPE (2) I didn't take to him at first. (like)

He took after his father. (resembled)

She set about preparing dinner. (began to prepare)

The ship made for the harbour. (went towards)

Any good dictionary will list, under the verb, these compounds made with prepositions or adverbial particles. Two very useful works containing such idioms are Palmer's Grammar of English Words (Longman) and The Advanced Learner's Dictionary (Oxford).

The following two lists contain the commonest English PREPOSITIONS; all those in LIST (1) should be known to students within their first two years of study.

LIST (1): about, after, along, among, at, before, behind, beneath, between, by, down, for, from, in, in front of, into, like, near, next to, of, off, on, out of, over, past, round, since, through, till (until), to (towards), under, up, with, without.

LIST (2): above, across, against, below, beside, beyond, concerning, despite, except, inside, in spite of, opposite, outside.

- 60 When we get back — our walk, we're going to sit — the fire — our books — half an hour.

56.2 Elementary and Intermediate

ADVERBIAL PARTICLES combine with verbs even more often than prepositions to form idiomatic compounds. Most of them have the same form as their corresponding prepositions, but the following seven are adverbial only and never used as prepositions:

away, back, out; backward(s), downward(s), forward(s), upward(s).

Adverbial particles are most commonly found as part of COMPOUND VERBS (OR PHRASAL VERBS). As with similar compounds made with prepositions, these are of two kinds:

- (1) verb and adverb keeping their own basic meanings:
go in; walk away; come out; pay back, etc.
- (2) combining to give a new idiomatic meaning:
keep on (continue); bring about (cause); give in (yield); take off (leave the ground OR imitate); blow up (explode), etc.

Some of these compounds can be followed by a preposition to make a further combination: go in for (practise for pleasure); come out with (say suddenly); get down to (apply oneself); put up with (suffer, bear), etc.

It isn't always easy for a foreign student to distinguish between a PREPOSITIONAL and an ADVERBIAL compound verb. He probably looks upon (prep.) these little words as annoying mysteries and then looks up (adv.) their meaning in a dictionary. These are the main differences.

A PREPOSITION is closely tied to the (pro)noun it controls.

He looked/ at the boys. He spoke/ to them. He spoke/ about his travels. He looked/ out of the window.

An ADVERB PARTICLE is closely tied to its verb (as if by a hyphen):

Please put-out/ the light.
We blew-up/ the bridge and the rebels gave-in.

WORD-ORDER. Except as indicated in the notes to Exercise 56.1, a PREPOSITION must precede its (pro)noun object. An ADVERB PARTICLE always FOLLOWS a pronoun object. It usually follows the object even when this is a noun, unless the noun-phrase object is a long one, which would leave the verb too far from its particle.

Look the word up in the index.
Look up the word in the index.
Look up all the difficult words and phrases in the index.
(the particle up can only precede such a long object)

The distinct word-orders of PREPOSITION and ADVERB can be seen when the object is a pronoun.

ADVERB PARTICLE: Look the word up.
Look it up.
PREPOSITION: Look up the chimney.
Look up it.

ADVERB PARTICLE: He couldn't get his talk across.
(= manage to communicate)
He couldn't get it across.
PREPOSITION: He couldn't get across the river.
He couldn't get across it.

STRESS. The difference is quite clear in speech. At the end of a phrase a VERB WITH PREPOSITION has a final stress on the VERB:

Give it to the man you 'spoke to.
Who does he 'take after?

At the end of a phrase a VERB WITH ADVERB PARTICLE has a final stress on the ADVERB:

Which word are you going to look 'up?
This is the book he brought 'back, and here's the one he wants to take 'out.

PHRASAL VERBS with prepositions also take their final stress on the adverb when in this position:

We have a lot of troubles to put 'up with.
Chess is a good game to go 'in for.

(56.2)

- Put in suitable PREPOSITIONS OR ADVERB PARTICLES:
- 1 He put — his coat and took the dog — for a walk.
- 2 Run — the corner! Someone is following close — us.
- 3 Look — Cyril! He's got a yellow waistcoat —.
- 4 Do you always get — — 6 o'clock — the morning?

- 6 Please go — the post office and bring — a book — stamps — me.
- 7 I'm fed — — this kind — work.
- 8 It would be bad — you to stay — late — night too often.
- 9 He had to choose — staying — the country and staying — the seaside.
- 10 Maisie has just rung — to ask me to go — — a walk — her — going — bed.
- 11 The London plane takes — — midday.
- 12 They were — war — their neighbours.

- 13 When you grow —, you will be allowed to go —
— yourself — night, but not — then.

— going — bed last night.
- 24 — lack of help the plans fell —.
- 25 Today's examinations have tired me — so I think
I'll turn — early tonight.

NOTE: It is possible for the same verb-adverb compound to have more than one meaning according to context:

This box is heavy; I must put it down. (place on ground)

Shall I put his name down, too? (make note of)

The riot was put down by the police. (suppress)

I should put him down as a student. (reckon, consider)

He said nothing; we put it down to shyness. (attribute)

You can't get through this door with your umbrella up; you'll have to put it down. (shut)

An amusing contrast between preposition and adverb particle is found in this well-known children's riddle:

QUEST. What can go up a chimney down, but can't go down it up?

ANS. An umbrella.

57 Accepted Phrases

It is impossible to give more than a random collection, graded (more according to value than difficulty) into elementary, intermediate or advanced. Any piece of modern reading will have several on every page; any conversation will produce dozens every five minutes. The idioms and sayings of the 'horse of another colour' variety may be useful passive knowledge for more advanced students, but far more useful practical work should first be done on the accepted phrases of everyday English.

The following three exercises are NOT intended to be done as a solid group; they should be split up and done piecemeal at odd times, the various phrases being added to and expanded at will.

Apart from the suggested sentence-making exercise, other work can be done, for example:

Write a continuous passage containing six of the following phrases.

Give an English phrase for [foreign equivalent]

Use the following phrase in your answer to my question [teacher asks question in the answer to which the required phrase can be logically introduced]. This exercise will need careful preparation on the part of the teacher.

Similarly, questions may be asked to ring the changes on a group of five or six idioms.

Here is a simple example worked out in detail for part of an elementary 'conversation' lesson.

The following elementary phrases are learnt:

- (1) He's not back yet.
- (2) Here you are! (for offering things informally),
- (3) Never mind.
- (4) What's he like?
- (5) Have a good time.

Individual students are made to respond with one of these by such questions as the following:

Excuse me, can you lend me a pencil? (2)

I say, I'm going to a party tonight. (5)

I've come to see X, where is he? (1)

I have some news for you. You are having a new teacher next week. (4)

I'm going away for the weekend. (5)

I'm so sorry. I'm afraid I've broken your pencil. (3)

May I speak to your father for a few minutes? (1)

There's a strange man outside (the window). (4)

Have you got a match, please? (2)

Well, I'm afraid I can't think of a sentence for you. (3)

Many of these 'accepted phrases' can be worked into similar stimulated conversations.

28 It was their custom to keep open house on Sundays, and one could always be sure of meeting at least one or two interesting visitors.

29 (a) We're a bit late for lunch, so if the dishes we want are now off the menu, we'll just have to take what's going.

(b) Come home and join me for supper. I don't know what there'll be for us to eat so you'll have to take pot luck.

36 I should word your letter of complaint a little more mildly if I were you, or it'll only put his back up. There's no sense (in) rubbing him up the wrong way if you really want his help in the end.

38 (a) He likes to lord it over his workmates now that he's come into some money from the lottery.

(b) There's no bus at this hour, so we'll just have to foot it all the way back.

(c) If we go on this weekend hunt, we'll have to make do with scratch meals and sleep in a hut in the forest, so I hope you won't mind pigging it for a day or two.

40 There aren't many potatoes left. We'll have to eke them out with bread or macaroni till I can get some more tomorrow.

ANSWER to Exercise 19.4, No. 5: Australia, of course!

58 Appendix on Clauses

THIS book has dealt with only one type of clause (the conditional) in some detail, but exercises on other kinds of subordinate clauses are found under appropriate headings. A few types, notably CAUSE, PURPOSE, RESULT and CONCESSION, are not expressly treated. This appendix will give a practical outline of clauses and the conjunctions that introduce them. In keeping with the spirit of the rest of the book, exercises in this section will be constructive and not analytical.

GENERAL REMARKS

A clause takes its name from its function (i.e. a NOUN CLAUSE behaves like a noun, an ADVERB CLAUSE like an adverb, etc.).

Students who have to analyse English sentences should note that many conjunctions can introduce clauses of more than one type; in fact any one clause is sometimes to be interpreted differently in different sentences. For example, the clause when he left looks like an adverb clause of time, as in the sentence 'The others came when he left.' But we could make it function quite differently:

Can you tell me when he left?	(NOUN: OBJECT)
When he left is still a mystery.	(NOUN: SUBJECT)
Do you remember the day when he left?	(ADJECTIVE)
How could he know the result when he left before the end?	(CAUSE)
They invited him again even when he left once without saying good-bye.	(CONCESSION)

NOUN CLAUSES

NOUN CLAUSE AS OBJECT

The most usual form is the OBJECT-CLAUSE of reported speech. (See Section 51.)

The noun clause of a REPORTED QUESTION can be preceded by a preposition.

It depends on what you want me for.
I am anxious about where he has gone.
It reminds me of when I first went to school.
Don't let's worry about whether¹ we'll be in time.

See Exercise 51.7, etc., for clauses with what, who, which, etc.

REPORTED STATEMENTS are introduced by that, which is only rarely preceded by a preposition. The two principal ways of getting over this difficulty when a preposition is needed are:

(1) Omit the preposition where possible.

proud of I am proud that you have won.
surprised at He was surprised that I knew English.
sorry for We're sorry that you can't come.

This pattern is possible with most other such expressions of feeling, such as: sure of, glad of, angry with, aware of,
¹ If cannot be used here when the interrogative clause is introduced by a preposition; we can use whether only.

afraid of, grateful (thankful) for, anxious for. Many of them can be logically analysed as adverb clauses; e.g. the last two examples above could equally well be called clauses of reason, clauses answering the question Why?

A few prepositions may still be used before the conjunction that, the most usual being except and in.

I forgot everything except that I wanted to go home.
He takes after his father in that he is fond of music.
(RATHER FORMAL)

In this last sentence in that might be considered as a conjunction introducing an adverb clause of manner, a clause answering the question How? (See under ADVERB CLAUSES, D.)

Note the expression I don't care (for), which has two meanings:

I don't care for what she does. (I don't like)
I don't care what she does. (I'm indifferent)

(2) Use an introductory it, this or the fact before the conjunction that.

You can depend on it that he won't be pleased.
I'll see to it that you get home all right.
It all amounts to this, that you have been cheated.
We must allow for the fact that she doesn't hear well.

NOUN CLAUSE AS SUBJECT

That he has gone for good is now quite certain.
What you want is a cup of tea.
(A cup of tea is what you want.)
Whoever finishes first gets a prize.

The first type above is better expressed with an introductory it: It is now quite certain that . . .

58.1 ● Say these sentences in a more natural way, using it as the first word.

- 1 That you are late is a pity.
- 2 How useful these sentences are is quite clear.
- 3 That you have come early is a good thing.
- 4 That you lost your way is unfortunate.
- 5 Whether he will come at all is doubtful.
- 6 Where he went or where he came from is still not known.

- 7 That we should leave without paying is quite out of the question.
 - 8 How he knew my name is a mystery to me.
 - 9 That we didn't get back before midnight is quite true.
 - 10 How tea is made is important for everyone to know.
 - 11 What you ought to say is difficult to suggest.
 - 12 That we haven't met somewhere before seems strange.
 - 13 That such a person ever existed must first be proved.
 - 14 When he is coming back hasn't yet been decided.
 - 15 What you look like is not important, but how you behave (is).
- See also Section 50 on it is and there is (are), etc.

ADVERB CLAUSES

A PLACE

Chief conjunctions: where (and its derivatives), as.

Go where you like!

Put it back where you found it.

She shall have music wherever she goes.

(CHILDREN'S RHYME)

Wherever (it was) possible, they camped for the night.

It's on your right as you face the station.

B TIME

Chief conjunctions: when (and its derivatives), as soon as (ever), as long as (ever), until (till), before, after, by the time, while (whilst), as, now (that), once, since; and the compound forms no sooner . . . than; scarcely (hardly) . . . when (before); not long (an hour, a minute, far, etc.) . . . when (before).

Let me know when you've finished. (Can also be NOUN CLAUSE)

Come back as soon as (ever) you can.

You can stay as long as you want to.

Wait till (until) the light changes to green.

Look before you leap.

After he had had supper he went to bed.

I'll have finished by the time you get back.

Shoes repaired while you wait.

I met him as he was coming out of school.

Now you (come to) mention it, I suppose we must have met somewhere before.

You'll find the way all right once you get to the station.

She hasn't written since she went away. (Main verb always PERFECT TENSE)

¹He had no sooner arrived than he demanded a meal.

¹He had scarcely left the house before we missed the jewels.

They hadn't gone very far when they met an old man.

For FUTURE TIME sentences see Exercises 28.17 and 28.21.

- 58.2 ● Join each of the clauses in (A) to the appropriate clause of time or place in (B):

A	B
1. Come again	as long as is necessary
2. Wait	by the time they got back
3. He went out again	just as he was ringing the bell
4. They must go home
5. There was nothing left	as soon as you can
6. He repaired our shoes for us	after he had finished his dinner
7. I opened the door	every time I meet her
8. I haven't heard from you	since you went to live in London
9. She asks after you	the moment he spoke
10. I knew who it was	before they get too tired while we waited.

C CONTRAST

Certain conjunctions of place and time are now used to introduce a contrasting clause, very like the clauses of concession (see section J below).

I wanted to go on, whereas my friend wanted to turn back.

Now there is nothing but desert, where there used to be a fertile plain.

¹ Also with inversion: No sooner had he . . . , etc.

At the same time that one side was disarming, the other was preparing for war.

While one half of the town was in ruins, the other half was almost intact.

D MANNER

Chief conjunctions: as, how, in that.

He did as I told him.

You may finish it how you like.

We were at a disadvantage in that they outnumbered us two to one. (RATHER FORMAL)

The list is as follows. (= as it follows)

The journey, as I recall it, was long and tedious.

Like. Except in formal English, like is commonly used in place of the conjunction as. It is still frowned upon by purists, but has persisted in the popular language, as well as in the informal speech of those who would claim to know better, for centuries. The conjunction as serves many purposes, and is therefore a word of vague meaning; the earlier like as (= in the same way as) probably gave rise to the popular use of like by itself in clauses of that type. For this reason we feel that sentences like the following are quite good English, despite the die-hard theorists:

She swims like I do; badly.

You don't know Tom like I do.

We don't use that form in English, like they do in French.

They may beat us again, like they did in 1970.

The stones bounced harmlessly off him like water (does) off a duck's back.

Sink like a stone (does); drink like a fish; run like a hare, etc.

(These last may be considered as preposition phrases – in the manner of a stone, etc. – but it is logical to supply a verb, since it is the verb that is being compared.)

These sentences, though still not approved of in 'examination English', are certainly acceptable informal English. Notice that in each case there is an implied repetition of the verb: X does something in the same way that Y does it. Where this condition does not hold, we feel that like cannot be used, even colloquially. In the following examples we can only use as.

I'll do as you tell me.

It's only half a mile, as the crow flies.

Don't trouble to change; come just as you are.
 You'd better write as I suggest.
 (Compare this with: Write it like I do, in capital letters.)

Another kind of sentence we often meet is one of the type:

I want a new silk dress like my friend Mary has.
 It looks like a clause introduced by like; but it can be shown to be a suppressed relative clause by adding the one that after like.

E DEGREE (positive, also extent or amount)

Chief conjunctions: as; as . . . as; not so (as) . . . as.
 The subordinate clause compares something to the main clause in equal degree. The recommended distinction 'as good as he is' and 'not so good as he is' is not in fact strictly kept, probably because of the similar origins of so and as. The form not as good as he is is quite acceptable English.

Life is as pleasant as you make it.

Nothing is so (as) bad as you think it is.

Nothing upset me so* much as that he had quite forgotten me.

(* Here so is stressed; as cannot take stress, and so is used when we want to emphasize the intensity of the degree by means of speech stress. It should not be confused with so introducing a RESULT clause, as in L below.)

This morning I'm as well as (I have) ever (been).

Mend it as best you can. (= as well as possible)

F DEGREE (proportionate, or parallel)

Chief conjunctions: according as (to), in proportion as, the . . . the.

The quicker we walk, the sooner we shall get there.
 We shall get there earlier or later according as we walk quicker or slower. Not used colloquially.
 You'll get paid (more or less) according to how you work.

A person isn't always paid according as he works.

. . . according to how he works.

. . . in proportion as he works.

. . . in proportion to how he works.

The more (we are together), the merrier (we shall be).

G DEGREE (comparative)

Chief conjunction: than.

She is much older than she looks.

We arrived sooner than we thought.

She was more intelligent than (she was) pretty.

This morning I'm better than (I have) ever (been).

Because of the tendency mentioned in the notes to Exercises 6.3 and 6.4, one commonly hears:

You're better than me; he's happier than her, etc.

As a predicate after a verb of the be type there is no real objection to using this disjunctive or separated pronoun form (like the French lui, moi), but students should note that it is still held to be a popular pattern not recommended for formal writing, and that it must NOT be used with TRANSITIVE verbs for fear of confusion:

I like her better than (I like) him.

I like her better than you (do).

H DEGREE (restriction)

Chief conjunctions: as, so (as) long as, so (as) far as, in so far as, for all (anything) [that], (not) that.

You can stay here, so long as you are quiet.

You can stay here, so (as) far as I'm concerned.

You can stay here, for all I know (care).

Has he stayed here before? – Not that I know of.

Has he stayed here before? – Not so far as I know.

I CAUSE

Chief conjunctions: because, since, as, when, seeing (that), for.

I can't go, because I have no ticket.

Since we are early, let's have a drink first.

As you have been here before, you'd better lead the way.

We must finish now, for it's nearly bedtime. (See the note below.)

You can't expect him to know the story when he hasn't read it.

You can't expect him to know the story seeing (that) he hasn't read it.

For is really a co-ordinating conjunction, used to introduce a natural reason or obvious fact. It is included above because its meaning is approximately that of the subordinating conjunction since. It is not very common in informal speech.

He is not allowed to smoke, for he is only a boy.

Since also implies that the reason is obvious or natural. A since-clause usually precedes the main clause; there is more interest in the main clause for the speaker or hearer than in the reason introduced by since.

Since he is only a boy, he is not allowed to smoke.

As also usually comes first in the sentence, and (like since) also throws the speaker's emphasis on to the main clause. The reason introduced by as is not necessarily obvious or natural.

As I'm very busy these days, I shan't be able to take my usual holiday.

Because seldom comes first in a sentence. There is more interest in the reason introduced by because than in the main clause.

I can't come just now, because I'm busy writing a book.

A common meaning of a clause beginning or else is 'because otherwise'.

Come early, or else you won't find a seat.

= Come early, because you won't find a seat if you don't.

J CONCESSION (and contrast)

Chief conjunctions: although, (even) though, (even) if, as, whoever, etc., no matter who (when, etc.).

(A)though it is late, we'll stay a little longer.

Late though it is, we'll stay a little longer.

Bad as things are, we mustn't give up hope.

Even if (though) things are bad, we ...

However bad things are, we ...

No matter how bad things are, we ...

I shouldn't worry if he has forgotten you. (= even though)

I'll buy one whatever it costs (may cost).

K PURPOSE

Chief conjunctions: that, in order that, so (that), lest, for fear (that), in case.

The words may, might, shall, should commonly occur with the verb after these conjunctions. Might and should must be used when the verb of the main clause is in a past tense. That can be omitted wherever it occurs between brackets in this section.

They rented the top floor that they might have a good view.

(But the simple that-clause is not much used to express purpose in modern English.)

They have arrived early so that (in order that) they may (shall) not miss the overture. (Literary style.)

They've come early so (that) they won't miss the overture. (Good spoken English style.)

They arrived early so that (in order that) they might (should) not miss the overture. (Literary style.)

They came early so (that) they wouldn't miss the overture. (Good spoken English style.)

Make a note of it so (that) you don't (shan't) forget.

Make a note of it lest you (may, might, should) forget. (Literary.)

Make a note of it in case you forget. (Good colloquial.)

We didn't move lest we should (might) wake him up. (Literary.)

We didn't move for fear (that) we should (might) wake him up. (Literary - for fear (that) is mainly used with a negative main clause.)

We didn't move in case we woke him up. (Good colloquial.)

L RESULT

Chief conjunctions: that, so (that), so (such) . . . that; but that (negative).

RESULT clauses are like an inversion of clauses of CAUSE. The so that introducing a clause of PURPOSE can always be replaced by in order that; we cannot do this with so that introducing a clause of RESULT. We can, however, reverse the clauses in such a sentence, changing the main clause into one of CAUSE (introduced by as, since or because).

She bought a book so (that) she might learn English. (PURPOSE)

She bought a book in order that she might learn English.

She bought a good book, so (that) she learnt English well. (RESULT)

She bought so good a book that she learnt English well. (Literary)

She bought such a good book that she learnt English well.

Notice that we sometimes find sentences that can be interpreted either way. In the spoken language the RESULT sentence would be heard with two phrases of FALLING INTONATION, the PURPOSE sentence with RISING INTONATION ON THE MAIN CLAUSE.

PURPOSE: I wrote clearly so (that) anyone could read it. (in order that)

RESULT: I wrote clearly, so (that) anyone could read it. (because I wrote clearly)

Examples of clauses of RESULT:

Are you deaf that you didn't hear me?

= Did you fail to hear me because you are deaf?

It was quite windy, so (that) we had to button our coats up.

We were so hungry (that) we couldn't wait for knives and forks.

It's such a good story (that) I'll never forget it.

It's so good a story (that) I'll never forget it. (Literary)

I shall never be so tired but that (but what) I shall be able to write to you. (Literary style only)

I shall never be so tired that I shan't be able to write to you.

It never rains but it pours. (Old proverb)

= Once it starts to rain, it rains hard: troubles multiply.

58.3 ● Complete the following sentences of purpose or result:

- 1 He was so kind (that) . . .
- 2 Come a little nearer so that . . .
- 3 I'll give you some money in case . . .
- 4 He ran so quickly (that) . . .
- 5 They live such a long way away (that) . . .
- 6 We mustn't make a noise for fear . . .
- 7 He hurried back in order that . . .
- 8 He didn't shout lest . . .
- 9 She was so lazy (that) . . .
- 10 I'm so tired (that) . . .

- 11 (You'd) better buy one now in case . . .
- 12 I've ordered a deep-freeze so (that) . . .
- 13 It was such a dull party (that) . . .
- 14 He hid behind the door in order that . . .
- 15 I didn't come any earlier for fear . . .

58.4

Here are seven short sentences or clauses:

- a Just sit where you like.
- b No, keep it as long as you wish.
- c Just do as I tell you.
- d Well, it's not so bad as I thought.
- e The earlier, the better.
- f In case it gets broken.
- g Well, fasten them like I do. (See note in D above.)

- Use one of the above as a response to each of the remarks below. The teacher should make the remark, and the student choose one of the above seven phrases as a suitable response to it.

- 1 Which is my place?
- 2 I expect you found a lot of mistakes in my homework.
- 3 Why are you wrapping the vase in a cloth?
- 4 Let's see if we can start before breakfast, shall we?
- 5 You don't mind my borrowing this, I hope?
- 6 That's a dull grammar you're reading, isn't it?
- 7 My skis are slipping.
- 8 Why do you keep your pen in your inside pocket?
- 9 My entrance ticket hasn't (got) a number on it.
- 10 Would you like me to bring the book back next week?
- 11 My papers won't stay in the folder.
- 12 What are you putting the microscope away for?
- 13 I hope I don't do anything to displease the visitors.
- 14 I hear you've hurt your finger badly.
- 15 What about leaving this dull party before the end?
